

C. CRISPI SALLUSTII

DE

CATILINAE CONJURATIONE

BELLOQUE JUGURTHINO

HISTORIAE.

ANIMADVERSIONIBUS ILLUSTRAVIT

CAROLUS ANTHON, LL.D.

LIT. GRAEC. ET LAT. IN COLL. COL. N. E. PROF. JAHUS.

EDITIO QUINTA.

ACCEDUNT NOTULAE QUAEDAM ET QUAESTIONES,

CURA

JACOBI BOYD, LL.D.

LONDON:

PRINTED FOR THOMAS TEGG & SON, CHEAPSIDE;

WISE, TEGG & CO. DUBLIN;

AND JAMES & SAMUEL AUGUSTUS TEGG, SYDNEY, AUSTRALIA.

MDCCCXXXIV.

Printed by Walker & Greig, Edinburgh.

ADVERTISEMENT.

In this reprint of "Anthon's Sallust," the Notes, which, in the American Edition, were appended to the text, have been transferred to the foot of their respective pages; translations have been introduced, for the benefit of junior students, of the principal quotations; Examination Questions have been added, with the view of rendering more available the stores of geographical, historical, and critical information which the learned Editor has accumulated in illustration of his Author; in a few instances, where a mere reference to Adam's Antiquities was given, the information desiderated has been supplied in the form of an Appendix; and the labours of the press have been superintended with much care.

The original Work, which first appeared in New York in 1829, has already passed through four editions, and stands in no need of our commendation. It is humbly hoped that the present edition, with the alterations and additions we have specified, may, to some at least, appear an improvement on its predecessors.

J. B.

HIGH SCHOOL, EDINBURGH,
1834.

LIFE AND WRITINGS

OF

SALLUST.*

SALLUST has been generally considered as the first among the Romans who merited the title of historian. This celebrated writer was born at Amiternum, in the territory of the Sabines, in the year of Rome 668. He received his education in the latter city, and, in his early youth, appears to have been desirous to devote himself to literary pursuits. But it was not easy for one residing in the capital to escape the contagious desire of military or political distinction. He obtained the situation of Quaestor, which entitled him to a seat in the Senate, at the age of twenty-seven; and about six years afterwards he was elected Tribune of the Commons. While in this office, he attached himself to the fortunes of Caesar, and, along with one of his colleagues, conducted the prosecution against Milo for the murder of Clodius. In the year of the city 704 he was excluded from the Senate, on the pretext of immoral conduct, but more probably from the violence of the patrician party, to which he was opposed. Aulus Gellius, on the authority of Varro's treatise, Pius aut de Pace, informs us that he incurred this disgrace in consequence of an intrigue with Fausta, the wife of Milo, who caused him to be scourged by his slaves.† It has been doubted, however, by modern critics, whether it was the historian Sallust who was thus punished, or his nephew Crispus Sallustius, to whom Horace has addressed the second ode of the second book. It seems indeed unlikely, that, in such a corrupt age, an amour with a woman of Fausta's abandoned character should have been the real cause of his expulsion from the Senate. After undergoing this ignominy, which, for the present, baffled all his hopes of preferment, he quitted Rome, and joined his patron, Caesar, in Gaul. He continued to follow the fortunes of that commander, and, in particular, bore a share in the expedition to Africa, where the scattered remains of Pompey's party had united. That region being finally subdued, Sallust was left by Caesar as Praetor of Numidia; and about the same time married Terentia, the divorced wife of Cicero. He remained only a year in his government; but during that period enriched himself by despoiling the province. On his return to Rome, he was accused by the Numidians, whom he had plundered, but escaped with impunity by means of the protection of Caesar, and was quietly permitted to betake himself to a luxurious retirement with his ill-gotten wealth. He chose for his favourite retreats a villa at Tibur, which had belonged to Caesar, and a magnificent palace, which he built in the suburbs of Rome, surrounded by delightful pleasure-ground, afterwards well known and celebrated by the name of the Gardens of Sallust. One front of this splendid mansion faced the street, where he constructed a spacious market-place, in which every article of luxury was sold in abundance. The other front looked to the gardens, which were contiguous to those of Lucullus, and occupied the extremity of the Viminal and Pincian hills. In them every beauty of nature, and every embellishment of art that could delight or gratify the senses, seem to have been assembled. Umbrageous walks, open parterres, and cool porticos, displayed their various attractions. Amidst shrubs and flowers of every hue and odour, interspersed with statues of the most exquisite workmanship, pure streams of water preserved the verdure of the earth and the temperature of the air; and while, on the one hand, the distant prospect caught the eye, on the other, the close retreat invited to repose or meditation. These gardens included within their precincts the most magnificent baths, a temple to Venus, and a circus, which Sallust repaired and ornamented. Possessed of such attractions, the Sallustian palace and gardens became, after the death of their original proprietor, the residence of successive emperors. Augustus chose them as the scene of his most sumptuous entertainments. The taste of Vespasian preferred them to the palace of the Caesars. Even the virtuous Nerva, and stern Aurelian, were so attracted by their beauty, that, while at Rome, they were their constant abode. "The palace," says Eustace, "was consumed by fire on the fatal night when Alaric entered the city. The temple, of singular beauty, sacred to Venus, was discovered about the middle of the sixteenth century in opening the grounds of a garden, and was destroyed for the sake of the materials. Of the circus little remains, but masses of walls that merely indicate its site; while statues and marbles, found occasionally, continue to furnish proofs of its former magnificence." Many exquisite statues and pictures have been found on the same spot; but these may have been placed there by the magnificence of the imperial occupiers, and not of the original proprietor.

* Dunlop's Roman Literature, vol. ii. p. 143. seqq. Lond. ed.

† Noct. Att. 17, 18.

In these gardens, or his villa at Tibur, Sallust passed the concluding years of his life, dividing his time between literary avocations and the society of his friends—among whom he numbered Lucullus, Messala, and Cornelius Nepos.

Such being his friends and studies, it seems highly improbable that he indulged in that excessive libertinism which has been attributed to him, on the erroneous supposition that he was the Sallust mentioned by Horace in the first book of his Satires. The subject of Sallust's character is one which has excited some investigation and interest, and on which very different opinions have been formed. That he was a man of loose morals is evident; and it cannot be denied that he rapaciously plundered his province, like most Roman governors of the day. But it seems doubtful if he was that monster of iniquity he has been sometimes represented. He was extremely unfortunate in the first permanent notice taken of his character by his contemporaries. The decided enemy of Pompey and his faction, he had said of that celebrated chief, in his General History, that he was a man "oris proli, animo inverecundo." Lenaeus, the freedman of Pompey, avenged his master, by the most virulent abuse of his enemy,* in a work which should rather be regarded as a frantic satire than an historical document. Of the injustice which he has done to the Life of the historian, we may in some degree judge from what he says of him as an author. He calls him, as we farther learn from Suetonius, "Nebulonem vita scriptisque monstrorum; praeterea priscorum Catonisque ineruditissimum furem." The Life of Sallust, by Asconius Pedianus, which was written in the age of Augustus, and might have acted, at the present day, as a corrective, or palliative, of the unfavourable impression produced by this injurious libel, has unfortunately perished; and the next work on the subject now extant, is a professed rhetorical declamation against the character of Sallust, which was given to the world in the name of Cicero, but was not written till long after the death of that orator, and is now generally assigned by critics to a rhetorician in the reign of Claudius, called Porcius Latro. The calumnies invented or exaggerated by Lenaeus, and propagated in the scholastic theme of Porcius Latro, have been adopted by Le Clerc, professor of Hebrew at Amsterdam, and by Professor Meisner, of Prague, in their respective accounts of the Life of Sallust. His character has received more justice from the prefatory Memoir and Notes of De Brosses, his French translator, and from the researches of Wieland in Germany.

* Suetonius, De Grammaticis.

From what is known of Fabius Pictor, and his immediate successors, it must be apparent, that the art of historic composition at Rome was in the lowest state, and that Sallust had no model to imitate among the writers of his own country. He therefore naturally recurred to the productions of the Greek historians. The native exuberance, and loquacious familiarity of Herodotus, were not adapted to his taste; and simplicity, such as that of Xenophon, is, of all things, the most difficult to attain: he therefore chiefly emulated Thucydides, and attempted to transplant into his own language the vigour and conciseness of the Greek historian; but the strict imitation with which he followed him, has gone far to lessen the effect of his own original genius.

The first work of Sallust was the Conspiracy of Catiline. There exists, however, some doubt as to the precise period of its composition. The general opinion is, that it was written immediately after the author went out of office as Tribune of the Commons, that is, A.U.C. 703. And the composition of the Jugurthine War, as well as of his General History, are fixed by Le Clerc between that period and his appointment to the Praetorship of Numidia. But others have supposed that they were all written during the space which intervened between his return from Numidia in 709, and his death, which happened in 718, four years previous to the battle of Actium. It is maintained by the supporters of this last idea, that he was too much engaged in political tumults previous to his administration of Numidia, to have leisure for such important compositions;—that, in the introduction to Catiline's Conspiracy, he talks of himself as withdrawn from public affairs, and refutes accusations of his voluptuous life, which were only applicable to this period;—and that, while instituting the comparison between Caesar and Cato, he speaks of the existence and competition of these celebrated opponents as things that had passed over: “Sed mea memoria, ingenti virtute, diversis moribus, fuere viri duo, Marcus Cato et Caius Caesar.” On this passage, too, Gibbon in particular argues, that such a flatterer and party-tool as Sallust would not, during the life of Caesar, have put Cato so much on a level with him in the comparison. De Brosses agrees with Le Clerc in thinking, that the Conspiracy of Catiline at least must have been written immediately after 703; as he would not, after his marriage with Terentia, have commemorated the disgrace of her sister, who, it seems, was the vestal virgin whose intrigue with Catiline is recorded by Sallust. But whatever may be the case as to Catiline's Conspiracy, it is quite clear that the Jugurthine War was written subsequently to the author's residence in Numidia, which evidently suggested to him this theme, and afforded him the means of collecting the information necessary for completing his work.

The subjects chosen by Sallust form two of the most important and prominent topics in the history of Rome. The periods, indeed, which he describes, were painful, but they were interesting. Full of conspiracies, usurpations, and civil wars, they chiefly exhibit the mutual rage and iniquity of imbibited factions, furious struggles between the patricians and plebeians, open corruption in the senate, venality in the courts of justice, and rapine in the provinces. This state of things, so forcibly painted by Sallust, produced the conspiracy, and even in some degree created the character, of Catiline. But it was the oppressive debts of individuals, the temper of Sylla's soldiers, and the absence of Pompey with his army, which gave a possibility, and even prospect of success, to a plot which affected the vital existence of the commonwealth; and which, although arrested in its commencement, was one of those violent shocks which hasten the fall of a state.

The History of the Jugurthine War, if not so important or menacing to the vital interests and immediate safety of Rome, exhibits a more extensive field of action, and a greater theatre of war. No prince, except Mithridates, gave so much employment to the arms of the Romans. In the course of no war in which they had ever been engaged, not even the second Carthaginian war, were the people more desponding, and in none were they more elated with ultimate success. Nothing can be more interesting than the accounts of the vicissitudes of this contest. The endless resources and hair-breadth escapes of Jugurtha—his levity, his fickle and faithless disposition, contrasted with the perseverance and prudence of the Roman commander Metellus, are all described in a manner the most vivid and picturesque.

Sallust had attained the age of twenty-two when the conspiracy of Catiline broke out, and was an eye-witness of the whole proceedings. He had, therefore, sufficient opportunity of recording with accuracy and truth the progress and termination of the conspiracy. Sallust has certainly acquired the praise of a veracious historian, and I do not know that he has been detected in falsifying any fact within the sphere of his knowledge. Indeed, there are few historical compositions of which the truth can be proved on such evidence as the conspiracy of Catiline. The facts detailed in the orations of Cicero, though differing in some minute particulars, coincide in every thing of importance, and highly contribute to illustrate and verify the work of our historian. But Sallust lived too near the period of which he treated, and was too much engaged in the political tumults of the day, to give a faithful account, unbiassed by animosity or predilection; he could not have raised himself above all hopes, and fears, and prejudices, and therefore could not in all their extent have fulfilled the duties of an impartial writer. A contemporary historian of such turbulent times would be apt to exaggerate through adulation, or conceal through fear; to instil the precepts, not of the philosopher, but of the partisan, and colour facts into harmony with his own system of patriotism or friendship. An obsequious follower of Caesar, he has been accused of a want of candour in varnishing over the views of his patron; yet I have never been able to persuade myself that Caesar was deeply engaged in the conspiracy of Catiline, or that a person of his prudence should have leagued with such rash associates, or followed so desperate an adventurer. But the chief objection urged against his impartiality, is the feeble and apparently reluctant commendation he bestows on Cicero, who is now acknowledged to have been the principal actor in detecting and frustrating the conspiracy. Though fond of displaying his talents in drawing characters, he exercises none of it on Cicero, whom he merely terms "homo egregius et optimus consul," which was but cold applause for one who had saved the commonwealth. It is true, that, in the early part of the history, praise, though sparingly bestowed, is not absolutely withheld. The election of Cicero to the consulship is fairly attributed to the high opinion entertained of his talents and capacity, which overcame the disadvantages of his obscure birth. The mode adopted of gaining over one of the accomplices, and for fixing his own wavering and disaffected colleague; the dexterity manifested in seizing the Allobrogian deputies with the letters, and the irresistible effect produced by confronting them with the conspirators, are attributed exclusively to Cicero. It is in the conclusion of the business that the historian withdraws from him his due share of applause, and contrives to eclipse him by always interposing the character of Cato, though it could not be unknown to any witness of those transactions, that Cato himself, and other senators, publicly hailed the consul as the Father of his country; and that a public thanksgiving to the gods was decreed in his name, for having preserved the city from conflagration, and the citizens from massacre. This omission, which may have originated partly in enmity, and partly in disgust at the ill-disguised vanity of the consul, has in all times been regarded as the chief defect, and even stain, in the history of the Catilinarian conspiracy.

Although not an eye-witness of the war with Jugurtha, Sallust's situation as Praetor of Numidia, which suggested the composition, was favourable to the authority of the work, by affording opportunity of collecting materials, and procuring information. He examined into the different accounts, written as well as traditionary, concerning the history of Africa, particularly the documents preserved in the archives of King Hiempsal, which he caused to be translated for his own use, and which proved peculiarly serviceable in the detailed account which he has given of the inhabitants of Africa. In this history he has been accused of showing an undue partiality towards the character of Marius; and of giving, for the sake of his favourite leader, an unfair account of the massacre at Vacca. But he appears to me to do even more than ample justice to Metellus, as he represents the war as almost finished by him previous to the arrival of Marius, though it was, in fact, far from being concluded.

Veracity and fidelity are the chief, and indeed the indispensable duties of an historian. Of all the ornaments of historic composition, it derives its chief embellishment from a graceful and perspicuous style. That of the earlier annalists was inelegant and jejune, but it came to be considered, in the progress of history, as a matter of primary importance. It is unfortunate, perhaps, that so much value was at length attached to it, since the ancient historians seldom gave their authorities, and considered the merit of history as consisting in fine writing more than in an accurate detail of facts. Sallust evidently regarded a fine style as one of the chief merits of an historical work. The style on which he took so much pains, was carefully formed on that of Thucydides, whose manner of writing was in a great measure original, and, till the time of Sallust, peculiar to himself. The Roman has wonderfully succeeded in imitating the vigour and conciseness of the Greek historian, and infusing into his composition something of that dignified austerity which distinguishes the works of his great model: but when I say that Sallust has imitated the conciseness of Thucydides, I mean the rapid and compressed manner in which his narrative is conducted; in short, brevity of idea rather than of language. For Thucydides, although he brings forward only the principal idea, and discards what is collateral, yet frequently employs long and involved periods. Sallust, on the other hand, is abrupt and sententious, and is generally considered as having carried this sort of brevity to a vicious excess. The use of copulatives, either for the purpose of connecting his sentences with each other, or uniting the clauses of the same sentence, is in a great measure rejected. This produces a monotonous effect, and a total want of that flow and variety which is the principal charm of the historic period. Seneca accordingly (Epist. 114.) talks of the “amputatae sententiae, et verba ante expectatum cadentia,” which the practice of Sallust had rendered fashionable. Lord Monboddo calls his style incoherent, and declares that there is not one of his short and uniform sentences which deserves the name of a period; so that, supposing each sentence were in itself beautiful, there is not variety enough to constitute fine writing. It was, perhaps, partly in imitation of Thucydides, that Sallust introduced into his history a number of words almost considered as obsolete, and which were selected from the works of the older authors of Rome, particularly Cato the censor. It is on this point he has been chiefly attacked by Pollio, in his letters to Plancus. He has also been taxed with the opposite vice, of coining new words, and introducing Greek idioms; but the severity of judgment which led him to imitate the ancient and austere dignity of style, made him reject those sparkling ornaments of composition which were beginning to infect the Roman taste, in consequence of the increasing popularity of the rhetorical schools of declamation, and the more frequent intercourse with Asia. On the whole, in the style of Sallust, there is too much appearance of study, and a want of that graceful ease, which is generally the effect of art, but in which art is nowhere discovered.

Of all the departments of history, the delineation of character is the most trying to the temper and impartiality of the writer, more especially where he has been contemporary with the individuals he portrays, and in some degree engaged in the transactions he records. Five or six of the characters drawn by Sallust have in all ages been regarded as masterpieces. He has seized the delicate shades, as well as the prominent features, and thrown over them the most lively and appropriate colouring. Those of the two principal actors in his tragic histories are forcibly given, and prepare us for the incidents which follow. The portrait drawn of Catiline conveys a lively notion of his mind and person,—his profligate and untameable spirit, his infinite resources, unwearied application, and prevailing address. We behold, as it were, before us, the deadly paleness of his countenance, his ghastly eye, his unequal troubled step, and the distraction of his whole appearance, strongly indicating the restless horror of a guilty conscience. I think, however, it might have been instructive and interesting, if we had seen something more of the atrocities of the early life of this chief conspirator. The notice also of the other conspirators is too brief, and there is too little discrimination of their characters. The parallel drawn between Cato and Caesar is one of the most celebrated passages in the history of the Conspiracy. Of both these famed opponents we are presented with favourable likenesses. Their defects are thrown into the shade; and the bright qualities of each different species by which they were distinguished are contrasted, for the purpose of showing the various qualities by which men arrive at eminence.

The introductory sketch of the genius and manners of Jugurtha is no less able and spirited than the character of Catiline. The most singular part of his character was the mixture of boldness and irresolution which it combined; but the lesson we receive from it lies in the miseries of suspicion and remorse, which he had created for himself by his atrocities, and which rendered him as wretched on the throne, or at the head of his army, as in the dungeon in which he ended his existence. The portraits of the other principal characters who figured in the Jugurthine War, are also well brought out. That of Marius, in particular, is happily touched. His insatiable ambition is artfully disguised under the mask of patriotism,—his cupidity and avarice are concealed under that of martial simplicity and hardihood; but, though we know from his subsequent career the hypocrisy of his pretensions, the character of Marius is presented to us in a more favourable light than that in which it can be viewed on a survey of his whole life. We see the blunt and gallant soldier, and not that savage whose innate cruelty of soul was just about to burst forth for the destruction of his countrymen. In drawing the portrait of Sylla, the memorable rival of Marius, the historian represents him also such as he appeared at that period, not such as he afterwards proved himself to be. We behold him with pleasure as an accomplished and subtle commander, eloquent in speech, and versatile in resources; but there is no trace of the cold-blooded assassin, the tyrant, buffoon, and usurper.

History, in its original state, was confined to narrative; the reader being left to form his own reflections on the deeds or events recorded. The historic art, however, conveys not complete satisfaction, unless these actions be connected with their causes—the political springs, or private passions, in which they originated. It is the business, therefore, of the historian, to apply the conclusions of the politician in explaining the causes and effects of the transactions he relates. These transactions the author must receive from authentic monuments or records, but the remarks deduced from them must be the offspring of his own ingenuity. The reflections with which Sallust introduces his narrative, and those he draws from it, are so just and numerous, that he has by some been considered the father of philosophic history. It must always, however, be remembered, that the proper subject of history is the detail of national transactions,—that whatever forms not a part of the narrative is episodical, and therefore improper, if it be too long, and do not grow naturally out of the subject. Now, some of the political and moral digressions of Sallust are neither very immediately connected with his subject, nor very obviously suggested by the narration. The discursive nature and inordinate length of the introduction to his histories have been strongly objected to. The first four sections of Catiline's Conspiracy have indeed little relation to that topic: they might as well have been prefixed to any other history, and much better to a moral or philosophic treatise. In fact, a considerable part of them, descanting on the fleeting nature of wealth and beauty, and all such adventitious possessions, are borrowed from the second oration of Isocrates. Perhaps the eight following sections are also disproportioned to the length of the history; but the preliminary essay they contain, on the degradation of Roman manners and decline of virtue, is not an unsuitable introduction to the conspiracy, as it was this corruption of morals which gave birth to it, and bestowed on it a chance of success. The preface to the Jugurthine War has much less relation to the subject which it is intended to introduce. The author discourses at large on his favourite topic, the superiority of mental endowments over corporeal advantages, and the beauty of virtue and genius. He contrasts a life of listless indolence with one of honourable activity; and, finally, descants on the task of the historian as a suitable exercise for the highest faculties of the mind.

Besides the Conspiracy of Catiline and the Jugurthine War, which have been preserved entire, and from which our estimate of the merits of Sallust must be chiefly formed, he was author of a civil and military history of the republic, in five books, entitled Historia Rerum in Republica Romana Gestarum. This work was the mature fruit of the genius of Sallust, having been the last he composed, and is inscribed to Lucullus, the son of the celebrated commander of that name. It included, properly speaking, only a period of thirteen years,—extending from the resignation of the dictatorship by Sylla, till the promulgation of the Manilian Law, by which Pompey was invested with authority equal to that which Sylla had relinquished, and obtained, with unlimited power in the East, the command of the army destined to act against Mithridates. This period, though short, comprehends some of the most interesting and luminous points which appear in the Roman annals. During this interval, and almost at the same moment, the republic was attacked in the East by the most powerful and enterprising of the monarchs with whom it had yet waged war; in the West, by one of the most skilful of its own generals; and in the bosom of Italy, by its gladiators and slaves. The work was also introduced by two discourses,—the one presenting a picture of the government and manners of the Romans, from the origin of their city to the commencement of the civil wars; the other containing a general view of the dissensions of Marius and Sylla:—so that the whole book may be considered as connecting the termination of the Jugurthine War and the breaking out of Catiline's Conspiracy. The loss of this valuable production is the more to be regretted, as all the accounts of Roman history which have been written are defective during the interesting period it comprehended. Nearly seven hundred fragments belonging to it have been amassed, from scholiasts and grammarians, by De Brosses, the French translator of Sallust; but they are so short and unconnected, that they merely serve as landmarks, from which we may conjecture what subjects were treated of, and what events recorded. The only parts of the history which have been preserved in any degree entire, are four orations and two letters. The first is an oration pronounced against Sylla by the turbulent M. Aemilius Lepidus, who, as is well known, being desirous, at the expiration of his year, to be appointed a second time consul, excited for that purpose a civil war, and rendered himself master of great part of Italy. His speech, which was preparatory to these designs, was delivered after Sylla had abdicated the dictatorship, but was still supposed to retain great influence at Rome. He is accordingly treated as being still the tyrant of the state; and the people are exhorted to throw off the yoke completely, and to follow the speaker to the bold assertion of their liberties. The second oration is that of Lucius Philippus, which is an invective against the treasonable attempt of Lepidus, and was calculated to rouse the people from the apathy with which they beheld proceedings that were likely to terminate in the total subversion of the government. The third harangue was delivered by the Tribune Licinius. It was an effort of that demagogue to depress the patrician, and raise the tribunitial, power; for which purpose he alternately flatters the people and reviles the Senate. The oration of Marcus Cotta is unquestionably a fine one. He addressed it to the people, during the period of his consulship, in order to calm their minds, and allay their resentment at the bad success of public affairs; which, without any blame on his part, had lately, in many respects, been conducted to an unprosperous issue. Of the two letters which are extant, the one is from Pompey to the Senate, complaining, in very strong terms, of the deficiency in the supplies for the army which he commanded in Spain against Sertorius; the other is supposed to be addressed from Mithridates to Arsaces, king of Parthia, and to be written when the affairs of the former monarch were proceeding unsuccessfully. It exhorts him, nevertheless, with great eloquence and power of argument, to join him in an alliance against the Romans: for this purpose, it places in a strong point of view their unprincipled policy, and ambitious desire of universal empire—all which could not, without this device of an imaginary letter by a foe, have been so well urged by a national historian. It concludes with showing the extreme danger which the Parthians would incur from the hostility of the Romans, should they succeed in finally subjugating Pontus and Armenia. The only other fragment of any length, is the description of a splendid entertainment given to Metellus, on his return, after a year's absence, from his government of Farther Spain. It appears, from several other fragments, that Sallust had introduced, on occasion of the Mithridatic War, a geographical account of the shores and countries bordering on the Euxine, in the same manner as he enters into a topographical description of Africa, in his history of the Jugurthine War. This part of his work has been much applauded by ancient writers for exactness and liveliness; and is frequently referred to, as the highest authority, by Strabo, Pomponius Mela, and other geographers.

Besides his historical works, there exist two political discourses concerning the administration of the government, in the form of letters to Julius Caesar, which have generally, though not on sufficient grounds, been attributed to the pen of Sallust.

C. CRISPI
SALLUSTII
BELLUM CATILINARIUM.

I. ¹OMNIS ²homines, qui ³sese student praestare ce-teris animalibus, summa ope niti decet vitam ⁴silentio

¹ Omnis. The accusative plural for omnes. The common grammatical rule is, that nouns whose genitive plural ends in iūm, have es, is, or eis in the accusative plural. In the best ages of Latinity, however, the termination in is would seem to have been most commonly employed. In the manuscript from which the Abbé Maio lately printed Cicero's work De Republica, the termination in is, with the exception of six places, uniformly prevails. (Vid. Cic. de Rep. p. 623. ed. Moser.) Still, the termination in es was also used by the best writers; and it is even doubtful if all the words which have iūm in the genitive plural, had is in the accusative. Clases, and Classeis, and Cartacinienses, are all found on the Duilian column.—Zumpt. L. G. p. 30. Kenrick's transl. 2d ed. Compare Dunbar on the Greek and Latin Languages, p. 89. seqq.

² Homines. In strictness, homo denotes "one of the human race," as opposed to a being of another species, to one of a superior, or one of an inferior order. Vir, on the contrary, being employed to denote "a man," not a woman or a boy, and implying those properties or qualities which constitute the man, is used as a term of respect; and hence it often signifies, emphatically, "a hero." Homo being applicable to any of the human species indiscriminately, implies no peculiar merit or excellence in the individual to whom it is applied; and is used indifferently for men of any class or character. It may likewise be remarked, that when homo signifies a "female," it is never joined with a feminine adjective, but put in apposition with a feminine noun.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 326. 3d ed.

³ Sese student praestare. The insertion of the pronoun is not, as some maintain, a pleonasm, but in reality the fuller form of expresne transeant, veluti pecora, quae natura ⁵prona, atque ventri obedientia, finxit. Sed nostra omnis vis in animo et corpore ⁶sita: ⁷animi imperio, corporis servitio magis utimur: ⁸alterum nobis cum dis, alterum cum beluis commune est. ⁹Quo mihi rectius videtur ingenii quam virium opibus gloriam quaerere; et, quoniam vita ipsa, qua fruimur, brevis est, ¹⁰memoriam nostri quam maxime longam efficere. Nam divitiarum et sion; and sese praestare may be regarded as equivalent to ut ipsi praestent. Compare Cort. ad loc.

⁴ Silento, “in obscurity.” Silentium here denotes the silence which the rest of mankind preserve respecting us when we have done nothing to render our names illustrious. Thus Silius Italicus (3. 145.) “Quantum etenim distant a morte silentia vitae?” Compare Tacitus, Agric. c. 3.

⁵ Prona, “stooping downward to the earth.”—⁶ sita. Est understood. The student will observe, that in the best editions of Sallust the substantive verb is very frequently omitted.

⁷ Animi imperio, &c. This passage is commonly, though incorrectly, rendered as follows: “We make more use of the empire of the mind than of the obedience of the body.” It should be, “We use more the empire of the mind, the obedience of the body.” Sallust wishes to convey the idea, that it is the province of the mind to command, of the body to obey. Compare Seneca, (Ep. 114.) “Rex noster est animus.” Sallust is supposed to have borrowed the idea in the text from Aristotle, (Polit. 1. 5.) τὸ δὲ ζῶν πρῶτον εὐστηκτικόν ἐν φυλῆς καὶ σώματος. ἀν τὸ μὲν ἀρχεῖον ἔστι φύσις, τὸ δὲ ἀρχόμενον.

⁸ Alterum. Alter means one of two, but alius, when followed by alius, one of many. The plural alteri is used when two bodies or classes of men are opposed to each other. As denoting the other of two, alter was also used for the second: thus, primus, alter, tertius; unus et vicesimus, alter et vicesimus. The propriety of this latter meaning is ably discussed by Crombie, (Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 201. seqq. 3d ed.)

⁹ Quo mihi rectius videtur, &c. “Wherefore it appears to me more consistent with reason, to seek for a distinguished name by the resources of intellect rather than of bodily strength.”

¹⁰ Memoriam nostri, “the remembrance of ourselves.” Memoriam nostram would mean, “our faculty of memory.”

formae gloria fluxa atque fragilis; virtus clara aeterna ¹que habetur. ²Sed diu magnum inter mortalis certamen fuit, vine corporis an ³virtute animi, ⁴res militaris magis procederet. Nam et prius, quam ⁵incipias, consulto; et, ubi consulueris, mature facto opus est. Ita utrumque, per se indigens, alterum alterius auxilio ⁶veget.

II. Igitur initio reges (nam in terris nomen ⁷imperii id primum fuit) ⁸diversi, pars ingenium, alii corpus exercabant: ⁹etiam tum vita hominum sine cupiditate ¹⁰agi-

¹ Habetur. The verb here retains all its proper force, and the passage may be rendered, "The endowments of mind form the only illustrious and lasting possession."

² Sed. This particle is here elegantly used in the sense of continuation, like δι in Greek, and may be rendered "Now."—

³ Virtute animi, "energy of mind."—⁴ Res militaris, "the success of a military enterprise."

⁵ Incipias. The second person is here elegantly employed to impart animation to the style: "before you begin," instead of "before one begins." Equally elegant is the use of the participles consulto and facto in the place of nouns. As regards the idea conveyed in the text, compare Isocrates (ad Demonicum), βουλεύον μήρ βραδίας, ιστιτέλη δὲ ταχίας τὰ δέξαντα, "Consult leisurely, but execute speedily, your determinations;" and also Demosthenes, (Περὶ πολεμίου Δημητρίου, 1432. 11. ed. Reiske), δέν δὲ βουλευοθει μήρ ἡσυχίας, ταῦτα δὲ τὰ δέξαντα μετὰ σπουδῆς.

⁶ Veget. An archaism for veget. Hence vegetus and the verb vegeto. Cortius and many other editors read eget, but, as Dahl well remarks, indigens eget is a frigid expression.

⁷ Imperiī, "of authority." Compare Cic. de Leg. 3. 2. "Omnis antiquae gentes regibus quondam paruerunt."—⁸ Diversi, "differing in their views." Dureau de Lamalle renders it, "suivant différents systèmes;" and Beauzée, "selon la diversité de leurs goûts."—⁹ Etiā tum. This is the Bipont reading; Cortius has et jam tum.

¹⁰ Agitatabantur. Used for agebatur, the frequentative for the simple verb. Many of the older writers, such as Plautus, Terence, Lucretius, &c. are, like Sallust, fond of this peculiar usage, on account evidently of the fuller sound of the frequentative form.

tabatur; sua cuique satis placebant. Postea vero quam in Asia ¹Cyrus, in Graecia Lacedaemonii et Athenien-ses coepere urbes atque nationes subigere, ²lubidinem dominandi caussam belli habere, maxumam gloriam in maxumo imperio putare; tum demum ³periculo atque negotis compertum est, in bello plurimum ingenium posse. ⁴Quod si regum atque imperatorum animi virtus in pace ita, uti in bello, valeret, ⁵aequabilius atque constantius sese res humanae haberent; neque ⁶aliud alio ferri, neque mutari ac misceri omnia cerneret. Nam imperium facile his ⁷artibus retinetur, quibus initio partum est. Verum, ubi ⁸pro labore desidia, ⁹pro conti-

¹ Cyrus. The elder Cyrus, son of Cambyses and Mandane, who transferred the empire from the Medes to the Persians, dethroning his grandfather Astyages. The true Persian form of the name is thought to have had a close resemblance to the Hebrew Khoresh (Cyrus), which the Greeks uniformly and correctly interpret "the sun." Compare the Persian Khor and Khorshid (the sun), of which last the Hebrew form is thought to be a contraction. (Gesenius, s. v.—Baehr ad Ctes. p. 194.) Sallust begins with the reign of Cyrus, because all before that period was regarded by many of the ancients (we need not add with what little reason) as purely fabulous.

² Lubidinem dominandi, "a thirst for dominion."—³ periculo atque negotiis, "from experience and affairs themselves."

⁴ Quod si regum, &c. "But if the mental qualities of kings and of those who command were exercised to the same degree in peace that they are in war."—⁵ aequabilius atque constantius, &c. "human affairs would proceed with more regularity and steadiness." This usage of the verb habeo with the pronoun is analogous to the Greek idiom: ιδε τιχει, "he is well," i. e. ιδε τιχει (ιστορη) "he has himself well." Compare Viger's Greek Idioms, p. 84. Seager's transl.

⁶ Aliud alio, &c. Alius is frequently used by Sallust, and also by the best writers, with one of its own cases, or an adverb derived from it, to denote what in English requires two separate expressions. Thus we may render the passage in the text, "neither would you behold one thing carried in one direction, another in another," &c. —⁷ artibus, "means."

⁸ Pro labore, "in the stead of active exertion." Labor has here a special reference to military operations.—⁹ pro continentia et nentia et aequitate lubido atque superbia invasere, ¹for-tuna simul cum moribus immutatur. Ita imperium sem-per ad ²optimum quemque a minus bono transfertur. Quae homines ³arant, navi-gant, aedificant, ⁴virtuti om-nia parent. Sed multi mortales, dediti ventri atque somno, indocti in cultique vitam, sicuti ⁵peregrinantes, transegere; ⁶quibus, profecto contra naturam, corpus voluptati, anima oneri fuit. Eorum ego vitam mor-temque ⁷juxta aestumo, ⁸quoniam de utraque sile-tur. Verum enim vero is demum mihi vivere atque ⁹frui anima videtur, ¹⁰qui, aliquo negotio intentus, preeaequitate, &c. “ in the stead of moderation and a regard for natural equality, cupidity, and a tyrannical spirit,” &c. As Sallust here con-trasts virtues and vices, continentia will be opposed to lubido, and aequitas to superbia; which removes, we conceive, all difficulty as to the meaning of the individual terms. Burnouf makes lubido in this passage signify “ caprice,” an opinion in which we cannot concur. — ¹*fortuna*. Understand principum.

² Optimum quemque, “ the most deserving.” Literally, “ each most deserving person.” — ³*arant*, &c. equivalent to arando, navi-gando, aedificant: hence que homines arant, &c. may be rendered by nouns, “ agriculture, navigation, architecture.” — ⁴ virtuti omnia parent, “ depend all upon the energies of mind for their successful employment.”

⁵ Peregrinantes. A beautiful expression, by which the sensualist and the sluggard are compared to “ travellers in a foreign land.” Cortius cites in explanation a passage from Zeno of Verona, (Serm. 32.) “ Sed qui sunt praetereuntes, nisi qui peregrinantes corporalis vitae sacculum transeunt.”

⁶ Quibus, profecto, &c. “ Unto whom, certainly in opposition to the views of nature,” &c. — ⁷*juxta*, “ alike,” i. e. as equally unim-portant. — ⁸ quoniam de utraque siletur, “ since silence is preserved respecting each,” i. e. since they leave no memorial of their having ever existed.

⁹ Frui anima, “ to enjoy his rational nature,” i. e. to answer the end of his existence. — ¹⁰*qui, aliquo negotio intentus*, &c. “ who, in whatever employment he may be engaged, seeks for the reputation attendant on some praiseworthy deed, or the exercise of some useful talent.”

clari facinoris, aut artis bonae famam quaerit. Sed, ¹ in magna copia rerum, ² aliud alii natura iter ostendit.

III. PULCHRUM est bene facere reipublicae : etiam
³ bene dicere haud ⁴ absurdum est. Vel pace, vel bello, clarum fieri licet : ⁵ et qui fecere, et qui facta aliorum scripsere, multi laudantur. Ac mihi quidem, ⁶ tamen etsi haudquaquam par gloria sequatur scriptorem et ⁷ auctorem rerum, tamen in primis arduum videtur ⁸ res gestas scribere : primum, quod facta ⁹ dictis sunt exae-quanda : dehinc, quia plerique, quae delicta reprehendisteris, malivolentia et invidia ¹⁰ putant : ¹¹ ubi de magna

¹ In magna copia rerum, “ in the great variety of employments.”

² aliud alii ; compare note 6, page 4.

³ Bene dicere, equivalent to eloquentiam exercere. Eloquence was one of the surest passports to office among the Romans.—⁴ absurdum. This term was originally applied to any harsh and disagreeable sound, (“ Vox quae surdis auribus audiri digna est,”) and subsequently, to any thing devoid of merit and unworthy of notice. Haud absurdum est may therefore be rendered, “ is no contemptible acquirement.”

⁵ Et qui fecere, &c. Compare Pliny, (Ep. 6. 16. 3.) “ Equidem beatos puto, quibus deorum munere datum est aut facere scribenda, aut scribere legenda; beatissimos vero quibus utrumque.—Happy I esteem those to be, whom Providence has distinguished with the abilities either of doing such actions as are worthy of being related, or of relating them in a manner worthy of being read; but doubly happy are they who are blessed with both these uncommon talents.”

⁶ tamen etsi, an archaism for tamen si.

⁷ Auctorem rerum, “ the actor.” Some editions have actorem rerum: both lections occur in manuscripts. Compare Velleius Paterculus, (2. 120. 6.) “ Praeclari facinoris auctor fuit Caldus Coelius,” &c.—⁸ res gestas, “ an historical narrative.”—⁹ dictis, “ by the style.” Livy has an expression similar to that in the text, in which, however, dicta is used in its original meaning; “ facta dictis aquando,” (6. 20.)

¹⁰ Putant. The manuscripts vary, some inserting dicta before putant, others ducta, &c. We have followed the reading of Cortius. The ellipsis is to be supplied by reprehendisse, which is in fact expressed in one of the manuscripts. Sallust appears to have borrowed

virtute et gloria bonorum memores, quae sibi quisque facilia factu putat, aequo animo accipit; ¹ supra ea, veluti facta, pro falsis ducit. Sed ego adolescentulus, initio, sicuti plerique, ² studio ad rempublicam latus sum; ³ ibique mihi advorsa multa fuere. ⁴ Nam pro pudore, pro abstinentia, pro virtute, audacia, largitio, avaritia vigeant. Quae tametsi animus aspernabatur, ⁵ insolens malarum artium; tamen, inter tanta vitia, imbecilla aetas ambitione corrupta tenebatur: ac me, cum ab ⁶ reliquorum malis moribus dissentirem, nihilo minus honoris cupido eadem, quae ceteros, fama atque invidia vexabat.

the idea in the text from Thucydides, (2. 35.) "Ο τε γὰρ ἔννοιῶν καὶ εὑνους ἀκρατῆς τάχ' ἄν τι ἐνδεσπέζως, πρὸς ἢ βούλεται τε καὶ ἐπισταται, νομίσμα δηλοῦσθαι, ὃ τε ἀπειρος ἱστιν ἢ καὶ πλεονάζεσθαι, διὰ φθόνον, εἰ τι ἕτερος τὴν ιαυτοῦ φύσιν ἀκούει. Μήχρι γὰρ τοῦτο οἱ ἐπανεῖται περιγράφειν λεγόμενοι, ἵνα ὅστιν ἀν καὶ αὐτὸς ἴκαστος ὁνται ικανὸς εἶναι δημοσιῖ τι, ἢν ηὔκουντες. " For the auditor, who has had personal experience of the transactions, and is well affected, may perhaps think some circumstance treated short of what he would wish, and what he knows to be the truth; while he who is unacquainted therewith, will, if he hears any thing beyond the reach of his own nature, through envy, regard it as an exaggeration. For thus far only are the praises bestowed on others durable, as long as each may judge himself able to perform something of what he hears."—Blomfield.

¹ Ubi de magna virtute, &c. " When you make mention of the distinguished merit and glory of illustrious men," &c.

¹ Supra ea, " whatever things go beyond this," or " all beyond this."

² Studio ad rempublicam, &c. " Was led by the ardour of youth to turn my attention to public affairs," i. e. to become a candidate for public office.—³ ibique, " and in this career." —⁴ Nam pro pudore, &c. Pudor is here opposed to audacia, avaritia to abstinentia, and largitio to virtus.—⁵ insolens malarum artium, " unaccustomed to evil practices."

⁶ Reliquorum, &c. We have followed the reading of Havercamp and Burnouf. The Bipont text has reliquis and qua ceteros, by which eadem fama and invidia become ablatives. In our lection fama and invidia are likewise ablatives, but eadem is in the nominative agreeing with cupidio. The whole passage may be rendered as follows:

IV. Igitur, ubi animus ex ¹multis miseris atque periculis requievit, et mihi reliquam aetatem a republica procul habendam decrevi, non fuit consilium, secordia atque desidia ²bonum otium conterere; neque vero agrum colendo, aut venando, ³servilibus officiis intentum, aetatem agere: sed, a quo incepto ⁴studio me ambitio mala detinuerat, eodem regressus, statui res gestas populi Romani ⁵carptim, ut quaeque memo-

" And, though I was uncontaminated by the evil principles of others, nevertheless the same desire of advancement disquieted me, by reason of the obloquy and odium that accompanied it, which disquieted the rest." i. e. Standing forth as a candidate for public honours, I shared the fate of others: my character was assailed with obloquy, and an attempt was made by my political opponents to render me an object of popular odium.—De Brosses thinks that Sallust here endeavours to offer a plausible excuse for his recent and disgraceful expulsion from the senate.

¹ Ex multis miscriis, &c. " from the many miseries and dangers by which it had been encompassed."

² Bonum otium, " valuable leisure." — ³ servilibus officiis, " mere corporeal employments." The phrase is here used in allusion to the expression in the first chapter, " animi imperio, corporis servitio magis utimur." The charge, therefore, which some bring against Sallust, of his stigmatizing agriculture and hunting as employments fit only for slaves, rests on an entirely erroneous acceptation of the epithet servilibus.

⁴ Studio. Cortius considers studio as having reference to historical labours. We would rather, with Dahl, extend the term to " liberal studies" generally, so as to embrace the literature both of Greece and Rome, especially the former.

⁵ Carptim, " in detached portions." Compare Pliny, (Ep. 8. 4. 7.) " Respondebis, non posse perinde carptim, ut, contexta, perinde inchoata placere, ut effecta.—You will tell me, that a detached piece cannot please like one entire design, nor an unfinished plan be as agreeable as a complete performance :" and Tacitus, (Hist. 4. 46. extr.) The term is sometimes used in the sense of breviter, as in Pliny, (Ep. 6. 22. 2.) " egit autem carptim et κατὰ κεφάλαια," (i. e. breviter et summarim), " Both parties pleaded their own cause, and in a summary way confined themselves closely to the articles of the charge." Some editions of Sallust have strictim, " cursorily," in ria digna videbantur, perscribere: eo magis, quod mihi a spe, metu, ¹partibus reipublicae animus liber erat. Igitur de Catilinae conjuratione, quam verissime posse potero, ²paucis absolvam: nam id facinus in primis ego memorabile existumo, sceleris atque periculi novitate. De cujus hominis moribus pauca prius explananda sunt, quam initium narrandi faciam.

V. LUCIUS CATILINA, ³nobili genere natus, magna place of carpum; but this reading carries with it its own refutation. From this passage of Sallust it appears that the history of Catiline's conspiracy was his first literary production.

¹ Partibus reipublicae, "the factions which agitated the republic." Dahl is of opinion, that, from the language of the text, Sallust must have composed this narrative after his return from the government of Numidia; since, to suppose with some commentators that the work was written at the time of his expulsion from the senate, (A. U. C. 703), does not harmonize with the expressions, "a spe, metu, &c. animus liber erat."

² Paucis absolvam. Understand narrationem.

³ Nobili genere natus. Catiline was the last of the gens Sergia, a patrician house. Of his father and grandfather little is known: the former would seem to have been in indigent circumstances, from the language of Quintus Cicero, (de petitione consulatus, c. 2.), who speaks of Catiline as having been born amid the poverty of his father, (in patris egestate). The great-grandfather, M. Sergius Silus, or Silo, distinguished himself greatly in the second Punic war, and was present in the battles of Ticinus, Trebia, Trasymenus, and Cannæ. Pliny (H. N. 7. 29.) speaks of him in the following animated strain: "M. Sergio, ut quidem arbitror, nemo quenquam hominum jure praetulerit: licet pronepos Catilina gratiam nomini deroget. Secundo stipendio dextram manum perdidit: stipendiis duobus ter et vicies vulneratus est: ob id neutra manu, neutro pede satis utilis: uno tantum servo, plurimis postea stipendiis debilis miles. Bis ab Hannibale captus, (neque enim cum quolibet hoste res fuit): bis vinculorum ejus profugus, viginti mensibus nullo non die in catenis aut compedibus custoditus. Sinistra manu sola quater pugnavit, duobus equis insidente eo suffosso. Dextram sibi ferream fecit, eaque religata proeliatus. Cremonam obsidione exemit, Placentiam tutatus est: duodenā castra hostium in Gallia cepit:

vi et animi et corporis, 'sed ingenio malo pravoque.

quae omnia ex oratione ejus apparent, habita cum in praetura sacris arceretur a collegis, ut debilis. Quos hic coronarum acervos constructurus hoste mutato? Etenim plurimum refert, in quae cujusque virtus tempora inciderit. Quas Trebia, Ticinusve, aut Trasymenus civicas dedere? Quae Cannis corona merita? unde fugisse virtutis sumnum opus fuit. Ceteri profecto victores hominum fuere, Sergius vicit etiam fortunam." We have given this long passage entire, for the purpose of showing the remarkable contrast between the individual of whom it speaks and his great-grandson Catiline. The father of M. Sergius, who bore the same name, was praetor A. U. C. 555. (Compare Livy, 32. 27. seqq. and 33. 21.) Virgil traces the Sergian house to the Trojan Sergus, "Sergestusque, domus tenet a quo Sergio nomen," (Aen. 5. 121.); and Juvenal speaks both of Catiline and Cethagus, as being the descendants of ancient and noble families: (Sat. 8. 231.)

"Quid Catilina, tuis natalibus atque Cethegi Invenerit quisquam sublimius?" —

"Cethagus! Catilina! Whose ancestors Were nobler born, or higher rank'd than yours?" —Gifford.

It may not be amiss to mention here a few circumstances relative to the history of Catiline's life, previous to the period of his conspiracy. In the contest between Marius and Sylla he sided with the latter, and served as Quaestor in his army, which could not have proved a very favourable school for virtue. On the success of Sylla's party, Catiline took a very active part in the horrid excesses which ensued; gratifying at one time his own private resentments, by bringing his enemies to punishment, and executing at another the bloody mandates of the Dictator himself. Many citizens of noble birth are said by Quintus Cicero (de petit. cons. c. 23.) to have fallen by his hand; and, according to Plutarch, (Vit. Syll. c. 32. ed. Hutton. vol. iii. p. 230.—Vit. Cic. c. 10. vol. v. p. 319.), he had assassinated his own brother during the civil war, and now, to screen himself from prosecution, persuaded Sylla to put him among the proscribed, as a person still alive. He murdered too, with his own hands, his sister's husband, a Roman knight of a mild and peaceable character, ("equitem Romanum, nullarum partium, cum semper natura, tum etiam aetate jam quietum." Q. Cic. de petit. cons. c. 3.) One of the most horrid actions, however, of which he was guilty, would seem to have been the killing of M. Marius Gratidianus, a near relation of the celebrated Marius. Sylla had put the name of this individual on the list of the proscribed, whereupon Catiline entered the dwelling of the unfortunate man, exhausted upon his person all the refinements of cruelty and insult, and having at last put an end to his existence, carried his bloody head in triumph through the streets of Rome, and brought it to Sylla as he sat upon his tribunal in the Forum. When this was done, the murderer washed his hands in the lustral water at the door of Apollo's temple, which stood in the immediate vicinity. (Compare Seneca, de Ira, 3. 18. where an account is given more in detail, of the cruelties inflicted on Gratidianus.) Catiline, as might well be expected, did not fail, by means of these excesses, to obtain the favourable notice of the tyrant. In the year of the city 686 he was made Prætor at Rome, and in the following year governor in Africa, where his extortion and infamous conduct exposed him to the detestation of all. On his return to Rome he was accused of mal-administration in his province, but escaped by bribery.

Huic ab ²adolescentia bella intestina, caedes, rapinae,

¹ Sed ingenio malo pravoque, “but of a wicked and depraved spirit.” The epithet pravus is originally applied to any thing crooked or misshapen, and then figuratively to the moral character. We have an instance of its primitive acceptation in Cicero, (Acad. 4. 11.) “Interesse oportet ut inter rectum et pravum, sic inter verum et falsum.” As regards the term ingenium, it may be remarked, that it denotes the native qualities of the whole soul, and not merely those of the intellect. That it is applied to the powers of the understanding is universally admitted; that it also denotes the moral qualities of the soul, the present passage of Sallust will clearly prove. To place the point, however, beyond all doubt, we may refer to the following authorities: Ter. Eun. 5. 2. 41. Id. ibid. 4. 7. 42. Curtius, 8. 2. 16. Val. Max. 2. 7. Suet. vit. Culig. 27. “I am therefore inclined to think,” observes Crombie, from whom the above remarks are taken, “that ingenium denotes “quicquid est ingenitum,” or “natura ingenita,” and is applied to the native qualities of the whole soul, those of the heart as well as those of the head; but, as Hill correctly observes, without any reference to their corruption or improvement, their probable increase or diminution.”—Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 73. seqq. 3d ed.

² Adolescentia, “his earlier years.” “According to the most correct Roman writers,” observes my very learned friend E. H. Barker, Esq. “human life was divided into four stages of fifteen years each: thus pueritia was within 15; adolescentia within 30;

discordia civilis, grata fuere; ¹ibique juventutem suam exercuit. Corpus ²patiens inediae, vigiliae, algoris, supra quam cuique credibile est: animus audax, subdolus, ³varius, cuius rei libet ⁴simulator ac dissimulajuventus within 45; and senectus comprised the remaining period of life." Compare Classical Journal, vol. i. p. 473.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 160. 3d ed.

¹ Ibique. Elegantly used for in iis rebus. Compare Cic. (pro Rosc. Am. c. 29.) "Si quid est, quod Erucius ad testes reservet, ibi nos quoque, ut in ipsa causa, paratiore reperiet, quam putabat."—So also Cic. de Off. 3. 9. Liv. 40. 46.

² Patiens. The verbal adjective, distinguished from the participle by its particular government: thus patiens inediae, "able to endure want of food," referring to a habit; patiens inediām, "suffering want of food," referring to a particular point of time. So also dōctus lingua Latinam, "one who has been taught the Latin language;" dōctus linguae Latinae, "one skilled in Latin."

³ Varius, "capable of assuming any shape." Compare the picture drawn by Cicero, (pro Coel. 6.) "Illa vero in illo homine (sc. Catilina) mirabilia fuerunt. versare suam naturam, et regere ad tempus, atque hue et illuc torquere et flectere: cum tristibus severe, cum remissis jucunde, cum senibus graviter, cum juventute comiter, cum facinorosis audaciter, cum libidinosis luxuriose vivere. Hac ille tam varia, multiplicique natura, cum omnes omnibus ex terris homines improbos, audacesque collegerat: tum etiam multos fortis viros et bonos specie quadam virtutis assimulatae tenebat.—Yet this man had a surprising faculty of engagirg many to his friendship; fashioning his nature according to his purposes, bending and turning it every way at pleasure; living with the morose, severely; with the free, merrily; with the aged, gravely; with the young, cheerfully; with the enterprising, audaciously; with the vicious, luxuriously. By such a variety and complication of character, he had got together from every country all the profligate and audacious, and yet preserved the friendship of many brave and worthy men by the specious show of a pretended virtue."—Duncan.

⁴ Simulator. The verb simulare, whence this noun is formed, means, "to pretend to be what we are not;" but dissimulare, "to dissemble, or conceal what we are." It is the character of hypocrisy tor: alieni appetens, sui profusus, ardens in cupiditatibus: ¹satis loquentiae, sapientiae parum. ²Vastus animus immoderata, incredibilia, nimis alta semper cupiebat. Hunc, ³post dominationem ⁴Lucii Sullae, to pretend to virtues which it has not, (simulare), and to dissemble the vices which it has, (dissimulare).

¹ Satis loquentiae, “possessing fluency of speech enough.” Several editions have eloquentiae; but this would be too strong here, although the reading appears in a majority of the MSS. The distinction between loquentia and eloquentia is well pointed out in the following extract from Pliny, (Ep. 5. 20.) “Julius Candidus non invenuste solet dicere aliud esse eloquentiam, aliud loquentiam. Nam eloquentia vix uni, aut alteri; haec vero quam Candidus loquentiam appellat, multis, etiam impudentissimo cuique maxime contingit.—Julius Candidus used, not improperly, to say, that eloquence is one thing, and loquacity another. Eloquence indeed is the privilege of very few; but that faculty which Candidus calls loquacity, is common to numbers, and the talent which generally attends impudence.” We may compare with this the words of Gellius, (l. 15. extr.) “Valerium Probum, grammaticum illustrem, ex familiari ejus, docto viro comperi, Sallustianum illud, (in Catil. c. 5.) Satis eloquentiae, sapientiae parum, brevi antequam vita decederet, sic legero coepisse, et sic a Sallustio relictum affirmasse: Satis loquentiae, sapientiae parum: quod loquentia novatori verborum Sallustio maxime congrueret; eloquentia cum insipientia minime conveniret.—I have been informed by a learned man of his acquaintance, that the illustrious grammarian, Valerius Probus, a short time before his death, altered the phrase of Sallust, “enough of eloquence, but little wisdom,” to “enough of talking, but little wisdom;” affirming that Sallust so left it, for the word loquentia was most suitable to Sallust, who was fond of new words, whilst eloquentia did not properly express folly.” —Beloe.

² Vastus animus, “his insatiable spirit.” Dureau de Lamalle renders it “son ambition immodérée.”

³ Post dominationem. This expression is equivalent, not to finita dominatione, but ab eo tempore quo dominari cooperat. The preposition must therefore be rendered by “since.”

⁴ Lucii Sullae. Sylla was a Roman of patrician rank, who served at first under Marius in the Jugurthine war. His activity and address contributed greatly to bring the war to a successful termina-

lubido maxuma invaserat reipublicae capiundae ; neque id quibus modis adsequeretur, dum sibi regnum pararet, ¹quidquam pensi habebat. Agitabatur magis magisque in dies animus ferox, inopia rei familiaris, et conscientia scelerum ; quae utraque ²his artibus auxerat, quas supra memoravi. Incitabant praeterea corrupti civitatis mores, ³quos pessuma ac diversa inter se mala, luxuria atque avaritia, vexabant. ⁴Res ipsa hortari videtur, quoniam de moribus civitatis ⁵tempus admonuit, ⁶supra repetere, ac, paucis, ⁷instituta majorum domi militiaeque ; ⁸quomodo rempublicam habuerint, quantamque reliquerint ; ut, paullatim immutata, ex pulcherruma, pessuma ac flagitosissuma facta sit, disserere.

VI. URBEM Romam, ⁹sicuti ego accepi, condidere tion. Marius became at last jealous of Sylla's merit, and hence originated that quarrel between them which was productive of the most enormous cruelties, and led to the final extinction of Roman liberty. Sylla, on gaining the ascendancy, assumed the reins of absolute government, and became perpetual dictator. After glutting his vengeance with the blood of thousands, and ruling with despotic sway for three years, he resigned his power, and lived undisturbed as a private citizen. He died in great torments of the morbus pedicularis, in the 60th year of his age, about 78 B. C. His death was hastened by habits of perpetual intoxication, in which he probably indulged to avoid the horrors of remorse.

¹ Quidquam pensi habebat, “ did he at all regard.” — ² his artibus, “ by those practices.” — ³ quos pessuma, &c. Cortius refers quos, by synesis, to civitatem put for cives; it is better, however, to make mores the antecedent. “ On which luxury and cupidity, evils of the most pernicious tendency, and directly opposite in their characters, kept exercising an active influence.”

⁴ Res ipsa, “ the subject itself.” — ⁵ tempus, “ the occasion.” — ⁶ supra repetere. Understand narrationem. — ⁷ instituta majorum, “ the principles of government adopted by our forefathers.” — ⁸ quomodo, &c. “ how they governed the republic.”

⁹ Sicuti ego accepi. We may fairly infer from these words, that even in the days of Sallust uncertainty attached itself to the early history of Rome. The origin of the eternal city is lost in fable.

atque habuere initio ¹Trojani, qui, Aenea duce, profugi, sedibus incertis vagabantur; cumque his ²Aborigines, genus hominum agreste, sine legibus, ³sine imperio, liberum atque solutum. Hi postquam in una moenia convenere, ⁴dispari genere, dissimili lingua, ⁵alius alio more viventes; incredibile memoratu est quam facile coaluerint. Sed, postquam ⁶res eorum ⁷civibus, moribus, agris aucta, satis prospera, satisque pollens videbatur; ⁸sicuti pleraque mortalium habentur, invidia ex opulentia orta est. Igitur reges populique finitimi bello ⁹tentare: pauci ex amicis auxilio esse;

¹ Trojani. No Trojans ever set foot in Italy; the arrival of Aeneas in that country is purely fabulous.—Vide Niebuhr's Roman History, vol. i. p. 150. seqq. Hare and Thirlwall's transl.

² Aborigines, a name given by the Romans to the primitive inhabitants of Italy, and which is supposed to be equivalent to the Greek Αἰτίζοντες. The old and genuine name, however, was Casci. Thus Saufeius (in Serv. ad Aen. 1. 10.) observes, “qui . . . Cassei (read Casci) vocati sunt, quos posteri Aborigines nominaverunt.” Compare in Ennius, “Casci populi Latini,” and other passages in Columna, (ad fragm. Ennii, p. 14. ed. Hess.) If we may be allowed the remark, the word Casci would seem to have sprung from the same root whence have originated so many derivative forms in the early religious and mythological language of the heathen world. (Asos, Asi, Cauc-Asos, Asia, Jupiter Casius, “Ortos, &c.) As to the rudeness and barbarism of this early race, it is all conjecture. They were more probably a civilized and sacerdotal colony from the remote east.

³ Sine imperio, “without any form of government.”—⁴ dispari genere, “though different in origin.”—⁵ alius alio more viventes; i. e. viventes (alio more), alius (vivens) alio more, “though living each after a different manner.”

⁶ Res eorum, “their state.”—⁷ civibus, moribus, &c. “increased in number of citizens, improved in manners, and enlarged in territory.” The participle assumes a different meaning here with each of the nouns to which it refers. The grammarians call this a Zeugma.—⁸ sicuti pleraque mortalium habentur, “as is the case for the most part with human affairs.”—opulentia, “prosperity.”

⁹ Tentare. The infinitive is here put for the imperfect of the in-

nam ceteri, metu ¹perculti, a periculis aberant. At Romani, domi militiaeque intenti, "festinare, parare, alias alium hortari; hostibus obviam ire; libertatem, dicative, a practice for which Sallust is perhaps more famed than any other author. Grammarians term it the historical infinitive, as being principally used in historical narratives, in order to give an air of rapidity and animation to the sentence. This construction is usually explained by an ellipsis of coepit or cooperunt, which may often be supplied; in other cases, however, it will not accord with the sense. There appears to be some remote analogy between this usage of the infinitive in Latin, and the idiom of the Greek, by which the same mood, taken as an absolute verbal idea only, is made to stand for the imperative.—Vide Rost. G. G. p. 470. Matthiax, G. G. vol. ii. p. 824. and Blomfield ad loc.

¹ Perculti. Other editions have percussi, which is inferior. Bentley (ad Horat. Epod. 11. 3.) correctly lays down the distinction between percellere and percutere, as follows: "Utrumque de corpore proprio, de animo μετροφέας dicitur. Percellere tamen magis quid quam percutere significat; tanta scilicet vi percutere, ut evertas et solo prosternas. Ergo in re graviore percussus aptius vocabulum est; percussus terrore, metu, formidine, clade, ruina, damno, discordiis, passim in auctoribus occurunt.—These words are applied to both; to the Body properly, and to the Mind metaphorically; only percellere signifies something stronger than percutere, and seems to mean so forcible a blow, as to knock down or overturn. Percussus is therefore the most proper word to describe any thing strong or violent; percussus terrore, metu, formidine, clade, ruina, damno, discordiis, are phrases that often occur."

² Festinare, parare, &c. The infinitive again used for the imperfect of the indicative. Other instances of this construction the student cannot fail to notice for himself. As regards the meaning of the verb festinare, Cato (quoted by Aulus Gellius, 16. 14.) remarks: "Aliud est properare, aliud festinare; qui unum quid maturè transit, is properat; qui multa simul incipit, neque perficit, is festinat.—It is one thing properare, another festinare. He who accomplishes a thing thoroughly, properat (hastens); he who begins many things without perfecting them, festinat (hurries)."—Beloe. This distinction is not indeed uniformly observed; but one thing is certain, that festinare, and not properare, is used to express great haste; and that properare never signifies "to hurry."—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 54. in notis.

patriam parentesque armis tegere: post, ubi pericula virtute propulerant, sociis atque amicis ¹auxilia portabant; magisque dandis quam accipiundis beneficiis, amicitias parabant. Imperium ²legitimum, ³nomen imperii regium habebant: delecti, quibus corpus annis infirmum, ingenium sapientia validum, reipublicae ⁴consultabant: hi, ⁵vel aetate, vel curae similitudine, PATRES appellabantur. Post, ubi regium imperium, quod, initio, ⁶conservandae libertatis, atque augendae reipublicae

¹ Auxilia portabant. An unusual form of expression. The best writers use ferre instead of portare in such cases.—magisque dandis, &c. Compare Thucydides, 2. 40. Οὐ πάρχοντες τοῦ, ἀλλὰ δεῖντες, κτώσια τοῦ φίλους. “We gain our friends, not by receiving benefits, but by conferring obligations.”—Blomfield.

² Legitimum, “regulated by laws.” In contradistinction to a despotic one.—³ nomen, “title.”

⁴ Consultabant, i. e. consulere solebant.—⁵ vel aetate, &c. Niebuhr cites another explanation of the term Patres from Festus: “Patres senatores ideo appellati sunt, quia agrorum partes attribuebant tenuioribus, perinde ac liberis propriis;” (i. e. from their paternal care in assigning plots of arable land to the poor folk, as it were to their own children.—Niebuhr’s History of Rome, vol. i. p. 281. Hare and Thirlwall’s transl.

⁶ Conservandae libertatis, &c. The construction which we have here is not confined to Sallust, but occurs in some of the best writers. “Esse,” observes Scheller, in his explanation of it, “is also followed by a genitive, when it means “to be serviceable for,” “to be conducive to,” instead of the dative, which is more usual; and this genitive is generally accompanied by the future participle passive in dus: thus, Quod initio conservandae libertatis atque augendae reipublicae fuerit, (Sall. Cat. 6.) “which had tended originally to the preservation of liberty and the increase of the state.” Qui utrisque (i. e. patribus et plebi) utilia ferrent, queaque aequandae libertatis essent, “to propose what was advantageous to both parties, and what might serve to equalize their freedom.” Liv. 3. 31. Quam (concordiam) dissolvendae maxime tribunitiae potestatis rentur esse, “which union they think will tend to annihilate the tribunitian power.” Liv. 5. 3. &c. If these passages be correct, which we must suppose, since they were extracted from good manuscripts by fuerat, in superbiam ¹dominationemque ²convertit; immutato more, ³annua imperia, binosque imperatores sibi fecere: eo modo minume posse putabant per licentiam ⁴insolescere animum humanum.

accurate philologists, it may be asked, by what are these genitives governed? Not, apparently, by causa: it seems therefore better to understand negotium (or negotia), e. g. negotium conservandae libertatis, &c.—Scheller L. G. vol. i. p. 400. Walker's transl.

¹ Dominationemque, “and tyranny.” The Romans always attached an improper meaning to the term dominus, the root of dominatio, using it in the sense of “tyrant,” “a master of slaves,” &c. On this account Augustus refused the name. Compare Dio Cassius (55. 12.) διονότης τὸν ὁ Αὐγουστός ἵπτε ταῦ δύμαν ὀνυματίς, εὐχ ἔτις ἀπτέπε μηδίνα τεύτη πρὸς ταῦτα τῷ προστίματι κενίσσοθαι, ἀλλὰ ταῦ τάν διὰ φυλαῖς αὐτὸὶ λατίσσωτο. So also Suetonius (Aug. 53.) “Dominii appellationem, ut maledictum et opprobrium, semper exhortuit.” Oros. (6. 22.) “Dominii appellationem ut homo declinavit.”

² Convertit. Understand sese, “changed.”—³ annua imperia, &c. “annual offices of magistracy, and two chief magistrates.” The term imperium, in its stricter acceptation, accords better with the character of the early consulship, than with the form it assumed after the successive encroachments of the plebeian power. From the law given by Cicero, in his own plan of a well-ordered state, and which is taken with some slight alteration from one of the old laws of Rome, an idea may be formed of what he considered the genuine definition of the consular power. “Regio imperio duo sunt: iisque praeundo, judicando, consulendo, praetores, judices, consules appellantur. Militiae summum jus habento, nemini parento. Ollis salus populi suprema lex esto.”—Cic. de leg. 3. 3. 8. ed. Goerenz.

⁴ Insolescere, “grow haughty.” Compare Florus, (1. 9.) “Ex perpetuo annum (imperium) placuit; ex singulari duplex: ne potestas solitudine vel mora corrumperetur.” And also Eutropius, (1. 8.) “Hinc consules coepere pro uno rege duo hac causa creari, ut, si unus malus esse voluisset, alter eum, habens potestatem similem, coerceret: Et placuit ne imperium longius, quam annum unum haberent: ne per diurnitatem potestatis insolentiores redderentur, sed civiles semper essent, qui se post annum scirent futuros esse privatos.”—Vide Tzschucke ad loc.

VII. ¹SED ea tempestate ²coepere se quisque extollere, magisque ingenium in promptu habere. Nam regibus ³boni, quam mali, suspectiores sunt, semperque his aliena virtus formidolosa est. Sed civitas, incredibile memoratu est, ⁴adepta libertate, quantum brevi creverit: tanta cupido gloriae incesserat. Jam primum juventus, ⁵simul laboris ac ⁶belli patiens erat, in castris ⁷per usum militiam discebat: magisque in decoris armis et ⁸militaribus equis, quam in scortis atque conviviis, lubidinem habebant. Igitur talibus viris non

¹ Sed. The connexion between the commencement of this chapter and what precedes, is as follows: Dum reges imperium habebant, nemo se extollere audebat et laborabat. Sed postquam libertas populo restituta, quisque gloriam querere et ingenium prompte agendo ostendere coepit.—ea tempestate, “at that particular period.” Tempestas and tempus very often differ like χαιρετός and χρονός in Greek, the former being limited to a more definite and particular period of time than the latter. ‘Ο μὲν Καισάρις δηλῶν ποιήσαται χρόνου, διὸν, ὅτε πόλεμος ἦν· Χρόνος δὲ πεποιητητα χρέων, διὸν, πεδία χρέων, ἡ, μετὰ δίκαια ἔτη. — Ammonius περὶ διαιφ. λεξ. ed. Valck.

² Coepere se quisque extollere, &c. “each one began to act with redoubled energy, and to display more openly the abilities which he possessed.” The common text has magis before extollere, which we have rejected with Cortius, as savouring of a gloss.—³ boni, “the talented.”—⁴ mali, “those of inferior intellects.”

⁴ Adepta libertate. Adipiscor, being a common verb, admits both this construction, as well as adepta libertatem with adepta in the nominative. It remains to be seen whether the Latin deponents be not in fact middle verbs, and whether the existence of common verbs be not a strong collateral proof of this.

⁵ Simul for simul ac. Compare Livy, (9. 26.) “intellecturosque id ita esse, simul magistratu abissent.” The common text of Sallust has “simul ac belli patiens erat, in castris per laborem usu militiam discebat.” The reading which we have adopted is given by Cortius partly from manuscripts and partly from conjecture.—⁶ belli. Military service among the Romans commenced at 17 years of age, and ended at 46, or, if we follow Livy, (43. 33.) at 50 years.—Vide Lips. de Milit. Rom. Dial. 2.

⁷ Per usum, “by experience,” or “actual service.”—⁸ militaribus equis, “war-horses.”

¹labos insolitus, non locus ullus asper, aut arduus erat, non armatus hostis formidolosus : ²virtus omnia domuerat. Sed gloriae maximum certamen inter ipsos erat : ³sese quisque hostem ferire, murum adscendere, conspicere dum ⁴tale facinus ficeret, properabat : ⁵eas divitias, eam bonam famam magnamque nobilitatem putabant : laudis avidi, pecuniae liberales erant : gloriam ingentem, ⁶divitias honestas volebant. Memorare possem, quibus in locis ⁷maxumas hostium copias populus Romanus parva manu fuderit, quas urbes, natura munitas, pugnando ceperit, ⁸ni ea res longius ab incepto traheret.

VIII. SED profecto Fortuna in omni re dominatur ; ea ⁹res cunctas, ex lubidine magis quam ex vero, ¹⁰celebrat obscuratque. Atheniensium res gestae, sicuti

¹ Labos. The Aeolo-Doric tribes were fond of β, as the Lacedaemonians, who said παπος, πόρ, σιος, for πάπος, πόνος, σιός, &c. Hence we may account for the Latin forms labor and labos, honor and honos, &c.—Vide Maittaire Dial. ed. Sturz. p. 196. — ² virtus omnia domuerat, “their valour had triumphed over every obstacle.”

³ Sese quisque, &c. Compare note 3, page 1. — ⁴ tale facinus, “such an exploit.” Facinus from faceret, denotes “a bold or daring action;” and, unless it be joined with a favourable epithet, or the action be previously described as commendable, the term is always to be understood in a vituperative sense. In the present case, the previous description of the action fixes its character.—Vide Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 159. 3d ed.

⁵ Eas divitias, &c. “these they considered riches, this an honourable fame,” &c. — ⁶ divitias honestas, “moderate wealth.” The expression divitias honestas is the same as divitias bonis artibus partus, ad eoque mediocres.

⁷ Maxumas, an archaism for maximas. — ⁸ ni ea res, &c. “were it not that such a detail would draw me off too far from my subject.” Ea res is regarded by some as an archaism for id; but this mode of expression occurs in the best writers, though Sallust uses it more frequently than others.

⁹ Res cunctas, for cuncta. Vid. preceding note. — ¹⁰ ex lubidine, “from caprice.” — ¹⁰ celebrat obscuratque, “raises to eminence or buries in oblivion.” — Compare Jug. 85. “Haec atque talia majores ego ¹aestumo, satis amplae magnificaequ fuere; verum aliquanto minores tamen, quam fama feruntur. Sed, quia provenere ibi ²scriptorum magna ingenia, per terrarum orbem Atheniensium facta pro maxunis celebrantur. Ita eorum qui fecere virtus tanta habetur, quantum verbis ³eam potuere extollere paeclara ingenia. At populo Romano nunquam ⁴ea copia fuit; quia ⁵prudentissimus quisque negotiosus maxume erat; ⁶ingenium nemo sine corpore exercebat; ⁷optumus quisque facere, quam dicere; sua ab aliis ⁸benefacta laudari, quam ipse aliorum narrare, malebat.

IX. ⁹Igitur domi militiaeque boni mores colebantur; concordia maxuma, minima avaritia erat; ¹⁰jus

vestri faciendo, seque remque publicam celebravere." — ¹ aestumo, an archaism for aestimo. Some editions read existimo.

² Scriptorum magna ingenia. More elegant than scriptores magni ingenii, which is, however, the meaning of the phrase: "writers of great talent." Compare Curtius, (3. 2. 13.) robora virorum, for viri robustissimi, and Catullus, (64. 4.) robora pubis, for adolescentes robusti. The writers to whom Sallust alludes are, without doubt, Herodotus, Thucydides, Xenophon, &c. Some critics have regarded scriptorum in this passage as a mere gloss, especially as some manuscripts omit it, and others place it after ingenia; but its presence is necessary to the sense.

³ Eam. Referring to virtutem understood. Some editors read ea, understanding facta. — ⁴ ea copia, "that advantage." Kuhnhardt thinks copia equivalent here to multitudo, but incorrectly we conceive. If his explanation, however, should be preferred, ea copia may be rendered, "the same number of able historians." — ⁵ prudentissimus quisque, &c. "the most talented were the most occupied with public affairs." — ⁶ ingenium nemo, &c. Referring to the martial habits of the early Romans, and the military service which was imposed upon all. — ⁷ optumus quisque, "the best citizens." — ⁸ benefacta, "brav. deeds."

⁹ Igitur. This conjunction refers back to chap. 7. from which chap. 8. is a digression. — ¹⁰ jus bonumque, "justice and probity." The expression which follows, non legibus magis quam natura, is strictly Thueydidean, and would be, when rendered into Greek, οὐ νόμοις μάλλον (or τὸ πλεῖστον) ἢ φύσι. — Compare the language of

bonumque apud eos, non legibus magis quam natura, valebat. ¹Jurgia, discordias, simultates, cum hostibus exercebant : cives cum civibus de virtute certabant : in ²suppliciis deorum magnifici, domi parci, ³in amicis fideles erant. Duabus his artibus, audacia in bello, ⁴ubi pax evenerat, aequitate, ⁵seque remque publicam curabant. Quarum rerum ego maxima documenta haec habeo ; ⁶quod saepius vindicatum est in eos, qui contra imperium in hostem pugnaverant, quique tardius, revocati, bello excesserant, quam qui signa relinqueret, aut, pulsi, loco cedere ausi erant ; in pace vero, quod

Tacitus (de Moribus Germ. 19.) “ plus ibi boni mores valent, quam alibi bona leges ;” “ Virtuous manners have more efficacy there, than good laws elsewhere ;” and also Virgil (Aen. 7. 202.)

“ Neve ignorare Latinos
Saturni gentem, haud vinclo nec legibus aequam, Sponte sua, veterisque dei se more tenentem.”

“ The Latins you shall find
Not forced to goodness, but by will inclined :
For since the time of Saturn's holy reign,
His hospitable customs we retain.”—Dryden.

¹ Jurgia, &c. cum hostibus exercebant. In opposition to later days, when citizen was arrayed against citizen.—² suppliciis, “ worship.” Supplicium signifies both “ punishment” and “ supplication,” “ worship,” or “ sacrifice.” Scheller's explanation is perfectly satisfactory. He makes the primitive import of the term, “ a kneeling down.” This may be done either to supplicate the deity, whence we have the kindred meaning of “ religious worship ;” or it may be for the purpose of being beheaded, whence we deduce the meaning of “ punishment.”—Scheller, Lateinisch-Deutsches Wörterb. s. v.

³ In amicis. Havercamp reads in amicos, which is the more usual form, though less in accordance with the style of Sallust.

⁴ Ubi pax evenerat. Sallust uses this mode of expression, and not in pace, for the purpose of showing that the Romans neither avoided war nor courted peace ; but, whenever the latter chanced to arrive, proved themselves not unworthy of enjoying it, by the justice and moderation of their conduct.—⁵ seque remque publicam, &c. “ they regulated their own conduct as well as the administration of the republic.”

⁶ Quod saepius, &c. Some editions have in bello before saepius. We have rejected it with Cortius, as being sufficiently implied from beneficiis, ¹quam metu, imperium ²agitabant, et, accepta injuria, ignoscere, quam persequi, malebant.

X. SED, ubi labore atque justitia respublica crevit, ³reges magni bello domiti, nationes ferae, et ⁴populi ingentes vi subacti, ⁵Carthago, aemula imperii Romani, ab stirpe interiit, cuncta maria terraeque patebant; saevire Fortuna, ac miscere omnia, coepit. Qui labores, pericula, dubias atque asperas res facile toleraverant, iis otium, divitiae ⁶optandae aliis, oneri miseriisque fuere. Igitur primo pecuniae, deinde imperii cupido crevit: ⁷ea quasi ⁸materies omnium malorum the context.—¹ quam metu. Understand magis, which is expressed in some editions.—² agitabant, for agebant. Vide note 10. page 3. Imperium agitabant, “they managed their authority.”

³ Reges magni, Perses, king of Macedonia; Jugurtha, king of Numidia; Mithridates, king of Pontus, &c.—⁴ populi, “communities.”

⁵ Carthago, a celebrated city of Africa, built by a colony of Phoenicians under Dido, and famed for its long and sanguinary contests with the Romans. (Vide Carthago, and Punicum Bellum, Lempriere's Class. Dict. Anthon's ed.) The name of the city is of Phoenician origin, Carthada, i.e. “the new city,” from the Syriac Karthahadath or Kartha-hadtha. Hence Solinus observes, “Carthadam dixit, quod Phoenicum ore exprimit novam civitatem,” and also Eustathius, ‘Ἐκάλεσε τὴν Δέσμων φωνῆν Καρινήν πόλιν. To the same effect are the words of Stephanus Byzantinus, Ἐκαλεῖτο δὲ καὶ νῦν πόλις. The Greeks changed Carthada into Καρχηδόνα, while they called the inhabitants Καρχηδόνες. (Compare the Sicilian usage of χ for θ, e. g. ἐργάχεσσε for ἐργάθεσσε. Salmus. in Solin. p. 322.) The Latin form Carthago came to the Romans through the medium of the Spaniards, as Bochart states: “Ab Hispanis interpolatum, quibus gama est dama, et golphin delphin, et tortuga testudo.” Bochart. Geog. Sacr. I. 24. As the Romans were acquainted with the Carthaginians before they met them in Spain, we feel very doubtful as to the accuracy of Bochart's remark, if we rightly understand its meaning.

⁶ Optandae. Agrees with divitiae, the nearest noun.—⁷ ea, referring to “cupidity” and “thirst for dominion:” pecuniae et imperii cupido.

⁸ Materies, “the germ.”

fuerere. Namque avaritia fidem, probitatem, ceterasque ¹artis bonas subvertit; pro his, superbiam, crudelitatem, deos ²neglegere, omnia venalia habere, edocuit: ambitio multos mortalibus ³falsos fieri subget; ⁴aliud clausum in pectore, aliud in lingua promptum habere; amicitias inimicitiasque, non ⁵ex re, sed ex commodo, aestumare; ⁶magisque vultum, quam ingenium bonum habere. Haec primo paullatim crescere, interdum vindicari: ⁷post, ubi, contagio quasi, pestilentia invaserit, civitas immutata; imperium, ex justissimo atque optumo, crudele intolerandumque factum.

XI. SED primo magis ambitio, quam avaritia, animos hominum exercebat: quod tamen vitium proprius ⁸virtutem erat. Nam gloriam, honorem, imperium,

¹ Artis bonas, "virtues." — ² neglegere, an archaism for negligere. The infinitives neglegere and habere depend on edocuit, in common with superbiam and crudelitatem. "The neglect of the Gods, universal venality." — ³ falsos, "treacherous," or "insincere."

⁴ Aliud clausum in pectore, &c. Compare Homer, Il. 9. 313.

'Εχθρὸς γάρ μοι καίνες ἐμῆς Αἴδης πύλην, Οὐ χ' ἔτερον μὲν καίνεις ἵν φέσειν, ἀλλὰ δὲ βάζει.

"Hateful to me as the gates of hell is he who conceals one thing in his mind and utters another."

And the spirited version of Voss:

"Denn mir verhasst ist jener, so sehr wie des Aides pforten, Wer ein anderes birgt in der brust, und ein anderes aussagt."

⁵ Ex re, "from their real importance." — ⁶ magisque vultum, &c. "and to preserve rather a fair exterior than rectitude of principle." — ⁷ post, ubi, &c. Great doubt prevails respecting the true punctuation of this sentence. We have adopted that which is given by Cortius, making contagio an ablative from the old form contagium: (Contagio quasi, "by a sort of moral contagion.") The Bipont edition removes the comma after quasi, placing one after contagio, and another after pestilentia. Contagio then becomes the nominative to invaserit. In either reading, contagio has vitiorum understood.

⁸ Virtutem. Governed by ad understood. The preposition is

¹bonus, ignavus, aeque sibi exoptant: sed ille ²vera via nititur; huic quia bonae artes desunt, dolis atque fallaciis contendit. Avaritia pecuniae ³studium habet, quam nemo sapiens concupivit: ea, quasi ⁴venenis malis imbuta, corpus animumque virilem effemina: semper infinita, insatiabilis, ⁵neque copia, neque inopia, minuitur. Sed, postquam L. Sulla, armis ⁶recepta supplied in Plautus, Mil. Glor. 4. 6. 55. “Si accesserit prope ad te;” and Mostell. 2. 2. 30. “Fuge ad me proprius.” Some editions of Sallust give virtuti, which makes no alteration in the meaning.

¹ Bonus, ignavus, “the man of merit, and he who is devoid of it.”

—² Vera via, “by the true path,” i. e. by honourable means.—

³ Studium habet, “implies the desire.”

⁴ Venenis malis, “with poisons.” Venenum, like facinus, &c. is what the grammarians call medium nomen. It properly signifies “that which, by its penetrating influence, changes the natural qualities of any thing.” As this may be either beneficial or injurious, venenum hence may indicate in the latter case “a poison,” and in the former, “a drug,” “a medicine,” “a colouring matter.” In this passage Sallust uses the term in its strict acceptation, and therefore adds the qualifying adjective; so that venenis malis, when literally rendered, will signify “with pernicious (or poisonous) drugs,” i. e. poisons. This, after all, however, is somewhat of an affected archaism on the part of our historian, since the purest Latin writers are accustomed to use the word venenum, when standing alone, in a bad sense, without employing any adjective. The old form of expression occurs in a law cited by Cicero (pro Cluen' 54.), “Qui venenum malum fecit,” &c. Compare Ernesti and Schütz, Index Lat. Cic. s. v. The term φάρμακον is another well known instance of a medium nomen. Herodotus uses it to express colours, (l. 98.) τρομαχίανς ἥνδεσίναι φάρμακοι: “Battlements coloured with different compositions.”—Vide Koen, ad Greg. Dialect. (Ion. 94.), and Schweigh. Lex. Herod. s. v.

⁵ Neque copia, &c. The idea intended to be conveyed is this: He who possesses much is as strongly influenced by the desire of having more, as he whose present resources are scanty; and while want urges on the latter, the possession of abundant means does not quench the thirst for gain in the former. The desire of wealth makes both of them its slaves.

⁶ Recepta republica, “having wrested the state from the hands of republica, ¹ex bonis initiiis malos eventus habuit; ²rapere omnes, trahere, domum alius, alius agros cupere; ³neque modum, neque modestiam victores habere, foeda crudeliaque ⁴in civibus facinora facere. Huc accedebat, quod L. Sulla exercitum, ⁵quem in Asia ductaverat, quo sibi fidum faceret, contra morem magorum, luxuriose nimisque liberaliter habuerat; loca ⁶amoena, voluptaria, facile in otio ferocis militum animos molliverant. Ibi primum insuevit exercitus populi his opponents." Alluding to Sylla's final overthrow of the Marian faction.—¹ Ex bonis initiiis, &c. " caused a fair beginning to be succeeded by an evil issue." The first acts of Sylla, upon his attaining to the unlimited controul of the state, augured well for its interests. He favoured the party of the nobility, which Marius, plebeian in origin, had always sought to depress; and he seemed on the point also of reviving the ancient constitution. The mask, however, was soon dropped, and the most horrid excesses ensued. Compare Velleius Paterculus (2. 25.), " Putares Sullam venisse in Italiam, non belli vindicem, sed pacis auctorem, &c.—You would think that Sylla came into Italy, not to make war, but to conciliate peace," &c. and also Cicero (de Off. 2. 8.), " Secuta est honestam causam non honesta Victoria.—A virtuous cause was followed by a shameful victory."

² Rapere omnes, &c. Rapere, trahere, &c. are historical infinitives, and may be made to depend on cooperunt understood, if such an ellipsis be thought advisable. (Vide page 15. note 9.) As regards the scenes mentioned in the text, compare Plutarch, (Vit. Syll. 31. ed. Hulten. vol. iii. p. 230.) Ἀλλὰ καὶ λίγειν ἵστησι τοῖς κολάζουσιν, ὡς τόνδε μὲν ἀργέστες οὐκα μεγάλη, τόνδε δὲ κῆπος, ἃλλον ὕδατα περιπάτησι.

³ Neque modum, &c. " the victors knew no limit, and practised no self-restraint."—⁴ In civibus. The common text has in cives. The present reading was first given by Wasse, from a manuscript. " Pereleganter," observes the critic, in speaking of this lection, " nescio an vere, certe supra captum librariorum." He then refers in support of it to Virgil, Aen. 2. 540. Ovid. Met. 1. 442. Cic. N. D. 42. &c.—⁵ Quem in Asia ductaverat. Cortius reads Asiam, giving in the force of intra.

⁶ Amoena. Amoenus most commonly denotes what is pleasing to the eye, while voluptarius properly refers to the senses. The Romani ¹amare, potare; signa, tabulas pictas, vasaelata mirari; ea ²privatum ac publice rapere; ³delubra spoliare; sacra profanaque omnia polluere. Igitur hi milites, postquam victoriam adepti sunt, nihil reliqui victis fecere. Quippe secundae res sapientium animos ⁴fatigant: ⁵ne illi, corruptis moribus, victoriae temperarent.

XII. ⁶POSTQUAM divitiae honori coepere, et eas gloria, imperium, potentia sequebatur; hebescere virtus, paupertas probro haberi, ⁷innocentia pro malivoexpressions in the text may be rendered as follows: "a delightful country, the abode of pleasure." — ¹*Amare, potare*, "to indulge in the excesses of licentiousness and intoxication." Potare is "to drink to excess," "to be addicted to drinking." "Bibunt sobrii, ad naturae necessitatem; potant ebriosi affluenter, et ad ebrietatem." (Popma.) As Sallust means to say that the Roman soldiers had acquired in Asia the habit of drinking to excess, bibere would evidently have been inadmissible in the text.

² Privatum ac publice, "whether the property of individuals or communities." — ³*Delubra*. Delubrum, properly speaking, is merely a small chapel, or part of a temple; or, as Noltenius (Lex. Antibarb.) defines it, "Aedicula, in qua stat Dei cuiusdam simulacrum; parvum templum, vel pars templi." The Capitol was called Templum, in which there were three Delubra inclosed by a common wall, namely Jupiter's, Juno's, and Minerva's. In this passage of Sallust the word may be rendered "shrines."

⁴ Fatigant. A strong expression: sapientium animos fatigant, "shakes the principles of the wise." — ⁵*Ne*, used for ne dum, "much less." Temperare with the dative, signifies "to set bounds to something," "to moderate." With the accusative it means "to regulate," "to arrange."

⁶ Postquam, &c. Compare Sallust (Ep. 2. de Rep. ordin. c. 6.), "Ubi divitiae clarae habentur, ibi omnia bona vilia sunt, fides, probitas, pudor, pudicitia;" and also Juvenal (Sat. 6. 294.)

" Nullum crimen abest facinusque libidinis, ex quo Paupertas Romana perit." —

" Yes, since the good old poverty is fled, Vice, like a deluge, o'er the state has spread." —Gifford.

⁷ Innocentia, &c. "a life of innocence in another was regarded as the mere offspring of a malevolent feeling;" i.e. they gave him lentia duci coepit. Igitur, ex divitiis, juventutem luxuria atque avaritia, cum superbia, invasere : ¹rapere, consumere ; sua parvi pendere, aliena cupere ; ²pudorem, pudicitiam, divina atque humana promiscua, nihil pensi atque moderati habere. Operae pretium est, quum domos atque villas cognoveris in urbium modum exaedificatas, visere templa deorum, quae nostri majores, religiosissimi mortales, fecere. ³Verum illi delubra deorum pietate, domos ⁴sua gloria decabant ; neque victis quidquam, ⁵praeter injuriae licentiam, eripiebant. At hi contra, ignavissimi homines, per summum scelus, omnia ea sociis adimere, quae fortissimi viri ⁶victores reliquerant : proinde quasi injuriam facere, id demum esset imperio uti.

XIII. NAM quid ea memorem, quae, nisi iis qui who led a virtuous life no credit for sincerity, but supposed him to be actuated merely by a spirit of malevolent opposition, and a wish to set his own mode of life in direct contrast with that of the profigate, in order that it might carry with it a tacit censure on the conduct of the latter.

¹ Rapere, consumere, “ they plundered, they wasted.” — ² Pudorem, pudicitiam, &c. “ Modesty, chastity, things divine and human without distinction, they utterly disregarded, and in their violation of them acted without the least compunction or self-restraint.” Seneca (de Benef. 1. 9.) has borrowed some of his ideas and expressions from this and the preceding passages of Sallust: “ Jam rapta spargere, sparsa pari avaritia recolligere certant: nihil pensi habere, paupertatem alienam contemnere, suam timere, nullum aliud vereri in alium,” &c.

³ Verum. This term is used here to denote strong indignation. Compare the remarks of Drakenborth (ad Liv. 45. 19.) on the emphatic vero. — ⁴ Sua. Some editions read suas, which is inferior in point of strength.

⁵ Praeter injuriae licentiam, “ except the power of injuring.”

⁶ Victores. Some manuscripts have victis instead of victores; but the former is implied in the latter, and therefore need not be expressed. Other manuscripts give hostibus; but this again is already implied in the term sociis. “ Quasi socios istos,” observes Cortius, “ non olim hostes fuisse, per se constet.”

videre, nemini credibilia sunt : a privatis compluribus subversos montes, maria¹ constructa esse : quibus mihi videntur ludibrio fuisse divitiae ; quippe, quas honeste habere licebat, abuti per² turpidinem properabant. Sed lubido ganeae, ceterique³ cultus, non minor incesserat : ⁴ vescendi caussa, terra marique omnia exquirere ; dormire prius, quam somni cupidus esset ; non famem, aut sitim neque frigus, neque lassitudinem opperiri, sed ea omnia⁵ luxu antecapere. Haec juventutem, ubi familiares opes defecerant ad facinora incendebant. Animus imbutus malis artibus haud facile⁶ libidinibus

¹ Constructa, "built up," or "constructed." The historian refers to the piscinae, or fish-ponds, which the wealthy Romans caused to be formed, generally on the sea-shore, by the damming-up of the waters, and which were commonly of such vast dimensions as almost to deserve the name of seas. Some editions, however, read constrata, "built upon," referring to the splendid residences of many of the Roman nobility, built on large artificial moles projecting into the sea. Contracta, which other manuscripts present, is probably a mere gloss. If otherwise considered, it may be supposed to allude to the encroachments made upon the limits of the ocean by these moles and marine palaces. Compare, as regards this last reading, Horace, (Carm. 3. I. 33.), "Contracta pisces aequora sentiunt," &c.

² Turpidinem, an old form for turpitudinem. The nominative turrido occurs in Tertullian, (de Cor. Mil. c. 14.) "Turrido et decoratio." Gesner, however, thinks this an error for turpitude, but without any necessity.

³ Cultus, "luxurious habits."

⁴ Vescendi caussa, "for the sake of gratifying the appetite."

⁵ Luxu, "by luxurious indulgence." On this whole passage, compare Seneca (Epist. 89. ad fin.), Aulus Gellius (7. 16.), in his extract from Varro's Satire περὶ ἀπομάτων, and Lucan (4. 373.)

"O prodiga rerum
Luxuries, numquam parvo contenta paratu,
Et quae sitorum terra pelagoque ciborum Ambitiosa fames."

"Behold! ye sons of luxury, behold!
Who scatter in excess your lavish gold;
You who the wealth of frugal ages waste,
Th' indulge a wanton supercilious taste:
For whom all earth, all ocean, are explored."—Rowe.

⁶ Lubidinibus. More commonly written libidinibus. The whole carebat: eo profusius omnibus modis quaestui atque sumptui deditus erat.

XIV. ¹In tanta tamque corrupta civitate, Catilina, id quod factu facillimum erat, omnium ²flagitiorum atque facinorum circum se, tamquam stipatorum, cattervas habebat. Nam, quicumque impudicus, adulter, bona patria laceraverat; quiique alienum aes grande conflaverat, ³quo flagitium aut facinus redimeret; praeterea, omnes undique parricidae, sacrilegi, ⁴convicti judiciis, aut pro factis judicium timentes; ad hoc, ⁵quos manus atque lingua perjurio aut sanguine civili alebat; postremo, omnes quos flagitium, egestas, conclause may be rendered as follows: "The heart, corrupted by evil inclinations, could not easily forego the gratification of its vicious propensities."

¹ In tanta tamque corrupta civitate, &c. The student will observe with what peculiar force the mention of Catiline's conspiracy is re-introduced after the masterly picture of Roman corruption which has just preceded.

² Flagitiorum atque facinorum. For flagitosorum atque facinororum, the abstract for the concrete: "Of all kinds of profligate and daring spirits." Facinus, as we have already observed in a previous note, means a bold or daring action. Flagitium, though generally referring to lustful excess, denotes any fault, error, or crime, which reflects more or less disgrace on the offender; and implies a less degree of moral guilt than scelus.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 162. 3d ed.

³ Quo flagitium aut facinus redimeret, "in order to purchase impunity for some disgraceful or daring offence."

⁴ Convicti judiciis, "persons convicted on trial."

⁵ Quos manus, &c. Manus refers to sanguine civili, lingua to perjurio.—Compare Cicero (2. in Cat. 4.), "Quis tota Italia veneficus, quis gladiator, quis latro, quis sicarius, quis parricida, quis testamentorum subjector, quis circumscriptor, quis ganeo, quis nepos, quis adulter, quae mulier infamis, quis corruptor juventutis, quis corruptus, quis perditus inveniri potest, qui se cum Catilina non familiariſſime vixisse fateatur?"—What poisoner is to be found in all Italy, what gladiator, what robber, what assassin, what paricide, what forger of wills, what sharper, what debauchee, what squan-

scius animus exagitabat; ii Catilinae ¹proxumi familiaresque erant. Quod si quis etiam a culpa vacuu in amicitiam ejus ²inciderat, quotidiano usu atque illecebribus facile ³par similisque ceteris efficiebatur. Sed maxume adolescentium familiaritates adpetebat: eoderer, what adulterer, what harlot, what corrupter of youth, what corrupted wretch, what abandoned criminal, who will not own an intimate familiarity with Catiline?"—Duncan.

¹ Proxumi familiaresque, "bosom friends and intimate companions."

² Inciderat, a metaphor taken from prey that falls into the trap or net of the hunter.

³ Par similisque. Par refers to quantity, similis to quality: hence the clause may be rendered, "as guilty and as vicious as the rest." "Par and similis," observes Hill, "are often found qualifying one subject, and are allied as denoting progress in their respective categories of quantity and quality. We find an expression approved of by one of the ablest critics of antiquity, in which the difference between par and similis has got his sanction, and is very clearly and happily couched." Speaking of Sallust and Livy, he says, "nisi egregie dixisse videtur Servilius Novianus, pares eos magis quam similes." (Quintil. 10. 1.) "According to the judicious remarks of Servilius Novianus, who said they were more equal than alike." Their merit, as historians, he insinuates, might bear a comparison, as coming near the same standard, but the particular talents that constituted this merit were by no means like. Livy also supports the distinction stated, in the following sentence: "Haerente adhuc memoria Macedonici triumphi Lucius Anicius triumphavit de rege Gentio. Similia omnia magis visa hominibus quam paria." (Liv. 45. 43.) "While people yet retained in memory the celebration of the Macedonian conquest, Lucius Anicius triumphed over King Gentius. These exhibitions were considered rather as similar than equal." "The circumstances in which Anicius and Aemilius were placed were by no means the same; and, from the superior advantages enjoyed by the latter, his conquests were proportionably more important, and his triumph more splendid. Still, however, men compared the exploits and the reward of the conquerors, which, it appeared, were similar in kind, but were not to be measured by one rule."—Hill's Synonymes, p. 49. 4to. ed. 1804.

rum animi molles et aetate fluxi, dolis haud difficulter capiebantur. Nam, uti cujusque studium ex aetate flagrabat, aliis scorta praebere; aliis canes atque equos mercari; postremo, neque sumptui, neque modestiae suae parcere, dum illos³ obnoxios fidosque faceret.

XV. JAM primum adolescens Catilina multa nefanda stupra fecerat; cum⁴ virgine nobili, cum⁵ sacerdote

¹ Aetate fluxi, "pliant in consequence of their years."

² Modestiae suae, "his own honour."

³ Obnoxios, "dependant upon." Obnoxius properly denotes a dependance founded upon a consciousness of crime, and a dread of being exposed to punishment in case we disobey him who is privy to our guilt.

⁴ Cum virgine nobili. Who the female here alluded to was, is not clearly ascertained. It is generally thought, that the historians of those times suppressed the name out of respect for the noble lineage to which she belonged. The daughter who was the offspring of this intercourse is spoken of by Plutarch (Vit. Cic. 10. ed. Hutton. vol. v. p. 318.), and is referred to by Cicero (Frag. Orat. in tog. cand. ed. Ernesti, vol. vii. p. 1052.) "Cum ex eodem stupro," &c.

⁵ Sacerdote Vestae. The vestal of whom mention is here made was Fabia Terentia. She was brought to trial by Clodius for a violation of her vow. Several of the most respectable citizens, however, either convinced of her innocence, or wishing to thwart the tribune, exerted themselves in her defence with such success, that she not only obtained sentence of acquittal, but her prosecutor was obliged to flee from Rome. Cato, Catulus, and Cicero, espoused her cause. She was the sister of Terentia the wife of Cicero. In the picture which Cicero draws of the scandalous misdeeds of Catiline, no mention is made by him of this incident, probably out of respect for his sister-in-law. The Vestal virgins were introduced at Rome by Numa, in imitation of a similar priesthood existing at Alba. They were originally four in number. Two were subsequently added by Tarquinus Priscus, or by Servius Tullius, and six continued to be the number ever after. These priestesses had charge of the sacred fire, and were bound to inviolable chastity.—When convicted of dishonour, they were buried alive in the campus sceleratus, and their paramours scourged to death in the forum.—Vide Lipsius de Vesta et Vestalibus, Antv. 1603.

Vestae, alia hujuscemodi contra ¹jus fasque. Postremo, captus amore ²Aureliae Orestillae, cuius, praeter formam, nihil unquam bonus laudavit; quod ea ³nubere illi dubitabat, timens ⁴privignum adulta aetate; pro certo creditur, ⁵necato filio, ⁶vacuam domum scelestis nuptiis fecisse. Quae quidem res mihi in primis videatur causa fuisse facinoris maturandi. Namque animus impurus, ⁷dis hominibusque infestus, neque vigiliis, neque quietibus sedari poterat; ⁸ita conscientia men-

¹ Jus fasque, “human and divine law.” Thus Isidorus (Orig. 5. 11.) remarks, “Fas lex divina est, jus lex humana.”

² Aureliae Orestillae. The sister or daughter of Cneius Aurelius Orestis, who was praetor A. U. C. 677.

³ Nubere. The distinction between nubere and ducere must be attended to by the student. Ducere, “to marry,” or “to take in marriage,” is used when a man is the subject of discourse, or the nominative to the verb. Nubere, “to veil,” or duci, “to be led,” is used when a woman is the subject of discourse, or nominative to the verb. The ellipsis is supplied in the case of the former verb by domum, in the latter by se. Thus, Itane tandem uxorem (domum) duxit Antipho? because the husband led the bride to his own abode from her father's house. Tullio (se) nupsit, literally, “she has veiled herself for Tullius,” because the bride was veiled during the ceremony of marriage. The same distinction holds good in Greek between γαμίω and γαμιόω, although depending on a different explanation. Thus γαμίω, “I marry,” is said of the husband, (uxorem duco), but γαμιόω, in the middle voice, “I suffer, or permit, or cause myself to be led away in marriage by another,” is said of the female, (nubo). Compare Kuster, de verbis mediis, p. 153.

⁴ Privignum, “a son of his by a previous marriage.”

⁵ Necato filio. Cicero alludes to this horrid deed in his first oration against Catiline, (c. 6.) Valerius Maximus is more explicit, (9. 1. 9.) He makes Catiline to have despatched his son with poison, (veneno sustulit).

⁶ Vacuam domum, &c. “he freed his home from every obstacle to this most wicked marriage.”

⁷ Dis hominibusque infestus. “Obnoxious to the hatred of gods and men.” Infestus is here used in what the grammarians denominate a passive sense.

⁸ Ita conscientia, &c. A powerful expression. “To such a degree did conscience desolate his tortured spirit.” Some editions read vera- tem excitam vastabat. Igitur ¹colos exsanguis, ²foedi oculi, citus modo, modo tardus incessus; prorsus in ³facie vultuque recordia inerat.

XVI. ⁴Sed juventutem, quam, ut supra diximus, illexerat, multis modis mala facinora edocebat. Ex illis testes signatoresque falsos ⁵commodare; ⁶fidem, fortunas, pericula vilia habere; post, ⁷ubi eorum famam atque pudorem attriverat, majora alia imperabat: si caussa peccandi in praesens minus suppettebat; nihil minus ⁸insontes, sicuti sontes, ⁹circumvenire, jugulare: bat, others versabut. Both lections are inferior to the one which we have given.

¹ Colos exsanguis, “his complexion was deadly pale.”

² Foedi oculi, “his eyes were ghastly.”

³ Facie vultuque. The difference between these terms is worth observing. Facies denotes the features, vultus the expression of the whole countenance.

⁴ Sed juventutem, &c. The commencement of this chapter is connected with the end of the 14th; and chapter 15. intervenes as a digression.

⁵ Commodare, “he supplied,” or “lent out to others.”

⁶ Fidem, fortunas, “he regarded their good faith, their consideration in the eyes of the world, the perils which they encountered, as things of little value,” i. e. he taught them to despise these things. “Ce mot,” observes Dureau de Lamalle, in a note on fortunas, “ne peut signifier ici richesses, comme l'a traduit Beauzée; car assurément ni Catilina ni ses complices ne pouvaient être indifférents sur les richesses, puisque pour en acquérir ils ne s'epargnaient ni bassesses ni crimes. Fortuna au pluriel me semble exprimer ici cet éclat de considération qui entoure les hommes d'un certain rang, quand leur réputation est irréprochable; et cette considération, fortunae, ne pouvait manquer d'être compromise par toutes les manœuvres que Catilina commandait à ses émissaires. ‘Fortunae,’ dit Gesner, ‘totum illum statum quo censemur felices aut infelices notare solet.’”

⁷ Ubi eorum famam, &c. “when he had worn away their character and sense of shame.” Attriverat beautifully expresses the insidious arts and gradual approaches of Catiline.

⁸ Insontes, “those who had given him no cause of offence.”

⁹ Circumvenire; this infinitive, and also jugulare, are governed by imperabat understood.

scilicet, ne per otium torpescerent ¹manus aut animus, ²gratuito potius malus atque crudelis erat. His amicis sociisque confisus Catilina, simul ³quod aes alienum per omnis terras ingens erat, et quod plerique Sullani milites, largius suo usi, ⁴rapinarum et victoriae veteris memores, civile bellum ⁵exoptabant; ⁶opprimundae reipublicae consilium cepit. In Italia nullus exercitus:
 Cn. Pompeius in extremis ⁷terris bellum gerebat: ipsi

¹ Manus. The nominative plural.

² Gratuito, "without any views of advantage."—Compare Seneca (de Clem. 2. 4.), "Qui ignotos homines et obvios, non in compendiun, sed occidendi causa occidunt."

³ Quod aes alienum, &c. "because debts were heavy throughout all lands;" i. e. because many citizens as well as others were involved in heavy debts in every quarter of the Roman world. This was the natural consequence of wide-spread luxury.

⁴ Rapinarum et victoriae, &c. Sylla, after the final success of his arms, had assigned large tracts of lands in Italy to his armed followers, and also the possessions of many of the proscribed. Extravagant and dissolute living, however, soon scattered this ill-gotten wealth, and consequent poverty made them ripe for any new commotion in the state. "Hi sunt homines," observes Cicero, "ex iis coloniis, quas Sulla constituit; coloni, qui se insperatis repentinisque pecuniis sumtuosius insolentiusque jactarunt: hi dum aedificant, tamquam beati, dum praediis, lecticis, familiis magnis, convivis apparatis delectantur, in tantum aes alienum incidunt, ut, si salvi esse velint, Sulla sit iis ab inferis excitandus." (2. in Cat. 9.) "These came mostly from the colonies planted by Sylla; coming many of them to the sudden and unexpected possession of great wealth, they run into all the excesses of luxury and profusion. These, by building fine houses, by affluent living, splendid equipages, numerous attendants, and sumptuous entertainments, have plunged themselves so deeply in debt, that, in order to retrieve their affairs, they must recall Sylla from his tomb."

—Duncan.

⁵ Exoptabant, "earnestly desired." Exoptare, from ex and optare, "to wish for a thing out and out," i. e. "to wish for, or desire, a thing exceedingly."—Butler's Praxis on the Latin Prepositions, p. 188.

⁶ Opprimundae reipublicae, "of crushing the republic."

⁷ Terris. Pontus and Armenia. Pompey held this important command by virtue of the Manilian Law, proposed by the tribune Manilius, and defended by Cicero in an oration still extant.

¹consulatum petundi magna spes : ²senatus nihil sane intentus : tutae tranquillaeque res omnes : sed ea prorsus opportuna Catilinae.

XVII. Igitur circiter ³Kalendas Junias, ⁴L. Caesare

¹ Consulatum petundi. Ursinus proposes petenti, which is the reading of three manuscripts, on the ground that Catiline was already a candidate for the consulship. Amid the various opinions which have been advanced, we consider that of Planche the most correct. The period referred to in the text is the beginning of the year of Rome 690: not long previous to this (A. U. C. 688), Catiline, returning from the government of Africa, was accused of extortion, and prevented from suing for the consulship, in consequence of this charge pending at the time. He was acquitted A. U. C. 689, and might therefore entertain "the hope of standing candidate for the consulship" at the commencement of the ensuing year.

² Senatus nihil sane intentus. "The senate without any distrust," or "entirely unapprehensive of danger."

³ Kalendas Junias. The Roman Calendar agreed with our own, in the number of months, and of the days in each; but instead of reckoning in an uninterrupted series, from the first to the thirty-first, they had three points from which their days were counted. 1. The Calends or Kalends, which were always the first day of the month. They received their name from the old verb calare, because the priests, who had the charge of the Calendar, were required to proclaim the first day of the month publicly to the people, and to mention at the same time the number of days between the Calends and the Nones. This last was done, because it behoved the people who lived in the country to assemble in the city on the Nones of each month, in order to be informed by the rex sacrorum of the feasts and holidays, and to learn in general what they had to do, in regard to sacred matters, during that month. 2. The Nones were, in the months of March, May, July, and October, on the seventh; in all other months on the fifth. They were so called because there were nine days, counting inclusively, between them and the Ides. 3. The Ides were on the fifteenth of March, May, July, and October, and on the thirteenth of the other months. They were so named from the old verb iduare, because they nearly divided the month. The Romans always counted forwards to the Calends, Nones, or Ides, never backwards from them.

et ⁵C. Figulo consulibus, primo singulos adpellare :
hortari alios, ⁶alios tentare : opes suas, imparatam republicam, magna praemia coniurationis docere.
Ubi satis explorata sunt, quae voluit, in unum omnis convocat, ⁷quibus maxima necessitudo, et plurim-um audaciae. Eo convenere, ⁸senatorii ordinis, ⁹P.

After the first day of the month, therefore, they began to reckon so many days before the Nones ; after the Nones, so many days before the Ides ; after the Ides, so many days before the Calends of the next month. It is to be observed, that the Romans, in computing their time, always included the day from which, and also the day to which, they reckoned : thus they called the 1st January Calendae, the 31st December pridie Calendas or Calendarum, and the 30th, not secundo, but tertio (ante) Calendas.—The year of the city when the circumstances mentioned in the text took place, was A. U. C. 690, B. C. 64.

⁴ L. Caesare. The sister of this consul was married to Lentulus, one of the conspirators, who was subsequently put to death. This L. Caesar was a relation of Julius Caesar's, and a maternal uncle of Marcus Antonius.

⁵ C. Figulo. C. Marcius Figulus, who, before his adoption into the family of the Marci, was named Minucius Thermus.—Compare Cic. de Leg. 2. 25. id. ep. ad Att. 1. 2.

⁶ Alios tentare, “ he sounded others.”

⁷ Quibus maxima necessitudo, &c. “ who laboured under the greatest want, and possessed the largest share of boldness.” Necesi- tudo is here taken in its primitive meaning. It signifies more commonly the tie of relationship, &c.

⁸ Senatoriali ordinis. See APPENDIX, A.

⁹ P. Lentulus Sura. This individual was of the house of the Cornelii. The censors expelled him from the senate, after he had held the office of consul. To obtain readmission into that body, he subsequently sued for and obtained the praetorship. He was praetor at the very time of the conspiracy, and was strangled in prison. Plutarch informs us that he received the surname of Sura in consequence of having wasted a large sum of the public money in his quaestorship under Sulla, who, enraged at his conduct, demanded a state of his accounts in the senate ; when Lentulus, with the utmost indifference, declared he had no accounts to produce, and contemptuously presented to him the calf of his leg (sura). Among the Ro-

Lentulus Sura, ¹P. Autronius, ²L. Cassius Longinus, ³C. Cethegus, ⁴P. et Servius Sullae, Servii filii, ⁵L. Vargunteius, ⁶Q. Annus, ⁷M. Porcius Laeca, ⁸L. Bestia, mans, particularly among the boys, the player at tennis, who missed his stroke, presented the calf of his leg, to receive as a punishment a certain number of strokes upon it.

¹ P. Autronius, Cicero's fellow-pupil in boyhood, and colleague in the quaestorship. In the year after the suppression of the conspiracy (A. U. C. 692), he, together with Cassius, Laeca, Vargunteius, Servius Sulla, and Caius Cornelius, suffered sentence of banishment under the Plautian law.

² L. Cassius Longinus, mentioned in the preceding note, stood candidate for the consulship together with Catiline, and having failed in his object, became an accomplice in the conspiracy. According to Cicero, he took upon himself the execution of that part of the plan which related to the burning of the city. From his extraordinary corpulence, the fatness of Cassius (Cassii adeps) became a proverbial expression.

³ C. Cethegus. This individual belonged, like Lentulus, to the house of the Cornelii. In the civil wars he first espoused the party of Marius, afterwards that of Sylla. According to Cicero, he surpassed Catiline himself in rashness and audacity. He was strangled in prison, along with Lentulus, Statilius, and others of the conspirators.

⁴ P. et Servius Sullae. Publius Cornelius Sulla and Servius Cornelius Sulla were the sons of Servius Cornelius Sulla, who was brother of the dictator. Publius does not seem to have been implicated in the conspiracy, since, on being afterwards accused of this, he was defended, and with success, by Cicero.

⁵ L. Vargunteius. Not much is known of this person. He had been previously accused of bribery, and defended by Hortensius. Compare Cic. pro Sylla, c. 2.

⁶ Q. Annus. The president De Brosses thinks that this was the same individual who cut off the head of Marcus Antonius the orator, and brought it to Marius.

⁷ M. Porcius Laeca. Of the same house or gens with the Catos, so famous in Roman history, but of a different family.

⁸ L. Bestia, of the house of the Calpurnii, and tribune of the commons in the last month of Cicero's consulship. He was afterwards Aedile, A. U. C. 696, and stood candidate subsequently for the praetorship. Being convicted, however, of bribery, he was com-

¹Q. Curius : praeterea ex equestri ordine, ²M. Fulvius Nobilior, ³L. Statilius, ⁴P. Gabinius Capito, ⁵C. Cornelius : ad hoc multi ex ⁶coloniis et municipiis, ⁷domi nobiles. Erant praeterea complures paullo occultius consilii hujusce participes ⁸nobiles, quos magis domipelled to go into exile. On being recalled by Caesar, he endeavoured, though without success, to obtain the office of consul.

¹ Q. Curius. A descendant of the same house which produced Manius Curius Dentatus, the famous opponent of Pyrrhus. He was the most noted gambler of his time. Rewards were publicly decreed to him by the senate for having discovered the conspiracy; but these he never obtained, on account of the opposition of Caesar, whom he had named among the accomplices of Catiline. Compare Sueton. Vit. Caes. 17.

² M. Fulvius Nobilior. He was exiled, A. U. C. 699.—Cic. Ep. ad Att. 4. 16. See APPENDIX, B.

³ L. Statilius. The family of the Statili were well known in the time of the second Punic war. Of this individual we possess no farther information than what is connected with the history of this conspiracy. He was strangled in prison.

⁴ P. Gabinius Capito. Cicero gives him the cognomen of Cimber, and states that he was addicted to every species of wickedness. (Cic. 3. in Cat. 3.) He was strangled in prison.

⁵ C. Cornelius. A member of the plebeian branch of the Cornelian house. He was the individual who undertook, with L. Vargunteius, to murder Cicero at his own house.

⁶ Coloniis et municipiis. A colony was a portion of Roman citizens or Latin allies sent out by public authority, either to take possession of lands captured in war, and to found thereon a new city, or to occupy cities which had fallen under the Roman sway. The municipia were foreign towns, whose inhabitants obtained the rights of Roman citizens. Of these there were different kinds. Some possessed all the rights of Roman citizens, except such as could not be enjoyed without residing at Rome. Others enjoyed the right of serving in the Roman legion, but had not the right of voting and of obtaining civil offices. The appellation is derived from manus and capiro.

⁷ Domi nobiles. Domi is here equivalent to in civitatibus suis.

⁸ Nobiles. In this expression the author is thought to have included C. Julius Caesar, M. Antonius, and other ambitious and nationis spes hortabatur, quam inopia, aut alia necessitudo. Ceterum juventus pleraque, sed maxime nobilium, Catilinae incepitis favebat. Quibus in otio vel magnifice, vel molliter vivere ¹copia erat, incerta pro certis, bellum, quam pacem, malebant. Fuere item ea tempestate, qui crederent ²M. Licinium Crassum non ignarum ejus consilii fuisse; quia Cn. Pompeius, invisus ipsi, magnum exercitum ductabat, cuiusvis opes voluisse contra illius potentiam crescere; simul confisum, si conjuratio valuisse, facile apud illos principem se fore.

XVIII. SED ³antea item conjuravere pauci contra rempublicam, in quibus Catilina; de ⁴qua, quam verissime potero, dicam. ⁵L. Tullo, ⁶M. Lepido consulibus, ⁷P. Autronius et P. Sulla, ⁸legibus ambitus interrogati, aspiring men, who were afraid to commit themselves, though they secretly wished well to the conspiracy as an instrument for the promotion of their private views.

¹ Copia, in the sense of facultas.

² M. Licinium Crassum. Crassus had already borne the offices of praetor and consul, and was remarkable for the extent of his private wealth. Not long after the period of the conspiracy, he united with Pompey and Caesar in forming the first triumvirate, A. U. C. 693. He was slain in his expedition against the Parthians, A. U. C. 700.

³ Antea. An account is now given, by way of digression, of the previous conspiracy. It happened three years before that of Catiline.

⁴ De qua. Understand conjurazione, the verb conjuravere having gone before.

⁵ L. Tullo. L. Volcatius Tullus, who was tribune of the commons A. U. C. 679, and consul A. U. C. 688.

⁶ M. Lepido. M. Aemilius Lepidus, who, when quaestor, A. U. C. 676, caused the Sublician bridge to be made of stone. He is a different individual from Lepidus the triumvir.

⁷ P. Autronius et P. Sulla. Mention has already been made of both in the preceding notes. Cicero (pro Sulla, 4.) defends P. Sulla from the charge of having been concerned in the previous conspiracy. Autronius and Sulla were consuls elect. Some editions have the words consules designati expressed. For remarks on the consuls elect, vide note, chap. 50.

¹poenas dederant. Post paullo Catilina, ²pecuniarum repetundarum reus, prohibitus erat consulatum petere, ³quod intra legitimos dies profiteri nequiverit. Erat

⁸ Legibus ambitus interrogati. The laws against bribery were very severe. If the successful candidates were convicted of that crime upon trial, they were deprived of the consulship, and their competitors who accused them were nominated in their place. They were also, besides being fined, declared incapable of bearing any office, or of coming into the senate, by the Calpurnian and other laws. Cicero made the punishment of bribery still more severe by the Tullian law, which he caused to be passed through the authority of the Senate, by the additional penalty of a ten years' exile.

¹ Poenas dederant. In these, and similar phrases, it should be observed, that the proper meaning of the term poena is not "punishment," but "atonement." Thus dare poenas is "to give satisfaction," "to make atonement," or "to be punished;" and sumere poenas is "to exact atonement," "to take satisfaction," or "to punish." Compare the corresponding Greek forms δίνειν δίνειν and λαβεῖν δίνειν.

² Pecuniarum repetundarum. This latter word is simply the future participle passive of repeto, and not a defective noun, as some make it. When in the genitive, it has pecuniarum either expressed as in this passage, or more commonly understood. When in the ablative, pecunii. The action was so termed, because by it the money wrongfully obtained from an individual was demanded back. Our English word extortion, though generally given as the translation of the term, is not, however, comprehensive enough; since the action repetundarum was brought, not merely for the recovery of what had been extorted from the individual who complained, but also for what had been obtained by the Roman governors under false pretences or by fraud. Catiline had been appointed a praetor 68 B. C. and obtained Africa for his province. For his cruel and rapacious administration of this government, he was accused, on its expiration, at Rome.

³ Quod intra legitimos dies, &c. "Because he was unable to declare himself a candidate within the days prescribed by law." The legitimi dies were not, as Cortius explains them, the 30 days previous to the Comitia Centuriata, but, according to Ernesti, only the 17 immediately preceding.—Vide Ernesti, Clav. Cic. voc. Trinundi- eodem tempore ¹Cn. Piso, adolescens nobilis, summae audaciae, egens, factiosus, quem ad perturbandam rem publicam inopia atque mali mores stimulabant. Cum hoc, Catilina et ²Autronius, consilio communicato, parabant in ³Capitolio, ⁴Kalendis Januariis, ⁵L. Cottam et L. Torquatum consules interficere; ⁶ipsi, ⁷fascibus cor-

num. Every candidate for the consulship was compelled by law to give in his name during these 17 days, and required at the same time to be free from all accusation. If any charge were pending against him, he could not sue for the office in question. — Proferri has se candidatum understood.

¹ Cn. Piso. A member of the Calpurnian house. Suetonius (Vit. Cces. 9.) cites the account of two Roman writers, according to whom, Caesar was connected with Piso in this conspiracy; and, while the latter attempted an insurrection against the government abroad, the former was to have excited sedition against the administration at home.

² Autronius. Most editions have circiter nonas Decembres after Autronius. These words are omitted, however, by Cortius, Teller, Kunhardt, and others.

³ Capitolio. The senate met always, of course, on the first of January, in the Capitol, for the inauguration of the new consuls, who entered upon their office on that day; and then usually there was a crowded house.

⁴ Kalendis Januariis. — Vide page 36. note 3.

⁵ L. Cottam et L. Torquatum. These individuals had been chosen consuls in place of Autronius and Sylla, who were convicted of bribery, and consequently incapacitated from holding the office to which they had been elected.

⁶ Ipsi, “of their own authority.”

⁷ Fascibus correptis, “having seized upon the consular power.” The fusces were a bundle of rods, with an axe tied in the middle of them, which were carried before the kings, and afterwards before the consuls, as an emblem of their power. Valerius Poplicola had a law passed, which took away the securis or axe from the fusces, i. e. it took from the consuls the power of life and death, and only left them the right of scourging. This last, however, was, at a subsequent period, also taken from them by the Porcian and Sempronian laws. Whether the operation of these laws extended beyond the walls of the city, or whether the consul, when invested with military

reptis, Pisonem cum exercitu ad obtinendas duas¹ Hispanias mittere. ²Ea re cognita, rursus in Nonas Februarias consilium caedis³ transtulerant. Jam tum non consulibus modo, sed plerisque senatoribus perniciem machinabantur. ⁴Quod ni Catilina maturasset pro curia command, could scourge and behead, is a point not very clearly ascertained. See on this subject, the notes to chapter 69. of the Jugurthine War.

¹ Hispanias. By the two Spains are meant Hither and Thither Spain, or, as the Romans called them, Citerior and Ulterior. Hispania Citerior was afterwards called Tarragonensis, from Tarraco, or Tarragona, its capital, and extended from the foot of the Pyrenees to the mouth of the Durius, now Douro, on the Atlantic shore; comprehending all the north of Spain, together with all the south as far as a line drawn below Carthago Nova, now Carthagena, and continued in an oblique direction to the Durius, above Salamantica, now Salamanca. Hispania Ulterior was divided into two provinces, Boetica and Lusitania. The former comprised the southern parts of Spain, between the river Anas, now Guadiana, and Hispania Citerior: Lusitania corresponded in a great measure to modern Portugal.

² Ea re cognita. Suetonius (Vit. Caes. 9.) makes mention of a plot in which Caesar and Crassus were said to have been engaged at this time. Their plan was to make an attack on the senate at the beginning of the year, and, after they had slain whom they pleased of that body, for Crassus to assume the dictatorship, and appoint Caesar his master of the horse. Crassus, either from repentance or fear, (poenitentia vel metu), came not at the day appointed, and Caesar consequently did not give the signal which had been agreed upon, the dropping namely of his toga from his shoulders. The plot therefore failed. Suetonius makes no mention either of Catiline or Piso as connected with this conspiracy, although it is evident that he and Sallust refer to one and the same event. A subsequent plot between Caesar and Piso has already been alluded to in note 1. page 42.

³ Transtulerant. Some editions read transtulerunt.

⁴ Quod ni, &c. "and had not Catiline," &c. From the fondness of the Latin writers for the connexion by means of relatives, appears to have originated the use of quod before many conjunctions, merely as a copulative. (Vide Zumpt, L. G. p. 404. Kenrick's transl. 2d ed.)—Pro curia, "in front of the senate-house."

signum sociis dare, eo die, ¹ post conditam urbem Romanam, pessum facinus patratum foret. Quia nondum frequentes armati convenerant, ea res ² consilium diremit.

XIX. POSTEA PISO in citeriorem Hispaniam ³quaestor pro praetore missus est, adnitente Crasso, quod eum ⁴ infestum inimicum ⁵Cn. Pompeio cognoverat. Neque tamen senatus provinciam invitus dederat: quippe foedum hominem a republica procul ⁶esse volebat: simul, quia boni ⁷quam plures praesidium in eo putabant: et jam tum potentia Cn. Pompeii formido-

¹ Post conditam urbem Romanam, "since the founding of the Roman city."

² Consilium diremit, "caused the plot to fail."

³ Quaestor pro praetore, "as quaestor with praetorian power." To send out a quaestor with praetorian power was a very unusual proceeding, and, as in the present instance, only sanctioned by the exigencies of the state. The quaestors had charge of the public money, and obtained their name a quaerendo, because they got in the public revenues. The principal charge of the city quaestors was the care of the treasury, which was kept in the temple of Saturn. The office of the provincial quaestors was, to attend the consuls or praetors into their provinces; to take care that provisions and pay were furnished to the army; to exact the taxes and tribute of the empire; to take care of the money, and to sell the spoils taken in war, &c. The praetors were, strictly speaking, judicial officers; they were also sent out as governors of provinces, and of course commanded armies when occasion required.

⁴ Infestum inimicum, "a bitter personal enemy." Some editors consider inimicum as superfluous, and reject it from the text.

⁵ Cn. Pompeio. Compare the termination of chapter 17. "cujusvis opes voluisse," &c.

⁶ Esse volebat. Some editions have abesse. Compare Dio Cassius, 36. 27. Ἐξεὶ δὲν καὶ ὡς ὁ Πλίσιον ιδεωσύνητο, ἵψειν τε ἡ γενούσια, μή τι συντραπέσῃ, καὶ εἰδὼς αὐτὸν οἱ Ἰενεῖται, πρόφρων, ὡς καὶ οἱ ἀρχήν τινα, ἵπεμψε· καὶ οἱ μὲν ἐνταῦθα ὑπὸ τῶν ἱπτικωγίων, ἀδικήσας τι αὐτούς, ἵσφάγη.

⁷ Quam plures. The common text has complures.

losa erat. Sed is Piso, ¹in provincia ab equitibus Hispanis, quos in exercitu ductabat, iter faciens occisus est. ²Sunt qui ita dicant, imperia ejus injusta, superba, crudelia, barbaros nequivisse pati: alii autem, equites illos, ³Cn. Pompeii veteres fidosque clientes, voluntate ejus Pisonem ⁴adgressos; numquam Hispanos ⁵praeter-

¹ In provincia iter faciens, “while on a march within his province.” Cortius reads in provinciam, making in equivalent to intrare.

² Sunt qui ita dicant. Strict Latinity requires dicant, which we have given therefore in place of the common reading dicunt. It must be confessed, however, that several instances occur, even in the best writers, of the indicative being thus used with the relative.—Vide Scheller. praecept. Styli, vol. i. p. 166. Heusinger ad Cic. de Off. l. 24. The subjunctive, however, on such occasions is certainly preferable, and in some cases essential to perspicuity, otherwise the subject may be mistaken for the predicate. For example, if we say, “Sunt boni, qui dicunt,” to express “they are good men who say,” and also, “there are good men who say,” the expression is evidently ambiguous. This ambiguity is removed by expressing the former sentiment by Sunt boni, qui dicunt, in which case the relative clause is the subject, and the antecedent clause the predicate; and by expressing the latter sentiment by Sunt boni, qui dicant, where the antecedent clause is the subject, and the relative clause the predicate.—Vide Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 21. 3d ed.

³ Cn. Pompeii, &c. We have here a perfect hexameter: Cnē Cnē Pompeii vērērēs fidōsquē cliētēs. Compare Muretus ad Cic. l. Cat. 1. Similar disjecta membra poetæ occur in the best prose writers. We subjoin a few of the most striking:

Haec ubi dieta dedit, strigint gladium, cuneoque Facto, per medios vadit

silvam

Livy, 22. 50.

Auguris patrum et prisca formidine sacram.
Post natos homines, ut, cum privatus obisset.
Armeniaque amissa, ac rursus ultraque recepta.
Ex arce augurium capientibus officiebat.
Aut prudentia major inest, aut non mediocris.

Tacit.
Nepos.
Sueton.
Val. Max.
Cic. de Off.

The term clientes, which occurs in the passage of Sallust to which this note refers, has no relation whatever to the Roman institution of patronage and clientship, but signifies here merely “retainers,” or “adherents.”

⁴ Adgressos. For aggressos. This is generally termed an area tale facinus fecisse, sed imperia saeva multa antea perpessos. Nos eam rem in medio ⁶relinquemus. De superiore conjuratione satis dictum.

XX. CATILINA ubi eos, quos paulo ante memoravi, convenisse videt; tametsi cum singulis multa saepe egerat, tamen ⁷in rem fore credens universos adpellare et cohortari, in abditam partem ⁸aedium ⁹secedit; atque chiasm; but, according to Scheller, it is a question whether the ancients ever altered the form of the preposition when in composition. He considers it always more accurate to retain, as far as possible, the prepositions in an unaltered form, as adfero, adulti, adlatum: inretio, inmergo, &c.—Scheller, I. G. vol. i. p. 129. Walker's transl.

⁵ Præterea, "in any other instance."

⁶ Relinquemus. Some editions have relinquimus. In medio relinquere, "to leave undetermined."

⁷ In rem, "of advantage."—Universos, "all, at one and the same time." Some critics have defined universi as meaning "all at one time," while cuncti denotes "all in one place." The present passage favours such a distinction, although instances are frequently met with where it is not observed, and where universi merely signifies "all together," or "considered as one aggregate," (quasi ad unum versi.)

⁸ Aedium, "of the house." Heusinger explains aedes, as in the singular number denoting the cottage, or habitation, of a private individual, which is wholly exposed to view when you enter it, and is not divided into chambers; also, "any single chamber." (Obs. Antibarb. p. 388.) From denoting originally a house not divided into apartments, it came naturally to denote "a temple," or "chamber for divine worship;" and to this latter acceptation it seems almost entirely, if not wholly, confined. Noltenius remarks, that though generally used in the singular number for "a temple," and very rarely for "a house," it is sometimes employed in the latter acceptance; and he quotes as one example, Horace, Carm. I. 30. 4. The lexicographer, however, is in error, as the term here denotes a chapel, or part of the house dedicated to the worship of the Lares and Penates. The two passages which are adduced from Curtius, Snakenborg considers to be chargeable with false readings, and also the passage which Alciatus has quoted from Cicero's Oration for Cluentius. The plural aedes means "a house," and occurs more ibi, omnibus ¹arbitris procul amotis, orationem hujusmodi habuit. " Ni virtus fidesque vestra ²spectata mihi forent, nequidquam opportuna res cecidisset; spes magna, ³dominatio, in manibus frustra fuissent: ⁴neque ego per ignaviam, aut vana ingenia, incerta pro certis captarem. Sed, quia multis et magnis ⁵tempestatibus vos cognovi fortes fidosque mihi, eo animus ⁶ausus maximum atque pulcherrimum facinus ⁷incipere: simul, quia vobis ⁸eadem, quae mihi, bona malaque intellexi; ⁹nam idem velle atque nolle, ea demum firma than 250 times in Plautus alone, in that signification.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 270. 3d ed.

⁹ Scedit. Some editions have cessit. The emendation is unnecessary.

¹ Arbitris, "witnesses." Noltenius defines arbiter to be, according to its primitive import, "Occulte adrepens, qui suis oculis videt, suisque auribus audit." The most probable opinion is, that it is derived from the obsolete verb bitere, "to go," being compounded of ar for ad, and bitere, in the same way as we have arcesso for adcesso. Testis means "a witness," chiefly in a cause or trial before a court, "one who bears testimony."—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 309. 3d ed.

² Spectata. Some editions have satis spectata.

³ Dominatio. In some editions dominationis . . . fuissent.

⁴ Neque ego, &c. The personal pronouns in Latin are seldom if ever expressed without implying emphasis in a greater or less degree. Ego is here equivalent to ἴγως. "Nor, I assure you, would I, relying on men of cowardly spirits or fickle minds, grasp at uncertainties in place of what is certain."

⁵ Tempestatibus, "occasions."

⁶ Ausus. Understand est. In accordance with the text of Cortius, the substantive verb is frequently omitted by us. It may be doubted, however, whether Cortius, on some occasions, does not carry this principle of omission too far.—Vide Class. Journ. No. 67. p. 128. "Sallustianarum Lectionum Symbola," &c.

⁷ Incipere, "to enter upon the achievement of."

⁸ Eadem, quae mihi, &c. "Cortius," observes the Bipont editor, "delet quae, ad aucupandum Graecismum."

⁹ Nam idem velle, &c. "for, to have the same desires and the same aversions, that, in fine, is the surest bond of friendship."

amicitia est. Sed, ego quae mente agitavi, omnes jam antea ¹diversi audistis. Ceterum mihi in dies magis animus accenditur, cum considero, quae conditio vitae futura sit, nisi nosmet ipsi vindicamus in libertatem. Nam, postquam respublica in paucorum jus atque ditionem ²concessit, semper illis reges, ³tetrarchae ⁴vectigales esse; ⁵populi, nationes stipendia pendere; ceteri omnes, strenui, boni, ⁶nobiles atque ignobiles, vul-

¹ Diversi, "individually."

² Concessit, "has come," or "has fallen." Compare Sallust. Hist. Frag. lib. 3. Oratio Licinii ad plebem. "Itaque omnes concessere jam in paucorum dominationem," &c.

³ Tetrarchae, "tetrarchs." Tetrarcha originally signified one who ruled over the fourth part of a country or kingdom, (from τέτταρα and ἀρχή). Afterwards, however, the term merely came to denote a minor or inferior potentate, without any reference to the extent of territory governed. Thus, according to Strabo, Gallo-Graecia in Asia Minor was governed at first by 12 tetrarchs, afterwards by 3, and lastly by 2, previous to its being made a kingdom.

⁴ Vectigales. Strictly speaking, the Stipendiarii, or Tributarii, were those who paid their taxes in money; and the Vectigales were those who gave a certain part of the produce of the soil to the public. The words, however, as in the present instance, are sometimes confounded.

⁵ Populi, nationes, &c. Gens is the root or stock, containing many families (familiae), or even nations (nationes). It is the generic term in respect to natio and familia. Thus the Germans may be called gens, the Saxons natio; or, if we rise higher, the Europeans may be called gens, the Germans natio. Gens is even sometimes applied to the whole human race; as, "Gens hominum est huic belluae adversa." (Plin. H. N. 8. 25.) Populus is more extensive than natio, but in general less so than gens, though instances are not unfrequent where populus and gens directly coincide. The term populi in the text may be rendered by "communities." — Vide Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 256. 3d ed.

⁶ Nobiles atque ignobiles. Dureau de Lamalle contends that aequae must be understood before atque, so that the sense may be, "Et nous autres, tous tant que nous sommes, qui les valons pour le talent, pour le courage, pour la naissance, nous sommes traités comme la plus ignoble populace." He has evidently mistaken the

gus fuimus, sine gratia, sine auctoritate, ¹his obnoxii, quibus, si respublica valeret, formidini essemus. Itaque omnis gratia, potentia, honos, divitiae apud illos sunt, aut ubi illi volunt : ²repulsas nobis reliquere, pericula, judicia, egestatem. Quae quoisque tandem patiemini, fortissimi viri ? Nonne ³emori per virtutem praestat, quam vitam miseram atque dishonestam, ubi alienae superbiae ludibrio fueris, per dedecus amittere ? ⁴Verum enim vero, pro deum atque hominum fidem ! Victoria nobis in manu : ⁵viget aetas, animus valet : contra illis, annis atque divitiis, omnia consenserunt. Tantum modo incepto opus est : ⁶cetera res expediet. Etenim quis mortalium cui virile ingenium, tolerare potest, illis divitias superare, quas profundant in extruendo mari et montibus coaequandis ; nobis rem familiarem etiam ad meaning of Sallust. The clause merely signifies, " whether of high or humble origin."

¹ His obnoxii, &c. " At the mercy of these men, to whom, if the republic were in a sound and healthy state, we would prove a source of continual alarm."

² Repulsas. " Repulses in suing for office." Some editions give repulsas as a participle. The term repulsas has nothing in it contrary to correct Latinity. Compare Livy (39. 56.) " post duas repulsas."

³ Emori per virtutem, " bravely to encounter a speedy death."

⁴ Verum enim vero, &c. " But, indeed, and I call gods and men to witness the truth of my assertion," &c.

⁵ Viget aetas, animus valet. " Our years are vigorous, our spirit is unbroken."

⁶ Cetera res expediet, " The rest will follow of course." The literal meaning is, " the remainder of the affair will extricate itself," (from the dangers which at present surround it). Expediet has sese understood. Dahl renders it as follows : " Das Uebrige wird sich von selbst finden, wenn die Sache nur einmal angefangen ist," and Dureau de Lamalle, " le reste viendra de soi-même." — In extruendo mari, &c. " in building up a sea, and in levelling mountains :" alluding to the extravagance of the Roman nobility in their fishponds, pleasure-grounds, &c.

necessaria deesse? ¹illos binas, aut amplius, domos continuare; nobis ²larem familiarem nusquam ullum esse? Cum tabulas, signa, ³toreumata emunt; ⁴nova diruunt, alia aedificant, postremo omnibus modis pecuniam, ⁵trahunt, vexant: tamen ⁶summa lubidine dvitias vincere nequeunt. At nobis domi inopia, foris aes alienum; ⁷mala res, spes multo asperior: denique, quid reliqui

¹ Illos binas, &c. Referring to the erection of two houses in immediate connexion with one another, and communicating throughout. Compare the Septuagint version (Isa. v. 8.), οἱ συάπτοντις οίκιαν ἡρόες διχίαν, and Tacitus (Annal. 15. 39.), “domo palantium et hortos continuare.”

² Larem familiarem, “a home that we can call our own.”

³ Toreumata, “embossed plate.” From rōguua, “vas caelatum.” The term has no reference whatever to engraving, but is confined to work adorned with bas-relief. “Allein da es vom Metall gebraucht wird, so kann es blos auf Formen und Geissen sich beziehen; und da es nur erhobne Arbeit anzeigen so lässt sich ohne näheren Grund auf kein Stechen und Graben deuten.”—Heyne, Sammlung antiquarischer Aufsätze. Th. 2. 5. 129.

⁴ Nova diruunt, “though they pull down edifices but recently erected.” Some prefer vetera, as a reading, in place of nova; but this weakens the sense. In support of the present lection, compare Suetonius (Vit. Caes. 46.), “Munditiarum lautitiarumque studiosissimum multi prodiderunt: villam in Nemorensi a fundamentis inchoatam, magnoque sumtu absolutam, quia non tota ad animum ei responderat, totam diruisse, quamquam tenuem adhuc et obaeratum.”—Many writers say that he affected neatness in his person, and niceness in his entertainments: that he took down again entirely a country-seat in the neighbourhood of the grove of Aricia, which he had raised from the foundation, and finished at a vast expense, because it had not exactly suited his fancy, though he was at that time poor and in debt.”—Clarke.

⁵ Trahunt, vexant, “though they squander, though they lavish in the wildest extravagance.” Trahunt is here equivalent to distranhunt, and vexant to insano luxu disperdunt.

⁶ Summa lubidine, “by the most lavish and capricious expenditure.”

⁷ Mala res, &c. “Our present condition is a wretched one, our hope of the future worse.”

habemus, praeter miseram animam? Quin igitur expergiscimini? En illa, illa quam saepe optastis, libertas, praeterea dvitiae, decus, gloria, in oculis sita sunt!
fortuna omnia victoribus praemia posuit. Res, tempus, pericula, egestas, belli spolia magnifica magis, quam oratio, hortentur. Vel imperatore, vel milite me utimini: neque animus, neque corpus a vobis aberit.
Haec ipsa, ut spero, vobiscum consul agam; nisi forte animus fallit, et vos servire, quam imperare, parati es-tis."

XXI. POSTQUAM accepere ea homines,¹ quibus mala abunde omnia erant, sed neque res, neque spes bona ulla; tamen etsi illis ²"quieta movere, magna merces videbatur, tamen postulare plerique, uti proponeret, ³quae conditio belli foret; quae praemia armis peterent; ⁴quid ubique opis aut spei haberent. Tum Catilina polliceri ⁵tabulas novas, ⁶proscriptionem locupletium,

¹ Quibus mala, &c. "unto whom all evils abounded, but who possessed neither property nor any hopes of lawfully acquiring it."

² Quieta movere, "to disturb the tranquillity of the state."

³ Quae conditio belli foret, "what were to be the conditions of their engaging in the contest."

⁴ Quid ubique, &c. Ubique is used both here and elsewhere by Sallust in the sense of et ubi.

⁵ Tabulas novas, "an abolition of debts." The ordinary writing materials of the Romans were tablets covered with wax; paper, and parchment. Their stylus was broad at one end; so that when they wished to correct or erase any thing, they turned the stylus, and smoothed the wax with the broad end, after which the tablets might be written on anew. Hence, when debts were discharged, the former marks were smoothed over, and the tablets were ready for a new score.

⁶ Proscriptionem. Sylla first introduced the method of proscription. Upon his return into the city, after having overthrown the party of Marius, he wrote down the names of those whom he doomed to die, and ordered them to be fixed up in the public places of the city, with the promise of a certain reward (duo talenta) for the head of each person so proscribed. New lists (tabulae proscriptionis) were magistratus, sacerdotia, rapinas, alia omnia quae libellum atque lubido victorum fert. Praeterea esse in Hispania ²citeriore Pisonem, in ³Mauritania cum exercitu ⁴P. Sittium Nucerinum, consilii sui participes: petere consulatum ⁵C. Antonium, quem sibi collegam fore speraret, hominem et familiarem, et ⁶omnibus ne-repeatedly exposed, as new victims occurred to his memory, or were suggested to him. The land and fortunes of the slain were divided among the friends of Sylla. Catiline promised a repetition of these enormities to his followers.

¹ Bellum atque lubido victorum, “ war and the license of conquerors.”

² Citeriore. Vide note I. page 43.

³ Mauritania. Now Marocco and Fez, an extensive country of Africa, bounded on the east by Numidia (Algiers); on the south by Gaetulia (Beledelgerid); on the north by the Mediterranean and Fretum Herculeum (Straits of Gibraltar); and on the west by the Atlantic.

⁴ P. Sittium Nucerinum. This individual, a member of the equestrian order, had, in consequence of an accusation brought against him, left Rome a short time previous to the breaking out of this conspiracy, and with a number of his associates and dependants assisted the king of Mauritania against the neighbouring princes. Catiline claimed him, according to Sallust, as privy to the intended revolution in the state; Cicero, however, in his oration for Sulla (c. 20.), says that he quitted the city in consequence of an agreement with the king of Mauritania; that he had formerly been in Africa; and that the idea of his being implicated in the conspiracy was absurd. The orator describes him as a respectable man, and calls him his old friend and acquaintance, “ non enim mihi deserenda est causa amici veteris atque hospitis.” At a later period, A. U. C. 708, he was very useful to Julius Caesar in Africa, according to Dio Cassius (43. 3.) ‘Ενταῦθ’ εὖν αὐτῷ ὅντι Ποστλίος τις Σίττιος τὸν τις σωτηρίας ἄμα καὶ τὴν ιππεράτην θάκεν. Compare Appian. B. C. 4. 54. ed. Schweigh. The common text of Cicero calls him Cincius, which Ernesti retains; but the edition of Schütz gives the true form.

⁵ C. Antonium. Son of the celebrated orator M. Antonius, and brother of M. Antonius Creticus, the father of the triumvir.

⁶ Omnibus necessitudinibus, &c. “beset by every species of want.”

cessitudinibus circumventum: ¹eo consulem initium agendi facturum. Ad hoc, ²maledictis increpat omnis bonos: suorum unumquemque nominans laudare: ³admoniebat alium egestatis, alium ⁴cupiditatis suae, complures periculi aut ignominiae, multos victoriae Sullanae, quibus ea praedae fuerat. Postquam omnium animos alacris videt; cohortatus, ut ⁵petitionem suam curae haberent, conventum dimisit.

XXII. FUERE ea tempestate, qui dicerent, Catilinam, oratione habita, cum ad jusjurandum popularis sceleris sui adigeret, ⁶humani corporis sanguinem, vino pernixtum, in pateris circumtulisse; ⁷inde cum post execrationem omnes degustavissent, sicuti in solemnis sacris fieri consuevit, aperuisse consilium suum, ⁸atque eo, dictitare, fecisse, quo inter se fidi

¹ Eo, understand cum, which in some editions is expressed. Eo refers to Antonius, and consulem to Catiline. "That in conjunction with him (Antonius), he (Catiline) would make a beginning of the enterprise." The common text, besides cum, has se expressed before consulem. Cortius attempts to explain this passage in a very forced manner, and makes it equivalent to "quique propterea, si consul declaratus esset, per se initium facturus esset rerum," &c. referring consulem to Antonius.

² Maledictis increpat, "he attacks with revilings."

³ Admoniebat. Some editions have admonere.

⁴ Cupiditatis suae, "of his ruling propensity."

⁵ Petitionem suam, "his application for the consulship."

⁶ Humani corporis sanguinem. According to Dio Cassius (37. 30.) a boy was slain by the conspirators, and after an oath had been made over his entrails, Catiline with his accomplices partook of them! (πεστλαγχνων αὐτὰ μετὰ τῶν ἀλλαρῶν).

⁷ Inde cum post execrationem, &c. "That when, after having invoked a solemn curse upon their own heads in case they proved faithless, they had all slightly tasted thereof." Some editions place a comma after inde, but it is much more elegant to refer it to the contents of the cup.

⁸ Atque eo, &c. Dictitare does not refer to Catiline, but is used as the historical infinitive for dictitabant, and refers to those persons magis forent, ¹alius alii tanti facinoris consci. Non nulli facta haec, multa praeterea, existumabant, ab iis, qui ²Ciceronis invidiam, quae postea orta est, leniri credebant atrocitate sceleris eorum, qui poenas dederant. Nobis ea res ³pro magnitudine parum comperta est.

XXIII. SED in ea ⁴conventione fuit Q. Curius, na-tus haud obscuro loco, ⁵flagitiis atque facinoribus co-opertus; quem censores senatu, probri gratia, ⁶amove-rant. Huic homini non minor ⁷vanitas, quam audacia:
neque reticere, quae audierat, neque suamet ipse scelera occultare: ⁸prorsus neque dicere, neque facere, quidquam pensi habebat. Erat ei cum ⁹Fulvia, muliere nobili, ¹⁰vetus consuetudo: cui cum minus gratus esset, who propagated the report in question: "and they reported about that he had done it with this view, in order that," &c.

¹ Alius alii, &c. " being conscious, one to another, of so great a crime."

² Ciceronis invidiam, "the odium against Cicero."

³ Pro magnitudine, "considering its importance." The meaning of the whole passage is this: The proof, on which this accusation rests, is too slight, considering the heavy nature of the charge, for me to express any definite or decided opinion on the subject.

⁴ Conventione. Some editions have conjuratione, which is an inferior reading.

⁵ Flagitiis atque facinoribus cooperitus, "covered with infamy and with crime."

⁶ Amoverant, "had expelled." Among their other duties, the censors had the inspection of public morals. A general review of the whole Roman people took place every lustrum, a period of five years. The manner of expelling from the senate was by passing over the name of the delinquent in calling the senatorial roll.

⁷ Vanitas, "inconsiderateness," or "want of judgment."

⁸ Prorsus neque dicere, &c. "in short, he did not at all care what he either said or did."

⁹ Fulvia. Florus uses very strong language in relation to this female, viz. "villissimum scortum," &c.

¹⁰ Vetus consuetudo, "an intimacy of long standing."

quia inopia ¹minus largiri poterat, repente glorians ²maria montesque polliceri coepit; minari interdum ferro, nisi ³obnoxia foret; postremo ferocius agitare, quam solitus erat. At Fulvia, ⁴insolentiae Curii causa cognita, tale periculum reipublicae haud occultum habuit; sed, ⁵sublato auctore, de Catilinae conjuratione quae quoque modo audierat, compluribus narravit. Ea res imprimis studia hominum accedit ad consulatum mandandum ⁶M. Tullio Ciceroni. Namque antea ⁷pler-aque nobilitas invidia aestuabat, et quasi pollui con-sulatum ⁸credebant, si eum, quamvis egregius, ⁹homo

¹ Minus largiri poterat, “he was less able to lavish presents upon her.”

² Maria montesque, &c. “to make her the most extravagant promises.” A proverbial mode of expression. Compare Adagia Veterum, p. 472. col. 2. The verb polliceri, generally, perhaps, significant of express and certain engagements, and those made by stronger affirmations, is employed only in a good sense, as exciting hope; whereas promittere holds forth either good or evil, awakening hope or fear.—Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 146. 3d ed.

³ Obnoxia, “obedient to his will.”

⁴ Insolentiae, “strange conduct.”

⁵ Sublato auctore, “having concealed the name of her informant.” Understand de narratione. Compare Cicero (ad Att. 2. 24.), “Caepionem de oratione sua sustulit.—He omitted Caepio in his charge.”

⁶ M. Tullio Ciceroni. Cicero obtained the quaestorship at thirty-one; the aedileship at thirty-seven; the praetorship at forty; the consulship at forty-three; and he informs us that his appointment to each of these offices was in the very year in which he was eligible by law.

⁷ Pleraque nobilitas. The feminine singular pleraque is not usual among the Latin writers. Sallust has already used it in the 17th chapter of the History of this Conspiracy. Compare Jugurtha (c. 60. and 81.); Aulus Gellius (17. 21.); Apuleius (Apol. sub fin. &c.)

⁸ Credebant. Nobilitas, as a collective noun, takes the plural verb.

⁹ Homo novus. Among the Romans, those who were the first of their family that had raised themselves to any curule office were novus adeptus foret. Sed, ubi periculum advenit, invidia atque superbia ¹ postfuere.

XXIV. Igitur, comitiis habitis, consules declarantur M. Tullius et C. Antonius; quod factum primo ² popularis conjurationis concusserat. Neque tamen Catilinae furor minuebatur: sed in dies plura agitare; arma per Italiam locis opportunis parare; pecuniam, sua aut amicorum fide ³ sumtam mutuam, ⁴ Faesulas ad ⁵ Manlium quemdam portare, qui postea ⁶ princeps fuit belli faciundi. Ea tempestate plurimos eujusque generis homines ⁷ adscivisse dicitur; mulieres etiam aliquot, ⁸ quae, ubi aetas tantummodo quaestui, neque luxuriae, called Homines novi, “new men,” “upstarts,” &c. Compare Apian: B. C. (2. 2.) καλοῦσι δύντω (scil. καινόι) τοὺς ἄφ' ιαυτῶν, αλλ' εἰ τὸν περγάμων, γνωσίους.

¹ Postfuere, “lagged behind.”

² Popularis, “the accomplices.” Understand socios.

³ Sumtam mutuam, “borrowed.” In this idiom, the adjective mutuus (from mutare) implies that there is a change of the thing lent, and that the return is made by an equivalent. When commodeare signifies “to lend,” it supposes the subject restored as it was given.—Hill's Synonymes, p. 210. 4to ed.

⁴ Faesulas. Faesulae (now Fiesola) was a town of Etruria, north-east of Florentia, towards the foot of the Apennines. It is at present rather a village than a town.

⁵ Manlium. This Manlius had held a commission in the army of Sylla, under whom he had acquired considerable military experience, and accumulated great wealth, which he soon dissipated by his excessive extravagance. Plutarch, Dio Cassius, and Appian, write the name Mállius; and hence it would seem that Mallius, which is the reading of a few manuscripts, is more correct than Manlius. The editions of Sallust, however, give the latter form, with very few exceptions.

⁶ Princeps belli faciundi, “the first to begin the war.”

⁷ Adscivisse. Understand sibi, which is expressed in some editions.

⁸ Quae, ubi aetas, &c. “who, when years had set bounds to their sources of gain, but not to their luxurious indulgences.” Neque is here equivalent to et non.

modum fecerat, aes alienum grande conflaverant : per eas se Catilina credebat posse ¹servitia urbana sollicitare, urbem incendere, viros earum vel adjungere sibi, vel interficere.

XXV. SED in his erat ²Sempronia, quae multa saepe ³virilis audaciae facinora commiserat. Haec mulier genere atque forma, praeterea ⁴viro, liberis satis fortunata; litteris Graecis atque Latinis docta; ⁵psallere, saltare ⁶elegantius, quam necesse est probae; multa

¹ Servitia urbana, “the city slaves.” Servitium, in the singular, means “slavery,” &c. In a few instances, however, it has the same signification as the plural. Compare Cic. in Verr. 7. 4. a med. Id. de Harusp. resp. c. 12. circa med. &c.

² Sempronia. A member of the illustrious house of the Sempronii, from which the two Gracchi and other distinguished men derived their descent.

³ Virilis audacia, “stamped with manly boldness.”

⁴ Viro. She married Decimus Junius Brutus, who held the consulship with M. Aemilius Lepidus Livianus, A. U. C. 677.

⁵ Psallere. This verb, from the Greek φάλλω, means either to play upon a musical instrument, or to accompany it at the same time with the voice. The infinitives psallere and saltare, and likewise the accusative multa alia, depend on docta.

⁶ Elegantius, “with more elegance,” “with more skill.” This word seems used in a bad sense, referring to loose, indecent, and theatrical gestures in dancing, which, at the same time, however, were not ungraceful. In the earlier period of the Roman republic, both dancing and music were held in little repute. After the adoption of Grecian customs and habits, more regard was paid to them, and they met with less censure, especially music. In the corrupt ages of the empire, when public morals were at their lowest ebb, dancing of course came fully into vogue, and without any blame being attached to it. It may perhaps excite our surprise that the Romans should have condemned what we regard as so innocent an amusement; but we should bear in mind, that the dancing which the Romans censured can only be compared with the worst species of our opera-dancing, since they had also their religious dances, those of the Salii in particular, which were sanctioned by the pracalia, quae ¹instrumenta luxuriae. Sed ei cariora semper omnia, quam decus atque pudicitia fuit: pecuniae an famae minus parceret, haud facile ²decerneret. Sed ea saepe antehac fidem prodiderat, ³creditum abjuraverat, caedis conscientia fuerat, luxuria atque inopia praeceps abierat. ⁴Verum ingenium ejus haud absurdum: posse versus facere, jocum movere, sermone uti vel modesto, vel molli, vel procaci: prorsus multae ⁵facetiae multusque lepos inerat.

XXVI. HIS rebus comparatis, Catilina nihilo minus in proximum annum consulatum petebat; sperans, si ⁶designatus foret, facile se ex voluntate Antonio usurrum. Neque interea quietus erat, sed omnibus modis insidias parabat Ciceroni. Neque illi tamen ad caventice of ages. The Latin verb which we translate to dance, properly signifies to leap high and frequently; the corresponding Greek verb (ερχομαι) has a similar meaning: Plato in his Cratylus explains it by μετωπιζω and παλλω; so Antiphanes in Athenaeus, p. 688. b. has the expression καρδια ερχεται, the heart leaps, for καρδια πηδη.

¹ Instrumenta luxuriae, “the instruments of vice.”

² Decerneret. Some editions have discerneret.

³ Creditum abjuraverat, “had forsworn a trust reposed in her.”
—Praecepit abierat, “had plunged headlong into ruin.”

⁴ Verum ingenium ejus, &c. “her native powers, however, were far from contemptible.”

⁵ Facetiae. Facetiae denotes gracefulness in general, or that elegance of wit and humour which indicates a correct and delicate taste.—The primary idea implied in lepos and lepidus, is sweetness or softness, opposed to what is harsh and rough, and the term is confined to the mode of expression: whereas facetiae is applicable to the sentiment, as well as the diction or gesture, designating the character of the mind, as possessed of taste and judgment.—Vide Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 39. If, after these premises, I might venture to translate the passage in Sallust to which this note refers, it would be as follows: “In a word, she possessed a large share of refined wit, and much captivating sweetness of expression.”

⁶ Designatus.—Vide note, chap. 50.

dum ¹dolus, aut astutiae deerant. Namque, a principio consulatus sui, multa ²pollicendo per Fulviam, effecerat, ut Q. Curius, de quo paullo ante memoravi, consilia Catilinae sibi proderet. Ad hoc, collegam suum Antonium ³pactioне provinciae perpulerat, ⁴ne contra rempublicam sentiret; circum se praesidia amicorum atque ⁵clientium occulte habebat. Postquam

¹ Dolus, aut astutiae, “dexterity or address.” Dolus is here equivalent to what the civilians call dolus bonus, i. e. a stratagem put in operation against an enemy, in one’s own defence. Thus Ulpian remarks: “Veteres dolum etiam bonum dicebant, et pro sollicitia hoc nomen accipiebant: maxime si adversus hostem latronemve aliquis machinetur.”

² Pollicendo per Fulviam. Some editions place a comma after pollicendo, and connect per Fulviam with effecerat, removing the point before the last mentioned word. The punctuation in our text is far preferable.

³ Pactioне provinciae. The province of Macedonia had fallen to the lot of Cicero, but he generously yielded it to Antonius, who, being in indigent circumstances by reason of his dissipated life, was the more easily inclined to receive a rich province as the price of his adherence to the state. Antonius held the government of Macedonia for two years after the expiration of his consulship, and, on his return to Rome, was brought to trial and sentenced to perpetual banishment, for extortion, and for making war beyond the bounds of his province. (Liv. epit. 103.) Before his elevation to the consulship, the censors had expelled him from the senate. He appears to have been a man of profligate habits.

⁴ Ne contra rempublicam, &c. “not to cherish sentiments hostile to the well-being of the state.”

⁵ Clientium. The institution of patronage and clientship owed its origin to Romulus, according to the common account. That the patricians and plebeians might be connected together by the strictest bonds, the monarch ordained that every plebeian should choose from the patricians any one he pleased as his patron, or protector, whose client he was called. It was the part of the patron to advise and to defend his client; to assist him with his interest and substance; in short, to do every thing for him that a parent uses to do for his children. The client was obliged to pay all kind of respect to his patron, dies ¹comitiorum venit, et Catilinae neque petitio, neque insidiae quas ²consulibus in campo fecerat, prospere cessere; constituit bellum facere, et extrema omnia experiri, quoniam quae occulte tentaverat, ³aspera foedaque evenerant.

XXVII. Igitur C. Manium ⁴Faesulas atque in eam partem Etruriae, Septimum quemdam, ⁵Camertem, in ⁶agrum Picenum, ⁷C. Julium in ⁸Apuliam dimisit; and to serve him with his life and fortune in any extremity. As regards the origin, however, of this relation between the two orders, it is more than probable that the common account is incorrect. The institution of patronage would seem to have sprung from a state of society in which a superior caste exercised sway over an inferior one: nor is this one of the least interesting objects of inquiry connected with the early history of Rome.

¹ Comitorum, “of election.” The comitia here referred to are the Centuriata.—Vide APPENDIX.

² Consulibus. The Bipont edition reads consuli, referring the term to Cicero alone. Cortius gives consulibus, supposing the consules designati to be also meant.—Campo, “in the Campus Martius.”

³ Aspera foedaque evenerant, “had eventuated in disappointment and disgrace.”

⁴ Faesulas.—Vide note 4. page 56.

⁵ Camertem, “a native of Camerinum.” Camerinus (now Camerino) was a town of Umbria, near the confines of Picenum. M. Barbié du Bocage is of opinion that it was founded by the Camertes after their city Camerta had been destroyed by Sylla for favouring the party of Marius.

⁶ Agrum Picenum, “the district of Picenum” lay along the Adriatic, to the east of Umbria and the country of the Sabines. The March of Ancona comprehends the greater part of it.

⁷ C. Julium. Not a member of the Julian family, but probably some obscure individual. Had he belonged to that illustrious house he would have been mentioned by Sallust among the principal conspirators.

⁸ Apuliam. Apulia was a district of Italy, to the east of Samnium and north of Lucania. Its coast along the Adriatic was called Daunia in the northern part. The modern name of Apulia is La

praeterea aliud alio, ¹quem ubique opportunum credebat. Interea Romae multa simul moliri: consuli insidias tendere, parare incendia, opportuna loca armatis hominibus ²obsidere: ipse ³cum telo esse, item alios ⁴jubere: hortari, uti semper intenti paratique essent: dies noctesque ⁵festinare, vigilare, neque insomniis neque labore fatigari. Postremo, ubi multa agitanti nihil procedit, rursus ⁶intempsa nocte conjurationis principes convocat per ⁷M. Porcium Laecam: ibique, multa

Puglia, or, more strictly speaking, the ancient district answers to the present La Capitanata, la terre d'Otranto, and la terre de Bari.

¹ Quem ubique. For Quem et ubi.

² Obsidere. A verb of the third conjugation, from obsidoere "to beset."

³ Cum telo esse, "carried a weapon about with him." This phraseology is adopted from a law of the twelve tables, by which it was forbidden to wear any weapon in the city. Compare Cicero (pro Milone, 4.), "Quae (lex) non modo hominem occidi, sed esse cum telo hominis occidendi causa vetat.—Which law not only forbids the killing of a man, but the carrying a weapon in order to kill him." Upon any sudden provocation the Romans used the graphium or stylus as a weapon, which they carried in a case. Hence probably the origin of the word stiletto in Italian.

⁴ Jubere, scil. ipsos quoque cum telo esse.

⁵ Festinare, "he was actively employed."

⁶ Intempsa nocte, "in the dead of night." Intempsa nor properly denotes that period of the night which is fit only for repose, or, to use the words of Macrobius (Sat. 1. 3. extr.), "quae non habet idoneum tempus rebus gerendis."

⁷ M. Porcium Laecam. This individual has already been mentioned in the 17th chapter. According to Cicero (1. in Cai. 4.—pro Sulla, 18.), the meeting was held in the house of Laeca, on the night of the 6th November, ("ea nocte, quae consecuta est posterum diem nonarum Novembribus, me (Cicerone) consule.") Sallust evidently places the time of this meeting too early: he seems to have been under the impression that it was held about the close of October, since he only mentions the accusation of L. Paullus against Catiline (which occurred on the 22d October) in the 31st chapter. Cicero's account agrees with Sallust's as to this having been merely de ignavia eorum questus, docet, " se Manlium prae-misisse ad eam multitudinem, quam ad capienda arma paraverat ; item alios in alia loca opportuna, qui initium belli facerent ; seque ad exercitum profici cu-pere, si prius Ciceronem oppressisset : eum suis consi-liis multum ¹obficere."

XXVIII. Igitur, perterritis ac dubitantibus ceteris, ²C. Cornelius, eques Romanus, operam suam pollicitus, et cum eo L. Vargunteius, senator, constituere ³ea nocte paullo post, cum armatis hominibus, "sicuti salutatum, introire ad Ciceronem, ac de improviso domi a partial meeting at the house of Laeca ; " convenisse eodem complices ejusdem amentiae scelerisque socios." Dio Cassius only states that Catiline directed his accomplices to assemble by night at a certain house, (εἰς οὐκαντινὰ τὴν τολλαγήνων: 37. 32.)

¹ Obficere. An archaism, according to the common grammar, for officere : but vide page 45. note 4.

² C. Cornelius, &c. Cicero here differs from Sallust, and makes both Cornelius and Vargunteius to have belonged to the equestrian order. " Reperti sunt duo equites Romani, qui te ista cura libera-rent, et sese illa ipsa nocte paullo ante lucem me meo in lectulo interfecturos pollicerentur." (I. in Cat. 4.) " Two Roman knights un-dertook to ease you of that care, and assassinate me the same night in bed before day-break." —Duncan. The discrepancy, however, may easily be removed by supposing that Vargunteius, although a sen-a-tor, was of equestrian extraction and rank. Plutarch calls the two in-dividuals in question Marcius and Cethegus, (Vit. Cic. 16. ed. Hutton. vol. v. p. 236.) The account given by Appian varies from that of Sallust in one or two particulars, and also, like that of Plutarch, in the names. Appian makes Lentulus and Cethegus to have been the intended assassins. (B. C. 2. 3.) The statement of Sallust is no doubt entitled to the most credit.

³ Ea nocte paullo post, &c. " Paullo post intempestam noctem," observes Cortius, " hoc est primo mane, illud enim tempus saluta-tionum erat." It was the custom at Rome for the consuls to hold their levees early in the morning.

⁴ Sicuti salutatum, "as if for the purpose of paying their re-spects."

suae imparatum confodere. Curius, ubi ¹intellegit quantum periculi consuli impendeat, propere per Fulviam, dolum qui parabatur enunciat. Ita illi, janua prohibiti, tantum facinus frustra suscepserant. Interea Manlius in Etruria plebem sollicitare, egestate simul, ac dolore injuriae, novarum rerum cupidam, quod, Sullae dominatione, agros bonaque omnia amiserat; praeterea ²latrones cujusque generis, quorum in ea re- gione magna copia erat; nonnullos ex ³Sullanis colonis, quibus lubido atque luxuria ex magnis rapinis nihil reliqui fecerant.

XXIX. EA cum Ciceroni nunciarentur, ⁴ancipi- tali permotus, quod neque urbem ab insidiis ⁵privato consilio longius tueri poterat, neque exercitus Manlii quantus, aut quo consilio foret, satis compertum habebat, ⁶rem ad senatum refert, jam antea ⁷volgi rumoribus exagitatam. Itaque, quod plerumque ⁸in atroci negotio solet, senatus decrevit, DARENT OPERAM CON- SULES, NE QUID RESPUBLICA DETRIMENTI CAPERET.

¹ Intellegit. The old present: an archaism for intelligit.

² Latrones. Governed by sollicitare understood.

³ Sullanis colonis. The soldiers of Sylla, settled as colonists on the lands of the Etrurians. Compare Cicero (2, in Cat. 9.) "Hi sunt homines ex iis coloniis quas Sulla constituit," &c.

⁴ Ancipi- tali malo, "by the double danger," i.e. both within and without the city.

⁵ Privato consilio, "by his own private vigilance," or "by his single management."

⁶ Rem ad senatum refert, "he lays the matter before the senate." Dahl supposes this to have taken place on the 19th or 21st of October.

⁷ Volgi rumoribus exagitatam, "noised abroad by reason of the popular rumours." Cortius prefers exagitatum, though he retains the common reading: exagitatum would refer to the senate being agitated and alarmed by the popular rumours, previous to Cicero's formal reference.

⁸ In atroci negotio, "in a dangerous emergency."

¹Ea potestas per senatum, more Romano, magistrati maxima permittitur; exercitum parare, bellum gerere, coercere omnibus modis socios atque civis; domi militiaeque² imperium atque judicium summum habere: aliter, sine populi jussu, nulli earum rerum consuli jus est.

XXX. Post paucos dies L. Saenius, senator, in senatu litteras³ recitavit, quas Faesulis adlatas sibi dice-

¹ Ea potestas, &c. Cortius considers ea as an ablative, with formulae decreti, or some other equivalent expression, understood. This interpretation appears to us rather forced: we would prefer rendering the passage as follows: "This is the highest authority which, in accordance with Roman usage, is bestowed upon any magistrate." The whole passage forms a "locus classicus" in relation to the meaning and limits of the famous decree to which it alludes. The decree was called Ullimum or Extremum. By it the republic was said to be entrusted to the consuls. For 120 years before Sylla, the creation of a dictator was disused; but in dangerous emergencies the consuls were armed with dictatorial power by a decree of this nature.

² Imperium atque judicium, &c. "to exercise the highest military and civil controul." Imperium, as opposed to Magistratus or Potestas, denotes military power or authority. The distinction between potestas and potentia appears to be this: Potestas consists in what we have permission to do, potentia in what we have ability to do. Hence potestas refers to delegated authority, potentia to power of one's own acquiring: the former answers to the Greek word ἴσχυρία, the latter to δύναμις. (Dumesnil's Synonymes, s. v.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 108. 3d ed.)—Nulli earum rerum, &c. Some manuscripts give nullius. Cortius and others, however, prefer nulli. A question arises, whether nulli be the dative case, according to the common form of declining the adjective, or the genitive, according to the older mode of inflection. It is thought by many that the position of the words strongly favours the latter opinion. We take the liberty of dissenting from this. The common mode of explaining the passage we consider perfectly unexceptionable: "without an express order of the people, no consul has the right of interfering in these things."

³ Recitavit, "read aloud." Legere, "to read," "to peruse with the eyes without uttering any sound." Recitare, "to read aloud

bat; in quibus scriptum erat, C. Manlium arma cepisse, cum magna multitudine, ¹ante diem vi. Kalendas Novembris. Simul, id quod in tali re solet, alii portenta atque prodigia nunciabant; alii conventus ²fieri, arma portari, ³Capuae atque in Apulia servile bellum moveri. Igitur, ⁴senati decreto, ⁵Q. Marcius Rex Faesulas, that others may hear." Compare Noltenius Lex. Antabar. vol. i. p. 1146. seqq.

¹ Ante diem sextum Kalendas Novembris, "on the sixth day before the Kalends of November," i. e. the 27th October. The Latin phrase is equivalent to die sexto ante Kalendas, or, according to the more usual form, sesto Kalendas. Ernesti and others make diem to be governed by in understood, which is expressed in many instances. Compare Cicero, Phil. 3. 8. "in ante diem iv. Kal. Dec." &c. and 1. in Cat. 3. "Dixi ego idem in senatu, caedem te optimatum contulisse in ante diem v. Kal. Novembres." Zumpt, in his larger grammar, thinks that these apparently anomalous phrases probably arose from a transposition of ante; and that having once written ante die tertio Kalendas, they would easily be led to change die into diem, as if it had been governed by ante. In his smaller grammar (Bancroft's transl. p. 233.) he considers ante diem in the light of an unchangeable substantive, since prepositions which govern the accusative can be set before it. Compare the usage of pridie. "Nos in Formiano esse volumus usque ad pridie Nonas Maias."—Cic. ad Att. 2. 11.

² Fieri, "were being held."

³ Capuae. A rich and flourishing city of Campania, of Etrurian origin. The severe punishment inflicted upon it by the Romans, for opening its gates to Hannibal, is well known. Julius Caesar sent a powerful colony to Capua, and under the emperors it again flourished. But it suffered greatly from the barbarians in a later age; so much so, that the Bishop Landulfus and the Lombard Count Lando transferred the inhabitants to Casilinum, on the Vulturnus, 19 stadia distant. This is the site of modern Capua.

⁴ Senati. Many nouns in Latin appear to have been originally of the second as well as fourth declension.—Scheller, L. G. vol. i. p. 90. Walker's transl.—Struve über die Latinische Declin. und Conj. § 7.

⁵ Q. Marcius Rex. The Marcian house claimed descent from Ancus Marcius, and hence the cognomen of Rex which they assumed. Compare Suetonius (Vit. Caes. 6.) "Nam ab Anco Marcio sunt Marci Iteges," &c. Q. Marcus Rex had just returned from the province of Cilicia, where, as proconsul, he had gained some successes, for which he laid claim to a triumph.

¹Q. Metellus Creticus in Apuliam ²circumque loca, missi : ii utriusq; ³ad urbem imperatores erant ; impe-

¹ Q. Metellus Creticus. He was consul with Q. Hortensius, A. U. C. 685, and in A. U. C. 686—88, reduced, as proconsul, the island of Crete under the Roman sway. Hence his cognomen of Creticus. He enjoyed a triumph for this success, A. U. C. 691, though opposed by Pompey. Compare Livy (Epit. 99.), "Q. Metellus proconsul Gnosson, et Lyctum, et Cydoniam, et alias plurimas urbes expugnavit. Cn. Pompeius, lege ad populum lata, persequi piratas jussus, &c. intra quadragesimum diem toto mari eos expulit. . . . Queritur Metellus gloriam sibi rerum gestarum a Pompeio praeripi, qui in Cretam miserit legatum ad accipiendo urbium deditio[n]es.—The proconsul, Q. Metellus, takes Gnoissus, Lyctum, Cydonia, and many other cities. Cn. Pompeius, being ordered by a law, which had the sanction of the people, to proceed against the pirates, &c. in forty days drives them wholly from the sea. . . . Metellus complains, that Pompeius had treated him injuriously, in sending a deputy of his own to receive the submission of the Cretans."—Baker. So also Velleius Paterculus (2. 34.), "Ne ab hujus quidem usura gloriae temperaverit animum Cn. Pompeius, quin victoriae partem conaretur vindicare. Sed et Luculli et Metelli triumphum, cum ipsorum singularis virtutis, tum etiam invidia Pompeii apud optimum quemque fecit favorabilem.—Cn. Pompeius did not restrain his wishes of participating even the renown acquired there, but attempted to claim a share in the success. However, their own singular merits, and the general disgust at Pompey entertained by all the best men, turned the favour of the public towards the triumphs of Lucullus and Metellus."—Baker. Florus therefore is evidently wrong in stating, that Metellus obtained no other recompense for his successes than the mere honour of a cognomen: "nec quicquam amplius tamen de tam famosa victoria, quam cognomen Creticum reportavit."

² Circumque loca. Circum is here put for circumiacentia. Some editions read circumque ea loca.

³ Ad urbem, "near the city," or "at the gates of the city." Generals who claimed a triumph could not enter the city until the senate diti, ne triumpharent, ¹calumnia paucorum, quibus omnia honesta atque inhonesta vendere mos erat. ²Sed praetores, ³Q. Pompeius Rufus Capuam, ⁴Q. Metellus Celer in agrum Picenum; iisque ⁵permisum, “uti had decided upon their application. If they violated this rule, their military power instantly ceased, and their right to a triumph was lost, since no citizen was allowed to hold any military power within the city-walls. It required a special law to be passed, giving them military authority within the city on the day of their triumph. The senate met their victorious commanders without the walls.

¹ Calumnia paucorum, “by the cabals of a few individuals.” Calumnia appears to be used here in a sense which approaches very nearly its primitive one. If Priscian’s derivation of the term from the old verb calvo, “to thwart,” “to deceive,” be the true one, (calatum in the supine being the intermediate step), the original meaning of calumnia will be “unfair practices,” “cavils,” “cabals,” &c.

² Sed praetores. Understand quoque missi.

³ Q. Pompeius Rufus. There were two families at Rome descended from the Pompeian house, (gens Pompeia); the first, that of the Strabones, from which Pompey, the opponent of Caesar, was sprung; and the other, that of the Rufi. Q. Pompeius Rufus, who was consul A. U. C. 613, belonged to this branch, as also Q. Pompeius Rufus, who was consul with Sylla A. U. C. 666, and Aulus Pompeius Bithynicus, father of the individual mentioned in the text. The son of that Pompeius, who was Sylla’s colleague in the consulship, became the son-in-law of the latter, and had a daughter named Pompeia, who married Julius Caesar.

⁴ Q. Metellus Celer. A member of the Caecilian house. He obtained the consulship A. U. C. 694. The cognomen of Celer was given him from the quickness and despatch with which he provided a show of gladiators after the death of his father, and in the celebration of his obsequies. Thus Plutarch (Vit. Rom. 10. ed. Hutton. vol. i. p. 52.) observes: Καὶ Κοῖντοι Μίττελλοι, ὅτι τοῦ πατρὸς ἀπεβάντος ἀγῶνα μονομάχων ἡρίγεις ὀλίγας ἤτοισαν, θαυμάσαντες τὸ τάχος τῆς παρασκευῆς, Κίληρα προστηγόρουσαν.

⁵ Permissum, “full power was given.” Permittere is “to permit,” “to give leave,” “to empower.” In the treatise addressed to Herennius, permisso is defined to be, “rem tradere, et alicujus voluntati concedere.” Mandatum, on the other hand, corresponds very nearly to our English word “commission.”

"pro tempore atque periculo exercitum compararent." Ad hoc, " si quis indicavisset de conjuratione, quae contra rem publicam facta erat, praemium servo libertatem et ¹sestertia centum; libero impunitatem ejus rei, et sestertia ducenta;" ²itemque, " uti ³gladiatoriae

¹ Pro tempore, &c. "proportioned to the exigency and the danger."

² Sesterteria centum, "one hundred thousand sestertii." One thousand sestertii made a sestertium, which is the name of a sum, not of a coin. The common mode of reckoning among the Romans was by sestertii or nummi. The sestertius, "sesterce," was a silver coin worth originally two asses and a half, and marked by the letters L.L.S. for libra, libra, semis, (two pounds and a half of copper), sometimes abbreviated by contracting L.L. into H, thus H.S. unless H be an abbreviation or corruption from I.I. or two marks of unity, which is far more probable. The oldest Roman money was of brass; and an as, as a coin, was originally a pound of copper. But after silver began to be coined, (some years before the first Punie war,) the as was made to weigh less, at first one-sixth, then one-twelfth, then one-twenty-fourth, of the original weight; so that the coin, which at first had weighed a pound, at last weighed but half an uncia. Of silver coins the denarius was originally equal to 10 asses, and the sestertius, as above mentioned, to two asses and a half. Hence the name sestertius, which is shortened from Semisterterius; i. e. the first an as, the second an as, the third a half as. (Vide Schweighaeuser ad Herodot. I. 50.—Matthiae, G. G. vol. i. p. 176. Blomfield's transl. and Remarks of Editor.) After the reduction of the as, however, to one-twelfth of a pound, the denarius became equal to 16 asses, and the sestertius, or quarter of a denarius, was worth now 4 asses. A denarius weighed about 73 Paris grains, but under the first emperors it was gradually diminished to 63: so that, in the times of the republic, 84 made a pound; but under Domitian it took from 96 to 100. As the silver used in that coin was but little debased by alloy, we may assume that a denarius was equal to a very little more than 15 cents of our money; a sestertius, therefore, was equal to $3\frac{1}{4}$ cents, and 1000 sestertii, or a sestertium, to doll. $37\frac{50}{100}$.—Zumpt's L. G. p. 235. Bancroft's translation.

³ Itemque. Some editions have itemque decrevere. Cortius reads item [decrevere.]

⁴ Gladiatoriae familiae, "troops of gladiators." Gladiators were kept and maintained in schools (in ludis) by persons called Lanistae, familiae Capuam et in cetera municipia distribuerentur, pro cuiusque opibus; Romae per totam urbem vigiliae haberentur, iisque ¹minores magistratus praecessent."

XXXI. QUIBUS rebus permota civitas, atque immutata urbis facies: ex summa laetitia atque ²lascivia, quae ³diuturna quies pepererat, repente omnis tristitia invasit: festinare, trepidare; neque loco, nec homini cuiquam satis credere; neque bellum gerere, neque pacem habere; suo quisque metu pericula metiri. Ad hoc, mulieres, quibus, reipublicae magnitudine, belli timor insolitus, ⁴afflictare sese; manus supplices ad coelum tendere; miserari parvos liberos; ⁵rogitare; omnia pavere; superbia atque deliciis omissis, sibi patriaeque diffidere. At Catilinae crudelis animus eadem illa movebat, ⁶tamen etsi praesidia parabantur, who purchased and trained them. The whole number under one Lanista was called familia. Gladiators were at first composed of captives and slaves, or of condemned malefactors; but afterwards, in the days of the emperors, even free-born citizens, induced by hire or inclination, fought on the arena; some, too, of noble birth.

¹ Minores magistratus. The higher magistrates were the Consuls, Praetors, and Censors: the inferior magistrates were the Aediles, Tribunes, Quaestors, &c. Vide Aut. Gell. 13. 15.

² Lascivia. This term is commonly rendered "wantonness," a meaning which cannot apply here with any peculiar or definite force. It appears to us that "devotion to public amusements" will suit the context better. Dureau de Lamalle translates the word in question by "licence dissolute."

³ Diuturna quies. From the time of Sylla down to this period, that is, for nearly twenty years, there had been an intermission of civil discord.

⁴ Afflictare sese, "were plunged in the deepest affliction." The verb afflictare is the frequentative of affligere, which properly denotes ad terram prostrernere, being compounded of ad and fligere, "to dash or strike against."

⁵ Rogitare, "were making continual inquiries about the conspiracy."

⁶ Tamen etsi, &c. "although precautionary measures were in et ipse ⁴lege Plautia interrogatus ab ²L. Paullo. ³Postremo, dissimulandi caussa, atque sui expurgandi, sicuti ⁴jurgio lacessitus foret, ⁵in senatum venit. Tum M. Tullius consul, sive ⁶praesentiam ejus timens, seu ira agitation against him." Tamen etsi is an archaism for tametsi. The contraction originated in the feeble sound given by the Romans to the letter n.

¹ Lege Plautia. The Plautian or Plotian Law was passed A. U. C. 665, having been proposed by M. Plautius Sylvanus, tribune of the commons. It ordained that all who should plot against the senate, offer any violence to the magistrates, appear with a weapon in public, seize upon any of the higher places of the city with seditious views, or beset with an armed force the abode of any citizen, should be punished with exile. This law was subsequently put in force against those of the conspirators who had not been capitally dealt with.

² L. Paullo. L. Aemilius Lepidus Paullus, brother of the Lepidus who was afterwards triumvir with Octavianus and Antony. He was consul with C. Claudius Marcellus, A. U. C. 703, and was put to death by the triumvirate, being given up by his brother.

³ Postremo. Sallust here resumes the strict order of the narrative, which had been interrupted by the digression in chapter 28. Interea Manlius, &c.

⁴ Jurgio, "by an accusation originating in private animosity." Jurgium is used in this same sense by Cicero (pro Coel. 13.), "Omnia sunt alia non criminia, sed maledicta jurgii petulantis magis, quam publicae quaestionis."

⁵ In senatum venit. This took place on the sixth day before the ides of November, (the 8th of the month, according to our mode of reckoning); and the meeting of the senate was held in the temple of Jupiter Stator, where Cicero had convened that body. The attempt on the consul's life (vide chap. 28.) was made the day previous. Cicero informs us that Catiline was shunned by all the assembled senators.—Cic. in Cat. 2. 6.

⁶ Praesentiam ejus timens. Catiline's presence in the senate on this occasion was probably feared by Cicero for two reasons: first, lest, with the aid of those members who were implicated in the conspiracy, he might break forth into some act of violence; and, secondly, lest the very circumstance of his openly appearing in that assembly might lead many to believe that he was an innocent and calumniated man.

commotus,¹ orationem habuit luculentam atque utilem reipublicae; ² quam postea scriptam edidit. Sed, ubi ille ³adsedit, Catilina, ut erat paratus ad dissimulanda omnia, demisso voltu, voce supplici postulare, “ Patres conscripti ne quid de se temere crederent: ea familia ortum, ita ab adolescentia vitam instituisse, ⁴ut omnia bona in spe haberet: ne aestumarent, sibi patricio homini, ⁵cujus ipsius atque majorum plurima beneficia in plebem Romanam essent, perdita republica opus esse, ¹ Orationem habuit, &c. “ delivered an oration, brilliant in itself, and beneficial in its results to the republic.” The speech to which allusion is here made, was the first oration against Catiline. So splendid a burst of extemporaneous eloquence deserves far higher encomiums than the cold and formal praise bestowed by the historian. This oration of Cicero’s proved of service to the state on two accounts: it rendered the conspiracy formed against the republic so clear that no one could doubt its existence, and it compelled Catiline to retire from the city.

² Quam postea scriptam edidit, “ which he afterwards committed to writing and published.” Elegant Latinity for quam postea scriptis et edidit. “ In point of effect,” observes Mr Dunlop, “ this oration must have been perfectly electric. The disclosure to the criminal himself of his most secret purposes—their flagitious nature, threatening the life of every one present—the whole course of his villainies and treasons blazoned forth with the fire of incensed eloquence—and the adjuration to him, by flying from Rome, to free his country from such a pestilence, were all wonderfully calculated to excite astonishment, admiration, and horror.”—Dunlop’s Roman Literature, vol. ii. p. 299. Lond. ed.

³ Adsedit, “ took his seat.” Adsidere, “ to sit down,” “ to take one’s seat.” Adsidere, “ to keep one’s seat,” “ to be sitting by the side of.” The former is compounded of ad, and sidere “ to settle,” or “ be fixed.”

⁴ Ut omnia bona in spe haberet, “ as to entertain hopes of enjoying all preferments.” Beauzé renders it, “ l’autorisaient à prétendre à tout ce qu’il y avoit de mieux.”

⁵ Cujus ipsius atque majorum, &c. “ at whose own hands and those of his ancestors very many kindnesses had been received by the Roman commons.”

cum eam servaret M. Tullius, "inquilinus civis urbis Romae." Ad hoc maledicta alia cum adderet, obstrepero omnes, hostem atque ²"parricidam vocare. Tum ille furibundus: "Quoniam quidem circumventus," inquit, "ab inimicis praeeeps agor, ³incendium meum ruina restinguam."

¹ Inquilinus civis, "an adventitious citizen." Inquilinus civis properly denoted one who was not born at Rome, but who possessed the rights of citizenship, having no house of his own, but occupying a hired lodging. Cicero, who was born at Arpinum, is here sneeringly termed an adventitious citizen, lodging in the city. Compare Appian. (Bell. Civ. 2.), ἰε μὲν ἀγωστοῖς γίνεσθαι, ΚΑΙΝΟΝ ἐναπέζεν· ἴε δὲ ξειναὶ τῆς πόλεως ΙΓΚΟΤΙΑΙΝΟΝ, φέρεται κακῶσσιν τὰς ιηματίντας οὐ ἀλλοτρίαις οίκοις. Plutarch (Vit. Cic.) states that, on the occasion alluded to in the text, Catiline attempted to address the house in defence of his conduct before Cicero rose up; but that, when he began to speak, the senators interrupted him in such a manner that he could not be heard. He is silent respecting any reply having been made by him to the oration of the consul. It would appear from this, but more especially from a remark of Cicero's in his speech for Murena (chap. 25.), that the narrative of Sallust is here erroneous. According to Cicero, Catiline uttered a threat similar to that mentioned in the text, a few days before, when replying to Cato, who menaced him in the presence of the senate with a public trial. Cicero, moreover, (2. Cat. 6.), in giving an account to the people on the following day of what had passed in the senate when he openly charged Catiline with his guilt, states expressly that the latter, in spite of his boldness, did not dare to make any reply to his speech. We find the same remark also in the Orator, 37. 129. Florus and Valerius Maximus copy the error of Sallust.

² Parricidam. Catiline is here styled "a parricide," because plotting the destruction of his country, the common parent of all. Compare the language of Cicero (1. Cat. 7.), "Te patria odit ac metuit, et jamdiu te nihil judicat nisi de parricidio suo cogitare."

³ Incendium meum, &c. "I will extinguish with their ruin the conflagration which threatens me." A metaphor taken from the demolition of an edifice for the purpose of stopping a conflagration. The edifice in this case was his native country.

XXXII. DEIN se ex curia domum proripuit; ibi multa secum ipse volvens; quod neque ¹insidiae consuli procedebant, et ab incendio intellegebant urbem vigiliis imunitam, ²optimum factum credens, exercitum augere, ac prius, quam ³legiones scriberentur, antecapere quae bello usui forent; ⁴nocte intempesta ⁵cum paucis in Manliana castra profectus est. Sed Cethego atque Lentulo, ceterisque quorum cognoverat promptam audaciam, mandat, quibus rebus possent, opes factionis confirment, insidias consuli maturent, eadem, incendia, aliaque belli facinora parent: sese ⁶prope

¹ Insidiae consuli. Some understand factae, but the ellipsis is unnecessary, as the dative depends at once upon the preceding noun. So, "Semen satui," (Cato. R. R. 5.); "Causa rebus crendis," (Auson. Ephem.); "Rebus humanis praeses," (Sen. ad Polyb. 31.) Compare also our author's own expression in this same chapter, "insidias consuli maturent."

² Optimum factum credens, "believing it his most advisable course." Some editions have factu.

³ Legiones scriberentur. Alluding to the forces which the praetors Pompeius Rufus and Metellus Celer had been authorized to raise. (Chap. 30.)

⁴ Nocte intempesta. The night here alluded to was that which intervened between the 8th and 9th days of November. For an explanation of the phrase, vide note 6, page 61.

⁵ Cum paucis. According to Plutarch (Vit. Cic.) Catiline marched out with three hundred men well armed, and with the fasces and other ensigns of authority, as if he had been a lawful magistrate. Appian states that he assumed on his route proconsular dignity: "Ο μὲν δὲ πάσχεις τε καὶ πελίκες, ὡς τις ἀβύτατος, καύφως μάλα ἀνοχεῖ τοις ιαυτοῖς." (Appian. Bell. Civ. 2. 3.) Dio Cassius makes him, after reaching Faesulae, to have taken the title and badges of consul. Καὶ πρὸς τὰς Φαισεύλας ἤλθων, τόν τε πέλματος ἀντικρού ανιλεῖτο, καὶ τὸ ὄνομα καὶ τὴν σκινήν τῶν ὑπάτων λαβεῖν, κ. τ. λ. (Dio. Cass. 37. 33.)

⁶ Prope diem, "shortly." The more usual orthography is propediem, as one word. The accusative, according to the writers on ellipsis, depends on ad understood. (Patairet's Latin Ellipses, p. 12.) The adverb prope is also not unfrequently joined to a dative.

diem cum magno exercitu ad urbem accessurum. Dum haec Romae geruntur, C. Manlius ¹ ex suo numero ad Marcium Regem mittit, ² cum mandatis hujuscemodi:

XXXIII. “ Deos hominesque testamur, imperator, nos arma neque contra patriam cepisse, neque quo periculum ³ homini faceremus, sed uti corpora nostra ab injuria tuta forent; qui miseri, egentes, violentia atque crudelitate foeneratorum, ⁴ plerique patriae, sed omnes fama atque fortunis, expertes sumus: neque cuiquam nostrum licuit, more majorum, ⁵ lege uti, ne-

Thus Virg. Georg. I. 355. “ propius stabulis armenta tenerent.” Nep. Hann. 8. propius Tiberi, &c.

¹ Ex suo numero. The common text has legatos after these words; but it is more elegantly understood.

² Cum mandatis, “ with a message.” Beauzée renders it “ avec une sorte de manifeste.” But Cortius more correctly makes the communication to have been a verbal one.

³ Homini, “ to any individual.” Some editions, in place of homini, have aliis.

⁴ Plerique patriae, &c. The student will observe the double construction in this passage, by which expertes is first joined with a genitive, and immediately after with ablatives. This change of case is not unfrequent in Sallust. Thus, “ Poenam sibi oneri, impunitatem perdundae reipublicae fore.” (Cat. chap. 46.) “ Ubi videt neque per vim, neque insidiis opprimi posse.” (Jug. chap. 7.) “ Plerosque militiae, paucos fama cognitos accire.” (Jug. chap. 84.) Compare Plautus (Asin. 3. 2. 31.) “ Ut meque, teque, maxime, atque ingenio nostro decuit.”

⁵ Lege uti, “ to avail himself of the benefit of the law.” The law here alluded to is commonly called the Papirian, not because proposed by a magistrate of that name, as some imagine, but on account of its having been occasioned by the conduct of a usurer named Lucius Papirius. It was passed A. U. C. 428, and ordained that no person should be held in fetters or stocks except convicted of a crime, and in order to punishment; but that, for money due, the goods of the debtor, not his person, should be answerable. (Liv. 8. 28.) Livy remarks of this law, that it broke one of the strongest bonds of credit: “ Victum eo die, ob impotentem injuriam unius, que, amissis patrimonio, ¹liberum corpus habere; tanta saevitia foeneratorum atque ²praetoris fuit. Saepe ³majores vestrum, miseriti plebis Romanae, decretis suis ⁴inopiae opitulati sunt: ac novissime, memoria nostra, propter magnitudinem aeris alieni, voluntibus omnibus bonis, ⁵argentum aere solutum est. Saepe ingens vinculum fidei." On this account, as may well be supposed, it was unfavourably received by the rich, and had to be re-enacted forty years afterwards, at the time of the secession to the Janiculum.

¹ Liberum corpus habere. The cruelty and oppression which marked the conduct of the rich towards their unfortunate debtors, occasioned most, if not all of the disturbances that interfered with the earlier growth of the Roman state. Compare the words of Sallust, in a fragment of his History: " Servili imperio Patres plebem exercere; de vita atque tergo, regio more, consulere; agro pellere, et, ceteris expertibus, soli in imperio agere. Quibus saevitiis et maxime foeneris onere oppressa plebes, cum assiduis bellis tributum simul et militiam toleraret, armata Montem Sacrum atque Aventinum insedit. Tumque Tribunos plebis et alia sibi jura paravit." — Sall. Hist. frag. lib. 1. prope init.

² Praetoris. To the praetors belonged the general administration of public justice. The city praetor (praeator urbanus) is here alluded to: he took cognizance of all litigations between citizens. The praeator peregrinus dispensed justice to foreigners at Rome, or to foreigners and citizens when involved in controversy.

³ Majores vestrum. Almost all the manuscripts have vestri for vestrum; but, according to Aulus Gellius (20. 6.), the oldest copies in his time exhibited vestrum. Correct Latinity requires this latter form in the present case. Nostri and vestri are used when the genitive denotes the object; as amor nostri, cara nostri, miserere nostri, &c.; but nostrum and vestrum must be employed when the genitive indicates the subject,—as frequentia vestrum, contentio vestrum, &c. — Vide Zumpt. L. G. p. 241. Kenrick's transl. 2d ed.

⁴ Inopiae opitulati sunt. Alluding to the laws passed at various times for diminishing the rate of interest.

⁵ Argentum aere solutum est, "silver was paid with brass." The allusion is to the Valerian Law, de quadrante, proposed by L. Valerius Flaccus, when consul, A. U. C. 667. By the provisions of this law, the fourth part only of the debt was paid, namely, an as ipsa plebes, aut dominandi studio permota, aut superbia magistratum, armata a patribus ¹secessit. At nos non imperium neque dvitias petimus, quarum rerum caussa bella atque certamina omnia inter mortalis sunt: sed libertatem, quam ²nemo bonus, nisi cum anima simul, ³amittit. Te atque senatum obtestamur, consultis miseris civibus; legis praesidium, quod iniquitas praetoris eripuit, restituatis: neve eam necessitudinem for a sestertius, and a sestertius for a denarius; or 25 for 100, and 250 for 1000. The sestertius was originally equal to two asses and a half, and the denarius to ten; when, however, the weight of the as was diminished to one ounce, a denarius passed for sixteen asses, and a sestertius for four, which proportion continued when the as was reduced to half an ounce. Velleius Paterculus (2. 23.) speaks of the Valerian law above mentioned in terms of merited reprobation. “Valerius Flaccus, turpissimae legis auctor, qua creditoribus quadrantem solvi jusserset.” Montesquieu, on the other hand, praises this law. (L'Esprit des Lois, 22. 22.) The error into which he fell, of mistaking quadrans, in the text of Paterculus, as equivalent to usurae trientes, after being noticed and corrected by many of the learned, was finally removed from his work.

¹ Secessit. Three secessions of the people are recorded in Roman history. The first took place A. U. C. 260, on account of the severity of creditors, and was made to the Sacred Mount. (Liv. 2. 32.) The second was occasioned by the conduct of Appius Claudius, the decemvir, and was made first to the Aventine and afterwards to the Sacred Mount. (Liv. 3. 50.) It happened A. U. C. 305. The third was produced by the same cause as the first, and was made to the Janiculum, A. U. C. 466. (Liv. Epit. lib. 11.)

² Nemo bonus, “no man of spirit.”

³ Amittit, “parts with.” The student will observe that perdit would change entirely the spirit of the passage. Amittere is simply “to lose the possession of a thing which one has once had.” Perdere, on the other hand, is “to lose,” “destroy,” or “throw away uselessly or hurtfully.” Thus, in the treatise addressed to Herennius (4. 44.), we have the following: “Quod mihi bene videtur Decius intellexisse, qui se devovisse dicitur, et pro legionibus in hostes intulisse medios; unde amisit vitam, at non perdidit.”—Vide Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 98. 3d ed.

imponatis, ut quaeramus, ¹quonam modo ulti maxime sanguinem nostrum pereamus."

XXXIV. AD haec ²Q. Marcius: " Si quid ab senatu petere vellent, ab armis discedant, Romam supplices proficiscantur: ea mansuetudine atque misericordia senatum populumque Romanum semper fuisse, ut nemo umquam ab eo frustra auxilium petiverit." At Catilina ex itinere plerisque consularibus, praeterea ³optumio cuique, litteras mittit: " se falsis criminibus circumventum, quoniam factioni inimicorum resistere nequiverit, fortunae cedere, ⁴Massiliam in exilium proficisci; ⁵non quo sibi tanti sceleris conscius; sed uti

¹ Quonam modo, &c. " in what way we may perish, after having most effectually avenged our blood;" i. e. how we may sell our lives as dearly as possible.

² Marcius. The verb respondit is elegantly understood. Thus, Phaedrus, i. 25. 8. " At ille, facerem meherecule, nisi esse scirem carnis te cupidum meae." — Vide Palairet's Latin Ellipses, p. 254.

³ Optumio cuique, " to each most eminent person." Optumio cuique is here equivalent to optimatibus singulis. From a comparison of various passages in Cicero, it would appear that optimates, in that writer, denotes " persons distinguished by rank or political merit," and sometimes the former only.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 107. 3d ed.

⁴ Massiliam, " Marseilles." A famous city of Gallia Narbonensis, on the shore of the Mediterranean. It was founded by the Phocaean Greeks of Asia Minor, and became a place of refuge to a part of the inhabitants of the parent city, when they fled from the power of Cyrus. It was famous for its commerce, and eminent as a seat of learning. At one period it was much resorted to by the Romans. The date of its foundation is said to have been B. C. 600.

⁵ Non quo, &c. " not that he was conscious to himself," &c. This use of non quo for non quod has been very much disputed. H. Stephens (Schediasm. 2. 7.), and Laurentius Valla (Eleg. 2. 37.), particularly oppose it. Tursellinus, on the other hand, successfully defends its correctness, both from the language of manuscripts and the usage of the best writers. (Turs. de Part. p. 494. ed. Lips. 1769, and p. 240. ed. Bailey, Lond. 1828.) It is, however, not to be denied, as Zumpt well observes, that it is safer in general to say non respublica quieta foret, neve ¹ex sua contentione sedatio oriaretur." Ab his longe diversas litteras Q. Catulus in senatu ²recitavit, quas sibi nomine Catilinae redditas dicebat: ³earum exemplum infra scriptum.

XXXV. "L. CATILINA Q. Catulo ⁴S. ⁵Egregia tua

quod, non eo quod, non ideo quod, non quoniam.—Zumpt. L. G. p. 335. Kenrick's transl. 2d ed.

¹ Ex sua contentione, "from any private quarrel of his."

² Recitavit. Vide note 3. page 64.

³ Earum exemplum, "a copy of it." Of course we must regard the letter as genuine, and not the production of the historian.

⁴ Q. Catulo S. The letter S is abbreviated from Salutem, which is governed by dicit understood. The whole expression in the text will be equivalent to "L. Catiline greets Q. Catulus," or, "wishes him health." As regards the epistolary correspondence of the Romans, the following remarks may not be misplaced. If either of the parties was invested with an office, civil or military, it was usual to express it thus: "P. Serv. Rullus. Trib. pl. x. vir Pompeio Consuli." When the person addressed was an intimate friend, they sometimes added the epithets, "Humanissimus," "Optimus," "Suavissimus," and very frequently "Suus," as "Practores Syracusani Marcellio suo." The "Praeloquium" was sometimes conceived in the following terms: "Si vales, gaudeo; ego valeo;" and frequently written in the initials only, S. V. G. E. V., or S. V. B. E. E. V.; that is, "Si vales, bene est, ego valeo." The letter frequently ended with the word "Vale," sometimes "Ave," or "Salve," to which, in some instances, was added the expression of endearment, "Mi anime." The place where the letter was written was subjoined, unless previously communicated. The date always expressed the day, frequently the year, and sometimes the hour. They used no signature, or subscription, unless when writing to emperors. There was very rarely an inscription on the outside, the letter being delivered to a letter-carrier (tabellarius), who was made acquainted with the person for whom it was intended. The letter was tied round with a string, the knot of which was sealed. The seal was generally a head of the letter-writer, or of some of his ancestors, impressed on wax or chalk. Hence the phrases for "to open a letter," are "vinculum solvere," "incidere linum," "epistola solvere." It was usual also for the bearer of the letter, before it was opened, to request the person to examine the seal, that he might be sure there was no impos-fides, re cognita, gratam in magnis periculis fiduciam commendationi meae tribuit. "Quamobrem defensionem in novo consilio non statui parare; satisfactionem ex nulla conscientia de culpa proponere decrevi, quam, ⁵me dius fidius, veram licet cognoscas. Inju-ture.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 283. 3d ed. Lipsii Op. vol. ii. Gruter. Thes. vol. v.

⁵ Egregia tua fides, &c. "Your distinguished integrity, known to me by experience, has given a pleasing confidence to my present recommendation;" i. e. has inspired me with a pleasing confidence in recommending my concerns to your care.

⁶ Quamobrem defensionem, &c. Defensio is here opposed to satisfactio, and signifies a formal defence in the presence of one's enemies, while satisfactio denotes a general explanation, such as may satisfy a friend. The whole passage may hence be rendered as follows: "Wherefore, as regards the novel step which I have taken, I have resolved not to prepare a formal defence of it against my enemies, but, without any consciousness of misconduct, have determined to lay before you such an explanation as may remove the doubts of a friend." The phrase "ex nulla conscientie DE CULPA," Burnouf considers a remnant of earlier Latinity, when the preposition, as in our modern tongues, was used to identify individual cases, de culpa being here equivalent to culpae. We doubt the correctness of this explanation. The preposition appears to be here used with the ablative for the purpose of expressing the slightest possible relation between conscientia and culpa in the mind of the writer.

⁷ Quam. Referring to satisfactionem.

⁸ Me dius fidius, &c. "which, upon my honour as a man, you will find to be true." As regards the expression dius fidius, Festus makes it the same as Διός filius, "the son of Jove," i. e. Hercules. He states, at the same time, two other explanations; one, which makes it equivalent to divi fides, and the other to deici fides. All these etymologies are decidedly erroneous. A passage in Plautus (Asin. l. 1. 8.) furnishes a safer guide. It is as follows: "Per deum fidium quaeris; jurato mihi video necesse esse eloqui, quidquid roges." From this passage we may fairly infer, that, in the phrase under consideration, dius is the same as deus or divus, and fidius an adjective formed from fides. Hence dius fidius, "the god of honour," or "good faith," will be the same as the Zευς τιστις of the Greeks; and if we follow the authority of Varro (L. L. 4. 10.), identical with the Sa-riis contumeliisque concitatus, quod, ¹fructu laboris industriaeque meae privatus, ²statum dignitatis non obtinebam, publicam miserorum caussam pro mea consuetudine suscepi: non quin aes alienum ³meis nominibus ex possessionibus solvere possem, cum alienis nominibus liberalitas Orestillae, suis filiaeque copiis, persolveret: sed quod ⁴non dignos homines honore honestatos videbam, meque ⁵falsa suspicione alienatum sentiebam. ⁶Hoc nomine satis honestas, pro meo casu, spes reliquae dignitatis conservandae sum securitus. Plura cum scribere vellem, nunciatum est, vim mihi parari. Nunc Orestillam commendo, tuaeque fidei trado: ⁷eam ab injuria defendas, per liberos tuos rogatus. ⁸Haveto."

bine Saneus, and Roman Hercules; so that me dius fidius is nothing more than me deus fidei (i. e. Hercules) adjuvet, or, in other words, mehercule. Respecting the Hercules of the earlier mythology, some curious remarks will be found in Ritter's Vorhalte, p. 375, seqq.

¹ Fructu laboris. Alluding to the consulship, which he had sought ineffectually.

² Statum dignitatis, "that station in the republic to which I was fairly entitled." Compare chap. 18. "Post paullò Catilina, pecuniarum repetundarum reus, prohibitus erat consulatum petere," &c.

³ Meis nominibus, "of my own contracting." — Alienis nominibus, "contracted by others, and for which I had become surety." Among the Romans, it was a customary formality, in borrowing money, to write down the sum and subscribe the person's name in the banker's books. Hence nomen is put for a debt, for the cause of a debt, for an article of account, &c.

⁴ Non dignos homines, &c. "unworthy men graced with honour;" i. e. raised to high preferment.

⁵ Falsa suspicione alienatum, "alienated from public favour through groundless suspicion."

⁶ Hoc nomine, &c. "On this account I have pursued a course sufficiently honourable, considering my calamitous situation, and one which leads me to entertain the hope of preserving what consideration there is left me."

⁷ Eam ab injuria defendas, &c. "Defend her from injury, being entreated so to do by the love you bear to your own offspring."

⁸ Haveto. An archaism for Aveto. Catullus uses this form (101, XXXVI. SED ipse, paucos dies commoratus apud C. Flaminium Flammam in agro Arretino, dum vicepatem, antea sollicitatam, armis exornat, ¹ cum fuscibus atque aliis imperii insignibus in castra ad Manlium contendit. Haec ubi Romae comperta; senatus “Catilinam et Manlium hostes judicat; ceterae multitudini diem statuit, ante quam ²sine fraude liceret ab armis

10.), “Hunc atque Vale.” Compare Quintilian, I. 6. 21. ed. Spalding. Whiter’s etymology of the word is extremely ingenious: “Hunc or Ave is nothing but Habe, have, possess—riches, honours, health.”

¹ In agro Arretino. The common text has Reatino. As Reute, however, was a town of the Sabines, and as Catiline was proceeding along the Aurelian way, under the pretence of retiring to Massilia, but in reality to join Manlius, it is far preferable to adopt Arretino as the lection, Arretium (now Arezzo) being an ancient city of Etruria.

² Cum fascibus, &c. Compare the language of Cicero (2. Cat. 6.), “Quum haesitaret, quum teneretur, quæsivi quid dubitaret proficisci eo, quo jampridem pararet; quum arma, quum securæ, quum fæces, quum tubæ, quum signa militaria, quum aquilam illam argenteam, cui ille etiam sacrarium scelerum domi sue fecerat, scirem esse præmissam.”—Hostes, “public enemies.” Hostis denotes an avowed and public enemy, either to an individual or to a people or party. Inimicus (i. e. non amicus) is a man bearing enmity to another individually, that enmity being of a private nature. A similar distinction prevails in Greek. Thus Ammonius ($\Pi\tau\varphi\delta\alpha\phi. \lambda\iota\zeta. s. v. i\chi\theta\varrho\delta\sigma$) observes: ‘ $\chi\chi\theta\varrho\delta\sigma \mu\dot{\iota}\sigma \iota\sigma\tau\iota\sigma \delta\pi\varrho\sigma\tau\varrho\sigma\varrho \varphi\dot{\iota}\delta\sigma$ ’ Πολίμιος δὲ ὁ μισθόταλος χωρῶν τιτλος. Compare Vulck, ad loc. Hence πολίμιος will be equivalent to hostis, and iχθυδσ to inimicus. The original meaning of hostis is thus explained by Cieero: “Hostis apud majores nostros is dicebatur quem nunc peregrinum dicimus.” (De Qff. I. 12. 1. ed. Heus.) To the same effect is the remark of Varro (L. L. 4. pr.), “Multa verba aliud nunc ostendunt, aliud ante significabant, ut hostis. Nam tum eo verbo dicebant peregrinum, qui suis legibus uteretur: nunc dicunt eum, quem tum dicebant perduellum.” So that hostis originally meant nothing more than “a foreigner,” and the term for “public enemy,” in that state of the language, was “perduellis.” This change of meaning furnishes a good comment on the tardy civilization of the Romans.

³ Sine fraude, “with impunity,” or “with the assurance of safety.”

discedere, "praeter rerum capitalium condemnatis." Praeterea decernit, "uti consules dilectum habeant; Antonius cum exercitu Catilinam persequi maturerit; Cicero urbi praesidio sit." Ea tempestate mihi imperium populi Romani multo maxime miserabile visum: cui cum, ad occasum ab ortu solis, omnia domita armis ³paterent; domi otium atque divitiae, quae prima mortales putant, adfluerent; fuere tamen cives qui seque

Compare the words of Ulpian (leg. 131. de F. S.), "Aliud fraus est, aliud poena. Fraus enim sine poena esse potest: poena sine fraude esse non potest. Poena est noxae vindicta; fraus et ipsa noxa dicitur, et quasi poenae quaedam praeparatio."

¹ Praeter condemnatis. In this clause, condemnatis depends on liceret, and praeter is used adverbially for praeter quam. The instances, however, of such a usage, are not of very frequent occurrence. We have one in Justin. (13. 5.), "Alexander epistolas in Graeciam scriperat, quibus omnium civitatum exiles, praeter caedis damnati, restituebantur." (Vide Graev. ad loc.) Another example is found in Suetonius, though not so conclusive as the first: "Reliquerit eum nullo, praeter auguralis sacerdotii, honore impertitum." (Claud. 4. vol. ii. p. 10. ed. Crus.)

² Dilectum. Some editions prefer delectum. The orthography, however, is hardly indifferent; delectus is from delico; dilectus, from dilego, "to choose from various quarters;" (diversim and lego). In Oudendorp's edition of Caesar, dilectus is always preferred, and so also in that of Oberlin, who states in the Index Latinitatis that the greater number of MSS. give this latter form. The manner of holding a dilectus, or "levy," was as follows: The consuls appointed a day on which all those who were of the military age were to be present in the capitol. When the day arrived, the consuls, seated in their curule chairs, held a levy, by ordering such as they pleased to be cited out of each tribe, and every one was obliged to answer to his name under a severe penalty. They were careful to choose those first who had what they thought lucky names, as Valerius, Salvius, Statorius, &c. Their names were written down on tables; hence scribere, "to enlist," "to levy," or "raise." It was determined by lot in what manner the tribes should be called.

³ Paterent. Some editions have parerent, which appears pleonastic after domita armis.

remque publicam obstinati animis perditum irent. Namque, ¹duobus senati decretis, ex tanta multitudine, neque praemio inductus conjurationem patefecerat, neque ex castris Catilinae quisquam omnium discesserat: ²tanta vis morbi, uti tabes, plerosque civium animos invaserat.

XXXVII. NEQUE solum illis ³aliena mens erat, qui consciit conjurationis; sed omnino cuncta plebes, novarum rerum studio, Catilinae incepta probabat. Id ⁴adeo more suo videbatur facere. Nam semper in civitate, ¹ Duobus senati decretis, “ notwithstanding two decrees of the senate:” Though two decrees of the senate had been made. There is here an ellipsis of factis. The first of these ordinances is mentioned in chap. 30.

² Tanta vis morbi, uti tabes, “ so violent a malady, like some corroding poison,” &c. The distemper or malady here alluded to, is the desire of a change, which influenced at that period the minds of so large a number, and produced a disaffection to the state. Burnouf and others make tabes here equivalent to contagia, but with little propriety as we conceive. Some editions have “ tanta vis morbi atque uti tabes,” which Beauzée adopts, and renders the passage as follows: “ Tant la violence, et, pour ainsi dire, la contagion de cette espèce de maladie, avoit infecté,” &c.

³ Aliena, “ alienated from the public welfare.” — Omnino, “ in general.”

⁴ Adeo, “ indeed.” The primitive meaning of adeo is “ so,” “ so far,” “ to such a degree.” In the present instance, however, its use appears peculiarly elegant, and Burnouf paraphrases it by “ ita enim se res habent,” or, as we would express it in English, “ indeed,” “ in fact,” “ without doubt,” &c. Compare Cic. in Verr. 6. 64. “ Id adeo ex ipso senatus consulto cognoscite;” and also pro Cæc. 30. “ Id adeo, si placet, considerate.” To which we may add the remark of Tursellinus (de Partic. p. 36. ed Lips.—p. 29. ed. Bailey), “ Vis, quae est in hoc usu, sane elegantissima, hujus particulae, vix potest uno verbo exprimi, quod in omnia loca conveniat, sentiturque facilius quam exprimitur. Interdum enim significat aliquam consequentiam, interdum explicationi, narrationi, &c. servit.” Vide Jug. chap. 65. ibid. chap. 110.

¹quis opes nullae sunt, bonis invident, malos extollunt; vetera odere, nova exoptant; odio suarum rerum mutari omnia student; ²turba atque seditionibus sine cura aluntur, quoniam egestas facile habetur sine damno. Sed urbana ³plebes, ea vero praeceps ierat multis de caussis. ⁴Primum omnium, qui ubique probro atque petulantia maxume praestabant; item ali ⁵per dedecora patrimonii amissis; postremo omnes quos flagitium aut facinus domo expulerat; ii Romam, ⁶sicuti in sentinam,

¹ Quis opes nullae sunt, “they who have no resources of their own, look with an evil eye on the higher class of citizens, elevate to office those who are of the same stamp with themselves.” Quis is put for quibus. By bonos are here meant, not the good and virtuous merely, but, generally speaking, the better class of citizens, who are always more or less averse to violent changes in the state, as well from principle, as from the danger which might result to their private affairs. By malos, on the other hand, are meant the needy and unprincipled. Compare Plautus (Captiv. 3. 4. 51), “Est miserorum ut malevolentes sint atque invideant bonis.”

² Turba, “by public disturbance.” — Sine cura, “without any apprehension for themselves.” — Habetur, “is kept,” or “exists.” The idea expressed in the text, when paraphrased, will be, “since poverty does not easily suffer loss.”

³ Plebes. To be construed as the nominative absolute. Some editions read a vero instead of ea vero, removing at the same time the comma after plebes, which of course alters the construction. This emendation, however, is far inferior to the reading in our text. From a view of the context it will appear, that Sallust first speaks of the people in general, the people of the whole empire, (cuncta plebes omnino). He then particularizes the people of the capital, and remarks, that with regard to them there were other and more special reasons, the operation of which led them to favour the designs of Catiline.

⁴ Primum omnium. Opposed, not to item and postremo, in the same sentence, but to deinde, at the commencement of the next.

⁵ Per dedecora, “by disgraceful excesses.”

⁶ Sicuti in sentinam, “as into some impure receptacle.” Sentina is properly the bottom of a ship, where the bilge-water collects. It is applied also by Cicero to the rabble, &c.

confluxerant. Deinde, multi memores Sullanae victoriae, quod, ex ¹gregariis militibus alios senatores videbant, alios ita divites, uti ²regio victu atque cultu aetatem agerent, sibi quisque, ³si in armis forent, ex Victoria talia sperabant. Praeterea, juventus, quae in agris, manuum mercede, inopiam toleraverat, ⁴privatis atque publicis largitionibus excita, urbanum otium integrato labore praetulerant. Eos atque alios omnis malum publicum alebat. Quo minus mirandum, homines egenit, malis moribus, maxima spe, ⁵reipublicae juxta ac sibi consuluisse. Praeterea, quorum, victoria Sulla, parentes proscripti, bona erupta, ⁶jus libertatis immi-

¹ Gregariis militibus, “ common soldiers.”

² Regio victu, “ with all the luxury of kings.”

³ Si in armis forent. The Aldine reading, which some retain, is “ si victoria in armis foret, talia sperabat.”

⁴ Privatis atque publicis largitionibus. The private largesses were bestowed either by the candidates for public favour, or by those who had already enjoyed it: the public have reference to the corn distributed among the lower orders at the expense of the state—five bushels monthly to each man. Compare Sallust (Hist. Frag. ed. Cort. p. 974.), “ Qua tamen quinis modiis libertatem omnium aestumavere,” &c. and also Suetonius (Jug. 40, vol. i. p. 274. ed. Crus.), “ Ac ne plebs frumentationum causa frequentius a negotiis avocaretur, ter in annum quaternum mensium tesseras dare destinavit,” &c.—Excitu, “ urged on,” or, “ aroused.” Excitus, with the short penult, as we have it here, comes from excio, whereas excitus, “ called forth,” belongs to excio. The same remark will apply to the other compounds of cicio and cio: thus percitus, “ roused;” excitus, “ stirred up;” but excitus (from excio), “ called forth;” accitus (from accio), “ called to one,” &c.

⁵ Reipublicae juxta, &c. “ showed no more regard to the public interest than to their own;” i. e. were equally neglectful of their own and the public good. For this adverbial use of juxta, compare chap. 61. “ Ita cuneti suae atque hostium vitae juxta pepercent.”

⁶ Jus libertatis imminentium erat. Alluding to a law enacted by Sylla, when dictator, (Lex Cornelia, A.U.C. 673), which declared the children of proscribed persons incapable of holding any public office.

nutum erat, haud sane alio animo belli eventum exspectabant. Ad hoc, quicumque ¹ aliarum atque senati partium erant, conturbari rempublicam, quam minus valere ipsi, malebant. ² Id adeo malum multos post annos in civitatem reverterat.

Compare Velleius Paterculus (2. 28.), "exclusique paternis opibus liberi," and Plutarch (Vit. Syll.), ἐ δὲ πάντων ἀδικώτατον θέση, τῶν πρεσβυτερισμάτων ἡπίμωσις καὶ σιδηρός καὶ τὰ καθηματα πάντων ἤσημεν. To the same effect are the words of Aemilius Lepidus, as given by Sallust, (Hist. Frag. lib. 1. p. 936. ed. Cort.) About twenty years after this event, a powerful effort was made by the individuals who were suffering under the operation of this law, to have it repealed. Cicero was at that time consul, and by his strenuous exertions defeated the application. Of the oration delivered by him on this occasion, (De proscriptorum liberis), a solitary fragment is preserved by Quintilian (11. 1.), "Quid enim crudelius quam homines honestis parentibus ac majoribus natos a republica submoveri? Sed ita legibus Syllae continetur status civitatis, ut, his solutis, stare ipsa non possit." (Cic. Op. ed. Olivet. vol. vi. p. 479.) Cicero himself alludes to his conduct in this affair, in his oration against Piso (chap. 2.) He allowed the claim to be perfectly reasonable, but argued against it on the ground of state policy. Julius Caesar, however, subsequently abrogated this unjust ordinance. Thus Suetonius (Jul. 41.) remarks, "Admisit ad honores et proscriptorum liberos;" and Plutarch (Vit. Caes.), αἰσχύλις δὲ δικτάτωρ ἵνα τὴν βουλῆν, φυγάδας τι κατέγαγε, καὶ τὸν ἱπέτην Σύλλα θεραπεύει τοὺς ταῦτας ἴστιμους ἵστοισι. Comp. Dio. Cass. 41. 18. Sigan. ad Cic. L c. Crus. ad Suet. l. c.

¹ Aliarum atque senati, &c. "of a different party from that of the senate." Atque and ac, after alius, aliter, alter, secus, &c. have the force of quam; after juxta, aque, &c. they serve for ut, "as." This idiom is very ingeniously explained by Hunter (ad Liv. 1. 9.), on the principle of cross-reference. Thus, Tu fecisti aliter, atque ego, is equivalent to Tu fecisti aliter, atque ego feci aliter, "you have acted differently, and I have acted differently." By applying the principle of cross-reference, this becomes, "you have acted differently from me, and I differently from you."

² Id adeo malum, &c. "with such violence had that evil, after many years of cessation, returned upon the state." Adeo appears

XXXVIII. NAM, postquam, Cn. Pompeio et M. Crasso consulibus, ¹tribunicia potestas restituta; homines adolescentes, [²summam potestatem nacti], ³quibus aetas animusque ferox, coepere, senatum criminando, plebem exagitare; dein, largiundo atque pollicitando, magis incendere; ita ipsi clari potentesque fieri. Contra eos summa ope nitebatur pleraque nobilitas, ⁴senati to have, in this passage, the force of in tantum. Compare Tursellin. de part. s. v. Dureau de Lamalle gives it the same meaning: "Tant ces funestes rivalités, longtemps assoupies, s'étaient réveillées avec plus de fureur que jamais!"

¹ Tribunicia potestas restituta. The tribunes of the commons were originally created A.U.C. 260, at the time of the secession to the Sacred Mount, for the purpose of protecting the rights of the people. Under the sanction, however, of the law which made their persons sacred, they subsequently carried their power to the most extravagant height. Sylla abridged, and in a manner extinguished, that power, by enacting, that whoever had been tribune should not afterwards enjoy any other magistracy; that there should be no appeal to the tribunes; that they should not be allowed to assemble the people and make harangues to them, nor propose laws, but should only retain the right of intercession. In the consulship of Cotta, however, (A.U.C. 679), they again obtained the right of enjoying other offices; and in that of Pompey and Crassus, A.U.C. 683, all their former powers. Pompey's conduct in this affair is very justly condemned by Cicero, since the tribunes now became mere tools in the hands of the ambitious and powerful.

² Summam potestatem nacti. We have, in accordance with the opinion of Cortius, enclosed these words within brackets, as labouring under the suspicion of having been interpolated. They are not necessary to the sense, as by summam potestatem is meant the tribunician power which has already been mentioned in the preceding clause.

³ Quibus aetas animusque ferox, "whose age and character were violent;" i. e. urged on by the fire of youth and the violence of their characters.

⁴ Senati specie, &c. "under the pretence, indeed, of supporting the authority of the senate, but in reality for their own advancement."

specie, pro sua magnitudine. ¹Namque, uti paucis absolvam, per illa tempora quicunque rempublicam agitavere, ²honestis nominibus, alii, sicuti populi jura defenderent, pars, quo senati auctoritas maxima foret, bonum publicum simulantes, pro sua quisque potentia certabant: ³neque modestia, neque modus contentionis erat: utrique victoriam crudeliter exercebant.

XXXIX. SED, postquam Cn. Pompeius ad bellum ⁴maritimum atque ⁵Mithridaticum missus; ⁶plebis opes

¹ Namque, uti paucis absolvam. Some editions insert verum before absolvam, but the reading we have adopted is more in accordance with the conciseness of Sallust.

² Honestis nominibus, "under fair pretexts."

³ Neque modestia, neque modus, "neither moderation nor limit."

⁴ Maritimum. The maritime war against the Cilicians, supported by Mithridates, called also the piratical war. The Cilician pirates covered every sea with their fleets, and extended their depredations even to the coast of Italy and the mouth of the Tiber. Pompey was sent against them, by virtue of the Gabinian law, A.U.C. 687, and brought the war to a conclusion within the space of forty days. Compare Vell. Pat. 2. 31. et 32.: Florus, 3. 6.: Cic. pro Lege Manil.: Plut. Vit. Pomp.

⁵ Mithridaticum. The war with Mithridates, king of Pontus, one of the ablest monarchs with whom the Romans ever had to contend. His character is briefly but ably drawn by Velleius Paterculus (2. 18. 2.), "Vir neque silendus, neque dicendus sine cura, bello acerrimus, virtute eximius, aliquando fortuna, semper animo maximus, consiliis dux, miles manu, odio in Romanos Hannibal.—A personage who should neither be passed by without notice, nor be slightly mentioned; most vigorous in war, excelling in courage, pre-eminent above all others, sometimes in success, always in spirit; in council a general, in action a soldier, and in hatred to the Romans another Hannibal."—Baker. Lucullus carried on the war against him for nearly seven years, at the expiration of which period he was recalled by the senate, and Pompey, who had just ended the piratical war, was, by the Manilian law, sent against Mithridates.

⁶ Plebis opes immundae. The authority of the people was weakened by the high powers delegated to a single individual, Pompey.

imminutae ; paucorum potentia crevit. Hi magistratus, provincias, aliaque omnia tenere : ipsi ¹innoxii, florentes, sine metu aetatem agere ; ²ceteros judiciis terrere, quo plebem in magistratu ³placidius tractarent. Sed, ⁴ubi primum dubiis rebus novandis spes oblata, ⁵vetus certamen animos eorum arrexit. Quod si primo praelio Catilina superior, aut ⁶aequa manu discessisset, profecto ⁷magna clades atque calamitas rempublicam oppres-

¹ Innoxii. The adjective is here used passively, “ unhurt,” or, less literally, “ free from all danger of attack.” Compare Lucan, 9. 894.)

“ Gens unica terras Incolit a saevo serpentum innoxia morbu.”

² Ceteros judiciis terrere, “ they alarmed the rest by the rigour of their judicial investigations.”

³ Placidius, “ more peacefully.” The meaning of the clause is, that those who filled offices of magistracy, especially the tribuneship, might be less disposed to stir up commotions among the people, through dread of prosecution by the nobility, after the expiration of their offices.

⁴ Ubi primum, &c. Gruter suggests novandi, which Cortius acknowledges would make an easier construction, though it would be less in accordance with the style of Sallust than the present reading novandis. Some editions adopt Gruter’s suggestion of novandi, and place a comma after primum, and another after rebus. We have given the reading of Cortius, which may be rendered as follows : “ As soon as the hope was presented to their view of effecting some change in the adverse condition of their affairs.”

⁵ Vetus certamen. “ The old controversy,” i. e. between the patricians and plebeians.—Eorum, referring to the plebeians.

⁶ Aequa manu, &c. “ had left the field on equal terms with the forces of the republic.”

⁷ Magna clades, &c. “ Clades,” observes Hill, “ differs from calamitas in denoting that the misfortune is less grievous from being partial, and though inconsistent with the sound state of that affected by it, yet does not naturally lead to its destruction. It comes from $\pi\lambda\alpha\delta\sigma\varsigma$, ramus, and refers to the accidental rubbing off of a branch, which may injure, though it does not kill, the tree. Calamus, on the other hand, is a derivative from calamus, and has reference to

sisset, neque illis, qui victoriam adepti, diutius ea uti licuisset, quin defessis et ¹exsanguibus, qui plus posset, imperium atque libertatem extorqueret. Fuere tamen ²extra coniurationem complures, qui ad Catilinam initio profecti sunt: in his ³A. Fulvius, senatoris filius; quem, retractum ex itinere, ⁴parens necari jussit. Isdem temporibus Romae Lentulus, sicuti Catilina praeceperat, quoscumque moribus aut fortuna novis rebus idoneos credebat, aut per se, aut per alios sollicitabat; neque solum cives, sed cujusque modi genus hominum, ⁵quod modo [bello] usui foret.

XL. Igitur P. Umbreno cuidam negotium dat, uti the storm which breaks the stalk, and of course destroys the crop. From the misfortune peculiar to the farmer, it has been transferred to all other kinds, and denotes such only as are severely felt, and threaten the destruction of the persons who sustain them."—Hill's Synonyms, p. 160. 4to ed.

¹ Exsanguibus, "completely exhausted." Compare Cicero (pro Sext. 10.), "Hominibus enervatis atque exsanguibus consulatus . . . datus est."

² Extra coniurationem, "unconnected with the conspiracy."

³ A. Fulvius. As Valerius Maximus (5. 8. 5.), in mentioning this same circumstance, calls the name of the father A. Fulvius, Cortius thinks it probable that Sallust wrote A. Fulvii senatoris filius. Dio Cassius (37. 36.) incorrectly makes the son himself a senator: Αὐλίος δὲ Φούλειος, ἀνδρας βουλευτὴν, αὐτὸς ὁ πατὴρ ἀπίσφαξεν. Vide Reimar. ad loc.

⁴ Parens necari jussit. Fathers, among the Romans, had the power of life and death over their children. Hence a father is called a domestic judge or magistrate, by Seneca; and a censor of his son, by Suetonius (Vit. Claud. 16.) Valerius Maximus (l. c.), in relating this affair of the punishment of Fulvius, adds, that the father told the son he had begotten him, not for Catiline against his country, but for his country against Catiline: "Non se Catilinac illum adversus patriam, sed patriae, adversus Catilinam, genuisse."

⁵ Quod modo, &c. "provided only they might be of service for the approaching contest." The word bello occupies different places in different MSS. Cortius therefore with very good reason considers it as spurious.

legatos¹ Allobrogum requirat, eosque, si possit, impellat ad societatem belli; existumans, publice privatimque aere alieno oppressos, praeterea, quod natura² gens Gallica bellicosa esset, facile eos ad tale consilium adduci posse. Umbrenus, quod in Gallia³ negotiatus, plerisque⁴ principibus notus erat, atque eos noverat:

¹ Allobrogum. A people of Gaul, whose country lay between the Isara (now Ivere) and Rhodanus (Rhone). They bravely and for a long time resisted the power of the Roman legions, but were at last reduced by Q. Fabius Maximus, who hence obtained the cognomen of Allobrogicus. Their chief town was Vienna (now Vienne) on the left bank of the Rhone, thirteen miles below Lugdunum (Lyons).

² Gens Gallica, &c. Compare Cato (Origin.), "Pleraque Gallia duas res industriosissime persecutur, rem militarem et argute loqui;" and also Justin (25. 3.), "Neque reges orientis sine mercenario Gallorum exercitu ulla bella gesserunt, neque pulsi regno ad alios quam ad Gallos confugerunt. Tantus terror Galici nominis et armorum invicta felicitas erat," &c. "Neither did the kings of the East carry on any war without a mercenary army of Gauls; nor, when they were driven out of their kingdom, did they fly to any other than the Gauls for shelter. So great was the terror of their name, and such the invincible prosperity of their arms," &c.—Turnbull. Vide etiam Cae. B. G. 3. 19.—6. 24.

³ Negotiatus. Understand erat, "had traded." Cortius distinguishes as follows between the negotiatores and mercatores among the Romans. The negotiatores, especially under the republic, were they who remained for some considerable time in one particular place, whether at Rome or in the provinces. The mercatores, on the contrary, remained a very short time in any place; they visited many countries, and were almost constantly occupied with importing or exporting articles of merchandise. That the employments of the negotiator and the mercator were not the same, is clear from a passage in Cicero: "Postulo mihi respondeat qui sit iste Venutius: mercator an negotiator." (In Verr. 4. 77.)

⁴ Principibus, "leading men."—Noverat. Noscere is "to know," or "to be acquainted with any thing as an object of perception;" "to have an idea or notion of it, as apprehended by the mind." Scire is "to know any thing as a matter of fact, or any itaque sine mora, ubi primum legatos in foro conspexit, ¹ percunctatus pauca de statu civitatis, et quasi dolens ejus casum, requirere coepit, “ quem exitum tantis malis sperarent ? ” Postquam illos ²videt “ queri de avaritia magistratum, accusare senatum, quod in eo auxilii nihil esset ; miseriis suis remedium mortem exspectare : ” “ at ego,” inquit, “ vobis, ³si modo viri esse voltis, rationem ostendam, qua tanta ista mala effugiatsis.” Haec ubi dixit, Allobroges in maxumam spem adducti Umbrenum orare, uti sui misereretur : nihil tam asperum, neque tam difficile, ⁴quoniam cupidissime facturi essent, dum ea res civitatem aere alieno libera-ret. Ille eos in domum ⁵D. Bruti perducit ; quod foro truth as an object of conviction.” The following examples will explain this difference more fully: “ Hominem novi, et dominus qui nunc est scio.” (Plaut. Rud. 4. 3. 26.) “ I am acquainted with the man, and I know who his master is.” The latter clause, however, does not imply any personal knowledge of the master. He might know him only by name. “ Non norunt, scio.” (Plaut. Cas. Prol.) “ They are not acquainted with the play,” not having seen it performed—“ this circumstance I know.”—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 82. 3d ed.

¹ Percunctatus. Percunctari (or percontari) means “ to sift to the bottom by search or inquiry,” “ to pry,” and has, according to Dumesnil, a relation very often to public news. It is derived probably from per and contus, (quasi per contum exquirere), and expresses a sifting and inquisitive manner of asking. Percunctari, moreover, answers to the Greek περιθάναται, and always requires a detailed reply.

² Videt. This verb is here used instead of audit. Compare Cicero (pro Arch. 8.), “ Quoties ego hunc Archiam vidi dicere ex tempore.”

³ Si modo, &c. “ provided only you are inclined to act the part of men.”

⁴ Quoniam. In the sense of quod non, which is the reading of some editions.

⁵ D. Brutii. Decimus Junius Brutus, of whom mention has already been made.

propinqua, neque aliena consilii, propter Semproniam; nam tum Brutus ¹ab Roma aberat. Praeterea Gabiniūm arcessit, ²quo major auctoritas sermoni inesset: eo, praesentē conjurationem aperit; nominat socios, praeterea multos cujusque generis ³innoxios, quo legatis animus amplior esset; dein eos pollicitos operam suam dimittit.

XLI. SED Allobroges diu in incerto habuere, quidnam consilii caperent. In altera parte erat aces alienum, studium belli, magna merces in spe victoriae: at in altera ⁴majores opes, tuta consilia, pro incerta spe, certa praemia. Haec illis volventibus, tandem vicit fortuna reipublicae. Itaque Q. Fabio Sangae, cuius ⁵patrocinio civitas plurimum utebatur, rem omnem, uti cognō-

¹ Ab Roma aberat. This is one of the examples which Priscian adduces for the purpose of showing that the preposition is often, more especially by historians, added to the ablative of names of places.

² Quo major auctoritas, &c. "that what he should say might have greater weight."

³ Innoxios, "innocent persons;" i. e. individuals unconnected with the conspiracy. The adjective is here used in what the grammarians call an active sense. Compare note 1, page 89.—Quo legatis animus amplior esset, "that the ambassadors might be inspired with more courage to act."

⁴ Majores opes, "more powerful resources;" those namely of the republic. Dureau de Lamalle renders the phrase by, "une grande masse de puissance."

⁵ Patrocinio. Individual noblemen, or particular families of illustrious rank, were sometimes patrons of whole states. These patrons were generally those who had reduced them under the Roman power, or had, at some time or other, been appointed governors over them; and the rights of patronage were transmitted by them to their descendants. In the present instance Q. Fabius Sanga derived his right of patronage from his ancestor Q. Fabius Maximus, who finally reduced the Allobroges, and hence was surnamed Allobrogicus.

verant, aperiunt. Cicero, per Sangam ¹consilio cognito, legatis praecipit, studium conjurationis vehementer simulent, ceteros adeant, ²bene polliceantur; dentque operam, uti eos quam maxime manifestos habeant.

XLII. ISDEM fere temporibus in ³Gallia Citeriore atque Ulteriore, item in agro Piceno, ⁴Bruttio, Apulia, motus erat. Namque illi, quos antea Catilina dimiserat, inconsulte ac veluti per dementiam ⁵cuncta simul ageré: nocturnis consiliis, armorum atque telorum portationibus, ⁶festinando, agitando omnia, plus timoris quam periculi effecerant. Ex eo numero complures Q. Metellus Celer praetor, ex senati consulto, causa cognita, in vincula conjecterat; item in ulteriore Gallia ⁷C. Murena, qui ei provinciae ⁸legatus praeerat.

¹ Consilio cognito, “having learned the plot.” — Studium conjurationis, &c. “to feign a strong desire for the success of the conspiracy.”

² Bene polliceantur, “to promise fair.” Bene is here equivalent to bona quaesque.

³ Gallia Citeriore. Hither or Cisalpine Gaul, lying south of the Alps, and forming the northern division of Italy. The term citerior is applied in reference to Rome.

⁴ Bruttio. Bruttium, or Bruttiorum Ager, formed one of the divisions of Magna Graecia, and answers at the present day to Calabria Olima. The name, which in its Greek form is Βρύττια, is said to have been derived from the circumstance of the Bruttii having revolted from the Lucanians. Βρύττιος γὰρ καλοῦσι ἀποστάτας, says Strabo, speaking of the Lucanians.

⁵ Cuncta simul agere, “put all their schemes in operation at one and the same moment.” Cortius wishes to exclude cuncta simul from the text, in opposition to all the manuscripts.

⁶ Festinando, agitando omnia, “by their precipitate movements, by their throwing all things into confusion.”

⁷ C. Murena. Brother of Licinius Murena, consul elect. The common reading in Citeriore Gallia has been emended by Cortius, and in Ulteriore Gallia substituted. There can be no doubt whatever as to the correctness of this alteration. Celer was in Hither

XLIII. AT Romae Lentulus, cum ceteris, qui principes conjurationis erant, paratis, ut ¹videbantur, magnis copiis, ²constituerant, uti, Catilina in agrum Faesulanum cum venisset, L. Bestia tribunus plebis, concione habita, quereretur de ³actionibus Ciceronis, bellique Gaul, and Murena, as appears plainly from Cicero (pro Murena, 41.), was in Transalpine or farther Gaul.

² Legatus. A proconsul or praetor chose a legatus to accompany him to his province, and assist him in the discharge of his public duties. Thus Cicero, for example, when he went as proconsul into Cilicia, A. U. C. 702, chose for his legatus his brother Quintus. In the absence of the governor of the province, the legatus exercised full control over it, and had equal authority and jurisdiction. Sometimes the governor remained at home, and merely sent out the legatus to the province; and at other times the senate, without naming any proconsul or praetor, merely sent out a legatus. This last was the case with C. Murena.

¹ Videbantur. Understand illae, referring to copiae.

² Constituerant. The verb is put in the plural, as if Lentulus cum ceteris were a double nominative. "We sometimes find," observes Scheller, "a plural verb after a single subject or person, which, however, is united to another subject by cum; since they are there regarded as two subjects or nominatives: thus Liv. 21. 60. 'Atque ipse dux cum aliquot principibus capiuntur.'" So also Sallust, Jug. 101. "Bocchus cum peditibus . . . postremam Romanam sciem invadunt." Nepos, Phoc. 2. "Demosthenes cum ceteris . . . populiscito in exsilium erant expulsi," &c.—Scheller, L. G. Walker's transl. vol. i. p. 334.

³ Actionibus, "the proceedings," "the acts." Alluding to Cicero's having driven Catiline from the city, and excited, as they maintained, the most groundless suspicions against many innocent individuals. Compare Appian (B. C. 2. 3.), Δεύκοις δὲ Βοστίας, τὸν δῆμαρχον, ἵκκλησίας εἰδὼς ὑπὸ κίρρυξ συνάγειν, καὶ πατητορεῖν τοῦ Κικίζωνος, ἀς αἱ δικαὶ καὶ πολεμόποιοι, καὶ τὴν πόλιν ἐν οὐδενὶ δικῆς διαταράσσοντος. Plutarch informs us, (Vit. Cic. 23. vol. v. p. 336. ed. Hütten.), that, after the conspiracy had been completely crushed, the tribunes, Metellus and Bestia, having entered upon their office a few days before that of Cicero expired, would not suffer him to address the people. They placed their own benches on the rostra, and only gave him permission to take the oath upon laying down his office, gravissimi ¹invidiam optumo consuli imponeret; eo signo, ²proxima nocte cetera multitudo coniurationis suum quisque negotium exsequerentur. Sed ea ³divisa hoc modo dicebantur: Statilius et Gabinius uti cum magna manu ⁴duodecim simul opportuna loca urbis after which he was immediately to descend. Accordingly, when Cicero went up, it was expected that he would take the customary oath; but, silence being made, instead of the usual form, he adopted one that was new and singular. The purport of it was, that "he had saved his country, and preserved the empire," (ἥ μὴν σωτηρίαν τὴν κατέσβει, καὶ διατηρήσκει τὸν οὐγενοῦς); and all the people joined in it.

¹ Invidiam, "the blame." — Optumo consuli. Some have regarded this expression on the part of the historian as extremely honourable, considering the private feud which existed between him and Cicero. We should be inclined to put a different construction upon it. Nothing appears to us more frigid than this language of Sallust respecting one who had been the preserver of his country. And that it would sound so in fact to a Roman ear, may be clearly inferred from a passage in one of the letters of Cicero to Atticus (12. 21.), in which he speaks of Brutus having applied this same expression to him: "Hic autem se etiam tribuere multum mihi putat, quod scriperit optimum consulem. Quis enim jejunius dixit inimicus?" — Brutus thinks he pays me a mighty compliment when he calls me an excellent consul; but could an enemy speak of me in colder terms?" — Guthrie.

² Proxima nocte. Plutarch states, that one of the nights of the Saturnalia had been fixed for the perpetration of the horrid deeds mentioned in the text. The testimony of Cicero is to the same effect, (3. in Cat. 4.) The celebration of the Saturnalia commenced on the 17th day of December, so that Bestia was to have delivered his intended harangue a few days after he had entered upon his office, which, in the case of the tribunes, was the 10th of the same month. On the 5th of December, however, the conspirators were put to death.

³ Divisa, "assigned."

⁴ Duodecim simul opportuna, &c. Plutarch's statement differs from that of Sallust. He informs us that the conspirators had divided Rome into a hundred parts, and selected the same number of men, to each of whom was allotted his quarter to be set on fire.

incenderent, quo tumultu facilior aditus ad consulem, ceterosque, quibus insidiae parabantur, fieret: Cethegus Ciceronis januam ¹obsideret, eum vi adgredereetur, ²alius autem alium: sed ³filiī familiarū, quorum ex nobilitate maxima pars, parentes interficerent; simul, caede et incendio perculsis omnibus, ad Catilinam erumperent. Inter haec ⁴parata atque decreta, Cethegus semper querebatur de ignavia sociorum: illos dubitando et ⁵dies prolatando magnas opportunitates corrumperē; facto, non consulto, in tali periculo opus esse; seque, si pauci adjuvarent, languentibus aliis, impetum in curiam facturum. Natura ferox, vehe mens, manu promptus, maximum bonum in celeritate putabat.

XLIV. SED Allobroges, ex praecepto Ciceronis, per Gabinium ceteros ⁶conveniunt; ab Lentulo, Cethego,

As this was to be done by them all at the same moment, they hoped that the conflagration would be general. Others were to intercept the water, and kill all that went to seek it.

¹ Obsidēret, "should beset." A verb of the third conjugation, obsido, ēre.

² Alius autem alium. Understand adgredereetur. "That one should attack one, another attack another;" i. e. that each should single out his victim.

³ Filiī familiarū. To these Cicero is thought to allude (2. in Cat. 3.), "Hos, quos video volitare in foro, quos stare ad curiam, quos etiam in senatum venire, qui nitent unguentis, qui fulgent purpura," &c. "Those whom I see fluttering in the forum, sauntering about the courts of justice, and even taking their places in the senate; men sleek with perfumes, and shining in purple." —Duncan.

⁴ Parata. Plutarch states, that Caius Sulpicius, one of the praetors, who had been sent to Cethegus's house, found there a large quantity of javelins, swords, poniards, and other arms, all newly furnished.

⁵ Dies prolatando, "by putting off the day of execution."

⁶ Conveniunt, "obtain an interview with." The following examples, with reference to the construction of convenio, may not be misplaced. Convenire in urbem, "to come into the city and assemble."

Statilio, item Cassio, postulant ¹*jusjurandum*, quod ²*signatum* ad civis perferant: aliter haud facile eos ad tantum negotium impelli posse. ³Ceteri nihil suspicantes dant: Cassius semet eo brevi venturum pollicetur, ac paullo ante legatos ex urbe profiscitur. Lentulus [cum his] T. Volturciū quendam, ⁴*Crotoniensem*, mittit, uti Allobroges prius, quam domum pergerent, cum Catilina, data et accepta fide, societatem confirmarent. Ipse Volturcio litteras ad Catilinam dat, quarum exemplum infra scriptum: “Quis sim, ex eo quem ad te misi, cognosces. ⁵Fac cogites, in quanta calamitate sis, et memineris te virum; consideres, quid ⁶*tuae rationes* postulent; auxilium petas ab

Convenire in urbe, “to assemble in the city, having been there before.” Convenire aliquem, “to speak to any one,” or “to have an interview with him.” Convenit hoc mihi, “this suits me,” or ^{“it is} convenient to me.” Convenit mihi cum illo, “I agree with him.”

¹ Jusjurandum, “an oath;” i. e. a written promise in the language and form of an oath, that the conspirators would afford relief to the Allobroges, if the latter joined in the plot, and it should prove successful.

² Signatum, “with their respective seals affixed.”

³ Ceteri nihil suspicantes dant. Compare Cicero (3. in Cat. 5.), “Tabulae proferri jussimus, quae a quoque dicebantur datae. Primum ostendimus Cethego; signum cognovit.—I ordered the letters to be produced, which were said to be sent by the different parties. I first showed them to Cethegus; he owned his seal.”—Duncan.

⁴ Crotoniensem, “a native of Crotona.” Crotona was a large and famous city of Magna Graecia, on the coast of Bruttium, northwest of the Lacinian promontory. It was founded by a Grecian colony, in the third year of the 17th Olympiad, according to Dionysius of Halicarnassus, a short time after the commencement of Numa’s reign at Rome. Pythagoras established his school in Crotona, and is said, by his doctrine and example, to have greatly reformed the dissolute manners of the people.

⁵ Fac cogites, &c. “see that you reflect in how desperate a situation you are.”

⁶ Tuae rationes, “your present circumstances.”

omnibus, ¹etiam ab infimis." Ad hoc, ²mandata verbis dat: "cum ab senatu hostis judicatus sit, quo consilio servitia repudiet? in urbe parata esse, quae jusserit: ne cunctetur ipse propius accedere."

XLV. His rebus ita actis, constituta nocte, qua proficiscerentur, Cicero, per legatos cuncta edoctus, ³L. Valerio Flacco et ⁴C. Pomtino, praetoribus, imperat, uti in ponte ⁵Mulvio per insidias Allobrogum ⁶comitus deprehendant: rem omnem aperit, cuius gratia

¹ Etiā ab infimis. From what follows, "quo consilio servitia repudiet," it is evident that by infimi, "persons of the lowest condition," are meant the slaves. As regards the language of this letter, it may not be amiss to state that Cicero gives it somewhat differently (3. in Cat. 5.) It is more than probable, however, that the orator merely stated the purport of it from memory, while Sallust had access to the original among the archives of the state; for the words of the historian, "quarum exemplum infra scriptum," plainly show that we have here a copy of the original document.

² Mandata verbis dat, "he gives him a verbal message."

³ L. Valerio Flacco. This individual was a descendant of P. Valerius Poplicola, who was consul with M. Junius Brutus. After holding the office of military tribune in Cilicia, and being quaestor in Spain, he obtained the station of praetor during the consulship of Cicero. After the expiration of this latter office, he succeeded to the government of Asia; and on his return was arraigned for extortion, but acquitted through the exertions of Cicero and Hortensius. Cicero's speech in his defence is still extant.

⁴ C. Pomtino. A native of Suessa Pometia. After his praetorship, he succeeded Murena in Transalpine Gaul, defeated the Allobroges who had revolted, and reduced the country to tranquillity, for which he had the honour of a triumph. Cicero subsequently employed him as his lieutenant in Cilicia.

⁵ Mulvio. Now Ponte Molle, one of the bridges over the Tiber. It was built by M. Aemilius Scaurus, from a corruption of whose nomen (Aemilius), the appellation Mulvius is thought to have originated. At this bridge commenced the Via Flaminia, which led from Rome to Ariminum.

⁶ Comitus, "the retinue."

mittebauntur : ¹cetera, uti facto opus sit, ita agant, permittit. ²Homines militares, sine tumultu ³praesidiis collocatis, sicuti praeceptum erat, occulte pontem ob-sidunt. Postquam ad id loci legati cum Volturcio venere, et simul utrimque clamor exortus est ; Galli, ⁴cito cognito consilio, sine mora praetoribus se tradunt. Volturcius primo, cohortatus ceteros, gladio se a mul-

¹ Cetera, uti facto, &c. " he authorizes them to execute the rest of the affair in such a way as the occasion may require."

² Homines militares. Understand Prætores. " The Prætors, men of military experience."

³ Praesidiis collocatis. Compare Cicero (3. in Cat. 2.), " Illi autem cum advesperasceret, occulte ad pontem Mulvium pervenerunt, atque ibi in proximis villis ita bipartito fuerunt, ut Tiberis inter eos et pons interestet. Eodem autem et ipsi, sine cuiusquam suspicione, multos fortes viros eduxerunt, et ego ex præfectura Reatina complures delectos adolescentes, quorum opera in republica assidue utor, præsidio cum gladiis miseram.— They . . . upon the approach of night, privately repaired to the Milvian bridge, where they disposed themselves in such manner in the neighbouring villages, that they formed two bodies, with the river and bridge between them. They likewise carried along with them a great number of brave soldiers, without the least suspicion; and I dispatched from the præfecture of Reate, several chosen youths well armed, whose assistance I had frequently used in the defence of the commonwealth."—Duncan.

⁴ Cito cognito consilio. The Bipont edition omits cito, and Gruter all three words. They are retained, however, and on good grounds, by Cortius, Burnouf, Planche, &c. Gruter thinks, that, as the Gauls informed the consul of the night when they were to set out, they must of course have known that they would be arrested. This may all very well be, and yet the presence of cito in the text, as well as of cognito consilio, is perfectly proper. The Gauls in an instant understood the nature of the affair, being previously convinced that an arrest would take place. Had Sallust, moreover, only written cognito consilio, the inquiry would naturally be made by the reader, whether the consul's plan was then for the first time discovered by them, or whether they had surmised what it would be, long before it was carried into execution.

titudine defendit; dein, ubi a legatis desertus est,¹ multa prius de salute sua Pomtinum obtestatus, quod ei notus erat, postremo timidus, ac vitae diffidens, veluti hostibus, sese praetoribus dedit.

XLVI. ²Quibus rebus confectis, omnia propere per nuncios consuli declarantur. At illum ingens cura atque laetitia simul occupavere. Nam ³laetabatur, coniuratione patefacta, civitatem periculis erectam esse: porro autem anxius erat, in maxumo scelere tantis civibus deprehensis, quid facto opus; poenam illorum ⁴sibi

¹ Multa, “earnestly.”

² Quibus rebus confectis, &c. The night of the arrest was that of the 2d December.

³ Laetabatur. Gaudere denotes “to feel the calm and rational emotion of joy;”—Laetari, “to be overjoyed,” or “to be transported with joy.” Cicero ranks laetitia among the “perturbationes animi,” or “appetitus vehementiores,” (Tusc. Quaest. 4.) ; and observes, that laetitia occasions “profusam hilaritatem,” “extravagant gaiety;” “intemperate gladness, or mirth.” It is to be observed, however, that laetitia and laetor do not always denote “unbecoming triumph,” or “intemperate joy.” Cicero himself, speaking of his own deportment, where no censure is intended, says, “Nulla enim re tam laetari soleo, quam meorum officiorum conscientia.” (Fam. Ep. 5. 7.) “Nothing, in general, gives me so much delight, as the internal assurance of having rendered good offices to my friends.”—Laetitia, in like manner, is represented as either moderate or excessive: thus, “Admiratus rex tanta magnitudine animi oppetere mortem, revocari eos jussit, causam tam effusae laetitiae, quum supplicium ante oculos haberent, requirens.” (Curt. 7. 10.) “The king, amazed at their unusual alacrity on such an occasion, commanded them to be brought back, and asked them the cause of their excessive joy, when they beheld death before their eyes.”—Digby. “Militantium nec indignatio nec laetitia moderata est.” (Curt. 7. 1.) “A soldier’s anger or alacrity never keeps within due bounds.” The chief distinction, however, between gaudere and laetari, gaudium and laetitia, is this, that gaudere and gaudium refer to the simple emotion of joy, but laetari and laetitia to the expression of that emotion.—Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 323. 3d ed.

⁴ Sibi oneri, “a source of odium against himself.” This appre-

oneri, impunitatem ¹perdundae reipublicae credebat. Igitur, confirmato animo, vocari ad sese jubet Lentulum, Cethegum, Statilium, Gabinium, item Q. Coeparium quemdam, ²Terracinensem, qui in Apuliam ad concitanda servitia proficisci parabat. Ceteri sine mora veniunt: Coeparius, paullo ante domo egressus, cognito indicio, ³ex urbe profugerat. Consul Lentulum, quod praetor erat, ipse manu tenens ⁴perducit; reliquos cum custodibus in aedem ⁵Concordiae venire jubet. Eo senatum advocat, ⁶magnaque frequentia ejus ordinis, ⁷Volturcum cum legatis introducit: Flac-hension was fully verified by the result. The preserver of his country was driven into exile by the faction of Clodius. Compare Cic. de Orat. I. I. “Et hoc tempus omne post consulatum objecimus iis fluctibus qui, per nos a communis peste depulsi, in nosmetipso redendarunt.—And ever since my consulate I have been buffeting those billows which, after I had repelled them from my country, recoiled upon myself.”—Guthrie.

¹ Perdundae reipublicae, “a cause of ruin to the republic.”—Vide note 6, page 17.

² Terracinensem. A native of Terracina, a city of the Volsci, near the coast of the Lower Sea, and lying north-east of the promontory of Circeii. It was also named Anxur. The modern town occupies the site of the ancient place, and is still called Terracina.

³ Ex urbe. Cortius, without any very satisfactory reason, incloses these words within brackets, as labouring under the suspicion of not being genuine.

⁴ Perducit. Before this word some editions have in senatum, which is unnecessary, as in aedem Concordiae follows immediately after.

⁵ Concordiae. The temple here meant stood on that side of the Capitoline hill which faced the Forum. It was erected by Camillus, in accordance with a vow, on account of the re-establishment of harmony between the senate and people. L. Opimius embellished it after the death of Caius Gracchus, and meetings of the senate were frequently held within its walls. Some few columns still remain.

⁶ Magnaque frequentia, &c. “and in a very full meeting of that order,” or “in a very full house.”

⁷ Volturcum cum legatis introducit. Cicero states (3. in Cat. 4.), cum praetorem ¹scrinium cum litteris, quas a legatis acceperat, eodem adferre jubet.

XLVII. VOLTURCIUS interrogatus “ de itinere, de litteris, postremo ²quid, aut qua de caussa, consilii habuisset ?” primo fingere ³alia, dissimulare de conjuratione ; post, ubi ⁴fide publica dicere jussus est, omnia, uti gesta erant, aperit : “ paucis ante diebus a Gabinio et Coepario socium adscitum, nihil amplius scire, quam legatos : tantummodo ⁵audire solitum ex Gabinio, P. Autronium, Servium Sullam, L. Vargunteium, multos praeterea in ea coniuratione esse.” Eadem Galli fatentur ; ac Lentulum dissimulanten coarguant, praeter litteras, sermonibus, quos habere solitus : “ ex ⁶libris that he first introduced Volturcius without the Gauls, and afterwards brought in the Gauls themselves.

¹ Scrinium cum litteris, “ the box containing the letters.” It will be recollect that the box contained the letter of Lentulus to Catiline, and also the written oath of the conspirators.

² Quid, aut qua de caussa, &c. “ what design he had in view, or why he entertained such a design.” Equivalent to “ Quid consilii, aut qua de caussa id consilii habuisset ?”

³ Alia, “ things other than the truth.”

⁴ Fide publica, “ on the public faith being pledged for his safety.”

⁵ Audire. Compare Cicero (3. in Cat. 4.), who fully confirms the account here given by Sallust.

⁶ Libris Sibyllinis. A certain woman, named Amalthaea, from a foreign country, offered for sale to Tarquinus Superbus, the last king of Rome, nine books of the Sibylline, or prophetic oracles, but at an exorbitant price; which Tarquin refusing, she burnt three of them, still demanding the same price for the remaining six. Being ridiculed by the king, she burnt three more, without abating her price for the remaining three. Tarquin, surprised at her strange conduct, consulted the augurs, who, regretting the loss of the books which had been burnt, advised the king to pay her demand, on delivery of the three remaining books. Two persons at first, then ten, afterwards fifteen, were appointed to take charge of these’ books, hence called Quindecimviri. These books were supposed to contain the fate of the republic, and in time of public danger or calamity

Sibyllinis, regnum Romae ¹tribus Cornelii portendi :
²Cinnam atque Sullam antea ; se tertium, cui fatum foret ³urbis potiri : praeterea ab ⁴incenso Capitolio illum esse vigesimum annum, quem saepe ex prodigiis were consulted by order of the senate. They of course became a very useful engine of state; but were burnt in the Marsic war, A. U. C. 690. Ambassadors were sent every-where to collect the oracles of the Sibyls, of whom there were several; the chief of them was the Sibyl of Cumae. From the verses collected in this search, the Quindecimviri compiled new books, which, by order of Augustus, were deposited in two gilt cases under the base of Apollo's statue, in his temple on the Palatine hill. For more information relative to the Sibyls, vide Lempriere's Classical Dictionary, Anthon's edition, 1830.

¹ Tribus Cornelii, "to three of the Cornelian house." The gens Cornelia was among the most illustrious at Rome. It had a patrician and plebeian branch. The familiae included under it were the Maluginenses, Scipiones, Sulla, Lentuli, Cinnae, Rufini, &c.

² Cinnam. L. Cornelius Cinna, a Roman of considerable influence and personal bravery. He espoused the party of Marius, and, in common with that monster of cruelty, was guilty of the most horrid excesses. It was Cinna who recalled Marius from his exile in Africa. After antea understand regnum habuisse.

³ Urbis potiri. The verb potiri, which elsewhere governs an ablative, is often, as in the present instance, used with a genitive. This government, however, admits of a very easy explanation, if we consider that potiri is in fact equivalent to potens esse or potentem esse. In Plautus we even find the active of this verb. (Amph. 1. 1. 23.) "Qui fuerim liber, eum nunc potivit pater servitus;" i. e. "has put in slavery," "has made partaker of slavery;" thence potior is used passively; e. g. "potitus est hostium," (ibid. Capt. 1. 2. 41.), "he is mastered by the enemy," "is in the enemy's power."

⁴ Incenso Capitolio. The Capitol was thrice destroyed by fire. First, during the troubles occasioned by the contest between Sylla and Marius, A. U. C. 670, after which it was rebuilt by Sylla, and dedicated by Catulus. It is to this burning that the text refers. It was a second time destroyed, A.D. 70, by the soldiers of Vitellius. The emperor Vespasian rebuilt it, and at his death it was burnt a third time. Domitian restored it with greater magnificence than ever.

¹haruspices respondissent bello civili cruentum fore." Igitur, perfectis litteris, cum prius omnes signa sua cognovissent, senatus decernit, "uti ²abdicatus magistratu Lentulus, item ceteri in ³liberis custodiis haberentur." Itaque Lentulus ⁴P. Lentulo Spintheri, qui ¹ Haruspices. The haruspices were those who examined the victims and their entrails after they were sacrificed, and from thence derived omens of futurity. They pretended to divine also from the flame, smoke, and other circumstances attending the sacrifice. Donatus (in Ter. Phorm. 4. 4. 28.) derives the name from haruga, "a victim," observing, "nam haruga dicitur hostia, ab hara in qua concluditur et servatur: hara autem est, in qua pecora includuntur." Compare Cicero (3. in Cat. 8.), in relation to what is stated in the text. "Quo quidem tempore, cum aruspices ex tota Etruria convenissent, caedes atque incendia, et legum interitum, et bellum civile ac domesticum, et totius urbis atque imperii occasum appropinquare dixerunt, nisi di immortales omni ratione placati suo numine prope fata ipsa flexissent.—At that time the soothsayers, being called together from all Etruria, declared that fire, slaughter, the overthrow of the laws, civil war, and the ruin of the city and empire, were portended, unless the gods, appeased by all sorts of means, could be prevailed with to interpose, and bend in some measure the destinies themselves."—Duncan. The orator adds, that games were in consequence celebrated for ten days, and every other formality observed for appeasing the wrath of the gods.

² Abdicatus. Others read abdicato magistratu: both forms are in accordance with the idiom of the language, only the former, which is that adopted by Cortius, shows more plainly that his office was taken from Lentulus, not voluntarily resigned by him.

³ Liberis custodiis, "in free custody," equivalent to our phrase of "being held to bail." This was done either when the accused were persons of rank, or when they were many in number, and were separated so as to prevent any communication with one another.

⁴ P. Lentulo Spintheri. This individual was called Spinther from his resembling very closely a certain actor named Spinther. He obtained the consulship A.U.C. 697, and had for his colleague in that office Q. Metellus Nepos, who bore a very striking resemblance to another actor, Pamphilus, (Val. Max. 9. 14. 4. Plin. H. N. 7. 12.) P. Lentulus Spinther deserves to be remembered for having exerted his utmost endeavours, when consul, to effect the recall of Cicero.

tum ¹aedilis, Cethegus ²Q. Cornificio, Statilius ³C. Caesari, Gabinius M. Crasso, Coeparius (nam is paulo ante ex fuga retractus) ⁴Cn. Terentio senatori traduntur.

XLVIII. INTEREA plebes, conjuratione patefacta, quae primo, cupida rerum novarum, nimis bello favefrom exile. He was an ardent republican, and, after the death of Caesar, followed the arms of Brutus and Cassius.

¹ Aedilis. The Aediles were of two kinds, Plebeian and Curule. Two plebeian Aediles were first created, A.U.C. 260, in the Comitia Curiata, at the same time with the tribunes of the commons, to be, as it were, their assistants, and to determine certain minor causes which the tribunes committed to them. They were afterwards created, as the other inferior magistrates, at the Comitia Tributa. Two Curule Aediles were created from the patricians, A.U.C. 387, to perform certain public games. They were first chosen alternately from the patricians and plebeians, but afterwards promiscuously from both. They wore the toga praetexta, had the right of images, and a more honourable place of giving their opinion in the senate. They also used the sella curulis, whence their name of Curule Aediles. As a counterbalance for all this, however, the persons of the plebeian Aediles were sacred, like those of the tribunes. The general office of the Aediles was to take care of the city, (hence their name a cura aedium), to regulate the markets, inspect the weights and measures, &c.

² Q. Cornificio. This is the same individual who stood candidate for the consulship at the same time with Cicero and Catiline, A.U.C. 689. He lost his election. Ernesti (Index Historicus ad Cic. op.) makes him to have been the same person with the Cornificius who obtained the government of Africa, A.U.C. 708. Weiske and Dahl, however, maintain that the latter was a younger man. They ground their remark on Cic. Ep. ad Fam. 17. and 23.

³ C. Caesari. The famous Julius Caesar, who was at this time Praetor elect. It was excellent policy to entrust some of the conspirators to the care of Caesar and Crassus, who were suspected of being themselves concerned in the plot. By pretending to regard them as good and faithful citizens, the senate drove them to the necessity of assuming that character at least.

⁴ Cn. Terentio. He was Praetor the year following.

bat, mutata mente, Catilinae consilia exsecrari, ¹Ciceronem ad coelum tollere: veluti ex servitute erupta, gaudium atque laetitiam agitabant. Namque alia belli facinora praedae magis, quam ²detrimento; ³incendium vero crudele, immoderatum, ac sibi maxume calamitosum putabat; ⁴quippe cui omnes copiae in usu quotidiano et cultu corporis erant. Post eum diem, quidam L. Tarquinius ad senatum adductus erat, quem ad Catilinam proficiscentem ex itinere retractum aiebant. Is cum se diceret indicaturum de conjuratione, si fides publica data esset; jussus a consule, quae sciret, edicere, eadem fere, quae Volturcius, de paratis incendiis, de caede bonorum, de itinere hostium, senatum edocet: praeterea, "se missum a M. Crasso, ⁵qui Catilinae nunciaret, ⁶ne Lentulus, Cethagus, alii ex conjuratione deprehensi ternerent; eoque magis properaret ad urbem accedere, quo et ceterorum ⁷animos reficeret, et illi facilius e periculo eriperentur." Sed ubi Tarquinius

¹ Ciceronem ad coelum tollere. Cicero, on leaving the senate, although it was towards the close of the day, delivered before the assembled people the oration which has come down to us as the third against Catiline. In this he gave an account of the arrest of the Allobroges, and the transactions in the senate. The people then perceived the full extent of the danger from which they had just been rescued by the energy and vigilance of their consul, and gave him the full meed of applause which he so richly deserved.

² Detrimento. Understand fore sibi.

³ Incendium vero crudele, &c. "but they thought the burning of the city a cruel measure, exceeding all bounds," &c.

⁴ Quippe cui omnes copiae, &c. "since all their property consisted of articles in daily use, and of clothing for their persons."

⁵ Qui Catilinae nunciaret, "to tell Catiline." Qui is here used for ut illi, and consequently takes the subjunctive mood.

⁶ Ne Lentulus, &c. Literally, "that Lentulus, Cethagus, and others connected with the conspiracy, being arrested, should not alarm him;" i.e. "not to be alarmed at the arrest of Lentulus, Cethagus, and others of the conspirators."

⁷ Animos reficeret, "might reanimate the courage."

Crassum nominavit, hominem nobilem, maxumis divitiis, summa potentia; ¹ alii, rem incredibilem rati; pars, tamen etsi verum existumabant, tamen, ² quia in tali tempore tanta vis hominis leniunda, quam exagitanda videbatur; plerique Crasso ex negotiis privatis ³ obnoxii, conclamant, "indicem falsum," deque ea re postulant ⁴ uti referatur. Itaque, consulente Cicerone, frequens senatus decernit: "Tarquinii indicium falsum videri; eumque in ⁵ vinculis retinendum, neque amplius ⁶ potestatem faciundam, nisi de eo indicaret, cuius consilio tantam rem ⁷ mentitus esset." Erant eo tempore, qui aestumarent, illud a P. Autonio machinatum,

¹ Alii, rem incredibilem rati, "some, because they thought the thing incredible."

² Quia tali tempore, &c. "because, at such a crisis, a man of so much power seemed proper to be soothed rather than irritated."

³ Obnoxii, "under obligations to." Cortius correctly remarks, that plerique, in this clause, denotes a third class of persons, distinct from those to whom alii and pars respectively refer. The great wealth of Crassus, and the numerous loans which it enabled him to make, had given him the most extensive private influence of any individual of the day.

⁴ Uti referatur. Understand ad se. "That they should be consulted," or "that their opinion be taken."

⁵ Vinculis, "prison." Vinculum, in the singular, any bond or tie; in the plural, very frequently a prison, confinement, &c.

⁶ Potestatem. Understand indicandi. "Permission to go on with his testimony." The refusal, on the part of the senate, to listen to his farther statements, was a virtual revoking of the pledge of impunity which they had previously granted him.

⁷ Mentitus esset. The pronoun Qui is uniformly joined to the subjunctive mood, when the relative clause does not express any sentiment of the author's, but refers it to the person or persons of whom he is speaking. Mentitus esset here implies the senate's affirmation, that Tarquinius had told a falsehood, and not the historian's. The whole doctrine of the use of the relative with the subjunctive, will be found clearly and ably developed in Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 1. et seqq.

¹quo facilius, adpellato Crasso, per societatem periculi reliquos illius potentia tegeret. Alii Tarquinium a Cicerone ²immissum aiebant, ne Crassus, ³more suo, suscepto malorum patrocinio, rempublicam conturberet. Ipsum Crassum ego postea ⁴praedicantem audivi, tantam illam contumeliam sibi ab Cicerone ⁵impositam.

XLIX. SED isdem temporibus ⁶Q. Catulus et ⁷C. Piso, neque gratia, neque precibus, neque ⁸pretio, Ciceronem impellere ⁹potuere, uti per Allobroges, aut alium indicem, C. Caesar falso ¹⁰nominaretur. Nam

¹ Quo facilius, &c. “in order that, Crassus being named as an accomplice, his power might the more easily protect the rest, by his being made to share the danger with them.”

² Immissum, “instigated.”

³ More suo. Plutarch relates, that when Pompey, Caesar, and Cicero, refused to speak at the bar, Crassus often rose and finished the argument in favour of the defendant; and that this promptness of his to assist any unfortunate citizen, gained him great popularity. He farther informs us, that there was not a Roman, however mean and insignificant, whom he did not salute, or whose salutation he did not return by name.—Vit. Crass. 3. ed. Hutten. vol. iii. p. 405.

⁴ Praedicantem, “openly affirming.”

⁵ Impositam, “had been offered.”

⁶ Q. Catulus. Q. Lutatius Catulus, who had been consul with M. Aemilius Lepidus, A. U. C. 676, and was at this time Principes senatus.

⁷ C. Piso. C. Calpurnius Piso, who had been consul A. U. C. 687, and subsequently proconsul in Hither or Cisalpine Gaul, as we learn from Cicero (Ep. ad Att. 1. 1.)

⁸ Pretio, “by the offer of a bribe.”

⁹ Potuere. Some editions have quivere. The difference between possum and queo is seldom observed. The latter verb is, generally speaking, the weaker of the two, and denotes mere possibility under existing circumstances.

¹⁰ Nominaretur, “should be named as an accomplice.” Suetonius (Vit. Caes. 17.) informs us, that Caesar was named as an accomplice the year after, by Curius in the senate, and by L. Vettius before Novius Nigrus the Quaestor, (or, perhaps, public commis-

uterque cum illo gravis inimicitias exercebant; Piso ¹ obpugnatus in judicio repetundarum, propter cuiusdam ² Transpadani supplicium injustum; Catulus ³ ex petitione pontificatus odio incensus, quod, extrema aetate, maxumis honoribus usus, ab ⁴ adolescentulo Caesare victus discesserat. Res autem ⁵ opportuna videbatur; quod privatim egregia liberalitate, ⁶ publice sioner, if the true reading be Quaesitorem, and not Quaestorem, in the text of Suetonius). Both accusations were dismissed.

¹ Obpugnatus, &c. “having been prosecuted by him in an action for extortion.”

² Transpadani. The term Transpadanus is here used with reference to Rome: cujusdam Transpadani, “of a certain individual who dwelt beyond the Po,” or, “north of the Po.”

³ Ex petitione pontificatus, “ever since the time of his application for the high-priesthood.” Plutarch, in his life of Caesar, informs us, that when Metellus, the chief pontiff, died, the office was solicited by Isaureus and Catulus, two of the most illustrious men in the city, and of the greatest interest in the senate. Caesar, nevertheless, did not shrink from the contest, but presented himself to the people as a candidate. The pretensions and prospects of the competitors seemed nearly equal; and Catulus, who, on account of his superior dignity, was most uneasy about the event, sent privately to Caesar, and offered him large sums, on condition that he would desist from his high pursuit. But he answered, “He would rather borrow still larger sums to enable him to stand the struggle.” (πλειστούς δέ τοι φη διαγωνίσθαι.) When the day of election came, Caesar’s mother attending him to the door with her eyes bathed in tears, he embraced her and said, “My dear mother, you will see me this day either chief pontiff, or an exile.” (Ω μῆτρε, τίμεσον ή ἀρχιεγέρα τὸν νῦν ή φυγάδα δύει.) There never was any thing, adds Plutarch, more strongly contested; the suffrages, however, gave it to Caesar.—Vit. Caes. 7. ed. Hutton. vol. iv. p. 365.

⁴ Adolescentulo, “a mere youth when compared with himself.” As Caesar was at this time 37 years of age, it is evident that the term adolescentulus is merely applied to him comparatively, in reference to the advanced age of Catulus.

⁵ Opportuna, “a favourable one.”

⁶ Publice maximis muneribus, “by the very splendid shows which maxumis muneribus grandem pecuniam debebat. Sed, ubi consulem ad tantum facinus impellere nequeunt, ipsi singulatim circumeundo, atque ¹ementiundo, quae se ex Volturcio, aut Allobrogibus audisse dicerent, magnam illi invidiam conflaverant; usque eo, ut nonnulli equites Romani, qui, praesidii caussa, cum telis erant circum ²Concordiae, seu periculi magnitudine, seu ³animi nobilitate impulsi, quo studium suum in rempublicam he publicly exhibited." As Aedile, Caesar not only exhibited three hundred and twenty pair of gladiators, but in the other diversions also of the theatre, in the processions and public entertainments, he far outshone the most ambitious that had gone before him. Suetonius even states, that the number of gladiators just mentioned was less than he had originally intended, owing to the envy and opposition of his enemies. Caesar is said by Plutarch to have been thirteen hundred talents in debt before he obtained any public employment. This would amount in sterling money to L. 251,875. When he set out for Spain, after his Praetorship, he is reported to have said that he was one hundred million of sesterces (L. 807,291. 13s. 4d.) worse than nothing. (ὅτι δέντο δισχιλίων καὶ πεντακοσίων μυριάδων.—Appian. B. C. 2. 8. where we must understand δισχιλῶν, i. e. denariorum, and render the amount into Latin by Millies H. S. and not with Candidus, whom Adam follows, by Bis Millies et quingen-ties. Compare Gronov. de Sestertiis, &c. lib. 3. cap. 16. p. 245. Schweighaeuser ad Appian. l. c.) When Caesar first entered Rome in the beginning of the civil war, he took out of the treasury, according to Pliny (H. N. 33. 3.), L. 1,095,979, and brought into it, at the end of the civil war, above L. 4,843,750. ("Amplius sexies millies." Vell. Pat. 2. 56.) He is said to have purchased the friendship of Curio, at the beginning of the civil war, by a bribe of L. 484,373, and that of the consul L. Paulus, the colleague of Marcellus, A. U. C. 704, by about L. 279,500.

¹ Ementiundo, "by uttering open falsehoods."

² Concordiae. Understand aedem. Compare Terence (Adelph. 4. 2. 43.), "Ubi ad Dianaे veneris."

³ Animi nobilitate, "by a generous impulse," or "by patriotic feelings." Some editions have animi mobilitate; but this does not harmonize with what immediately follows, "Quo studium suum," &c.

clarius esset, egredienti ex senatu ¹Caesari gladio ²minitarentur.

L. DUM haec in senatu ³aguntur, et dum legatis Allobrogum et Tito Volturcio, comprobato eorum indicio, praemia decernuntur; ⁴liberti, et pauci ex clientibus Lentuli, diversis itineribus, opifices atque servitia in ⁵vicis ad eum ⁶eripiendum sollicitabant, ⁷partim ex-

¹ Caesari. Plutarch gives a more detailed account of this same affair: "As Caesar was going out of the senate," observes this biographer, "several of the young men who guarded Cicero's person, ran up to the former with their drawn swords; but Curio (we are told) covered him with his gown, and so carried him off; and Cicero himself, when the young men looked at him for a nod of consent, refused it, either out of fear of the people, or because he thought such an assassination unlawful and unjust." "If this was true," continues Plutarch, "I know not why Cicero did not mention it in the history of his consulship." He was subsequently blamed, however, for not having availed himself of so good an opportunity as he then had, and for having been influenced by his fears of the people, who were indeed strongly attached to Caesar; for, a few days afterwards, when Caesar entered the senate, and endeavoured to clear himself from the suspicions entertained of him, his defence was received with indignation and loud reproaches; and as they sat longer than usual, the people beset the house, and with violent outcries demanded Caesar, absolutely insisting on his being dismissed in safety. (Vit. Caes. 8. ed. Hutton. vol. iv. p. 367.) Suetonius (Vit. Caes. 14.) informs us, that some of the knights threatened Caesar as he sat in the senate-house. It is probable that he and Sallust allude to different meetings.

² Minitarentur. The frequentative appears to be used in this passage, not so much for the sake of a better sound, as in order to express the idea of a frequent brandishing of the sword, though it cannot be well conveyed in an English translation.

³ Aguntur, "are being done."

⁴ Liberti. The Romans used the term libertus when they spoke of the master; as, libertus Lentuli; but libertinus, in relation to free-born citizens, as, libertinus homo, i. e. non ingenuus.

⁵ Vicis, "the streets." Vicus, properly speaking, refers to the appearance presented by the buildings in a street; a row of houses quirebant ¹duces multitudinum, qui pretio rempublicam vexare soliti; Cethagus autem, per nuncios, ²familiam atque libertos suos, exercitatos in audaciam, orabat, ³grege facto, cum telis ad sese irrumperent. Consul, ubi ea parari cognovit, dispositis praesidiis, ut res atque tempus monebat, convocato senatu, ⁴refert, resembling, as it were, a single and extensive edifice. (oīnos, and, with the digamma, Fāīnos, whence vicus.) The term is used here, however, in the sense of via.

QUID DE HIS FIERI PLACEAT, QUI IN CUSTODIAM

⁵ Eripiendum. Understand e custodia. Cicero (4. in Cat. 8.) states, that none were found who would engage in such an attempt. Appian, however, informs us, that on the nones of December, while the senate were deliberating about the punishment of the conspirators, the slaves and freed-men of Lentulus and Cethagus, and a large body of working people, assailed the habitations of the praetors in the rear, and endeavoured to rescue the prisoners. Cicero, upon learning this, immediately left the senate, and planted guards in suitable quarters of the city, after which he returned and expedited the debate.—Appian. B. C. 2. 5.

⁷ Partim. Equivalent to pars or ali. It is properly the old accusative of pars, and is used adverbially in those passages where it retains its accusative force. Thus, “Quum amici partim desertuerint me, partim etiam proddiderint,” (Cic. ad Q. Fratrem, 3.), where it has the meaning of “partly.”

¹ Duces multitudinum, “the leaders of the mob.” The want of trades and manufactures, which the Romans considered as employments unworthy of freemen, left the great body of the inhabitants of Rome in a state of poverty and idleness, and ready for any desperate enterprise to which they might be stimulated by artful demagogues.

² Familiam. Familia here denotes the “slaves” belonging to a family. This is the original signification of the word. It comes from famulus, “a servant,” and this last from the old Oscan term famul, of the same import.

³ Grege facto. Understand ut. In some editions it is expressed.

⁴ Refert, &c. Literally, “Refers it to them, what it may please them be done to those,” &c.; i. e. “Consults their pleasure with respect to those,” &c.

TRADITI ERANT. ¹ Sed eos, paullo ante, frequens senatus judicaverat, CONTRA REMPUBLICAM FECISSE.
²Tum D. Junius Silanus, primus sententiam rogatus, quod eo tempore ³consul designatus erat, de his qui in custodiis tenebantur, praeterea de L. Cassio, P. Furio, P. Umbreno, Q. Annio, si deprehensi forent, supplicium sumendum decreverat: isque postea, permotus oratione C. Caesaris, ⁴pedibus in sententiam Tib. Ne-

¹ Sed eos, paullo ante, &c. "Now a crowded house had, a few days previous, declared them to have acted as enemies to their country." This form of words, (contra rempublicam fecisse), was always used against those who had been guilty of any treasonable or seditious conduct, and in cases where capital punishment most commonly ensued. Compare Cicero, pro Milone, 5. et 6.

² Tum D. Junius Silanus, &c. Tum refers to the present meeting of the senate, not to the previous one.—Decimus Junius Silanus had, as his colleague in the consulship, during the following year, L. Licinius Murena. He married Cato's half-sister, Servilia.—Vide Plutarch, Vit. Cat. min. c. 21.

³ Consul designatus, "consul elect." After A.U.C. 598, the consuls were chosen about the end of July or the beginning of August, and entered on their office on the first day of January. During the interval they were styled Consules designati, and were always asked their opinions first in the senate. This interval was made so long, that they might have time to become acquainted with what pertained to their office; and that inquiry might be made whether they had gained their election by bribery.

⁴ Pedibus in sententiam, &c. "that he would embrace the opinion expressed by Tiberius Nero." The history of this whole affair appears to have been as follows: Silanus gave his opinion at first in favour of the severest punishment; (τοὺς ἀνδρας ταχάτη πολάσι μετίναι. Appian. B. C. 2. 5.) Many senators followed in the debate, and advocated the same course; (πολλοὶ συνεπίθεντο. Appian. ubi supra.) When it came, however, to the turn of Tiberius Claudius Nero (grandfather of the future emperor) to deliver his sentiments, he recommended that the conspirators should be detained in custody until Catiline was overcome, and that then the whole affair should be carefully investigated. Caesar, who was at this time Praetor elect, spoke after Nero, and declared himself against capital punish-ronis iturum se dixerat; quod de ea re, praesidiis ad-ditis, referendum censuerat. ¹Sed Caesar, ubi ad eum ventum, rogatus sententiam a consule, hujuscemodi verba locutus est.

LI. “²OMNIS homines, Patres conscripti, qui de rement. The greater part of the senate, after he had finished, came over to his opinion; whereupon Cicero delivered his fourth Catilinarian oration, in which he took a view of the whole debate, and recommended prompt and vigorous measures. His efforts, however, were unsuccessful, and a large majority of the senators, and among them Cicero's own brother Quintus, were disposed to side with Caesar, probably from the fear lest severer measures might prove injurious afterwards to Cicero himself. At last, Lutatius Catulus, Caesar's inveterate foe, and Cato, who was then Tribune of the commons elect, interposed their efforts. The eloquence of the latter proved triumphant, and the course he recommended was almost unanimously adopted. (The authorities to be consulted on this subject are as follows: Plutarch, Vit. Cic. c. 20. et 21.; Id. Vit. Caes. c. 7. et 8.; Id. Vit. Cat. min. c. 22. Sueton. Caes. 14. Appian. B. C. 2. 5. seqq.) As regards the phrase, pedibus in sententiam ire, which is given in the text, we may remark, that a decree of the senate was commonly made by a separation of the senators to different parts of the house. He who presided said, “Let those who are of such an opinion pass over to that side,” pointing to a certain quarter, “and those who think differently, to this.” Hence ire pedibus in sententiam alicujus means, “to agree to any one's opinion,” since he who had first proposed the opinion, or who had been the principal speaker in favour of it, passed over first, and the rest followed.

¹ Sed Caesar. The speech which Sallust here assigns to Caesar, and which, from the term hujuscemodi, as used by the historian, must be regarded as Caesar's merely in its general and leading features, is a perfect masterpiece of its kind—cool, argumentative, specious, and breathing apparently a spirit of patriotism, which was calculated to carry with it the opinions and feelings of a large majority of his hearers. It required all the bold and fervid eloquence of Cato to counteract its pernicious tendency.

² Omnis homines, &c. The beginning of this speech seems to have been imitated from Demosthenes (περὶ τῶν ἐν χειρονήσαι προση- ματων. Ed. Reiske, vol. i. p. 58.) “Ἐδει μὲν, ὃ ἔνδεις Ἀθηναῖς, τους λέγοντας ἀπαντεῖς ἐν τοῖς μήτε πρὸς ἐχθραν ποιεῖσθαι λόγου μηδέτε, bus dubius consultant, ¹ab odio, amicitia, ira atque misericordia, vacuos esse decet. Haud facile animus verum providet, ubi illa obficiunt; neque quisquam omnium ²lubidini simul et usui paruit. ³Ubi intenderis ingenium, valet: si lubido possidet, ea dominatur, animus nihil valet. Magna mihi copia memorandi, P. C. qui reges ⁴atque populi, ira aut misericordia impulsi, male consuluerint: sed ea malo dicere, quae majores nostri, ⁵contra lubidinem animi, recte atque ordine fecere. ⁶Bello Macedonico, quod cum rege Perse gessimus, ⁷Rhodiorum civitas, magna atque magnifica, μήτε τέλος χάρην “It were to be wished, Athenians, that they who speak in public would never suffer hatred or affection to influence their counsels.”—Leland.

¹ Ab odio, amicitia, &c. This construction of vacuus with the preposition is not unusual in the best writers, such as Cicero, Tacitus, &c. Compare, in the 14th chapter of this same narrative, a culpa vacuus.

² Lubidini simul et usui paruit, “has obeyed at the same time the dictates of passion and of interest.”

³ Ubi intenderis ingenium, &c. Understand in verum after ingenium. “When you apply the mind to the discovery of truth, unbiassed by the influence of any of these feelings, it succeeds in the search: if passion holds possession, it rules, and reason becomes useless.”

⁴ Atque populi. Some editions have Aut qui populi.

⁵ Contra lubidinem animi, “in opposition to the dictates of their own breasts.”

⁶ Bello Macedonico. Brought to a conclusion by Paulus Aemilius, after the famous battle of Pydna, A.U.C. 586. “Qui finis fuit,” observes Livy (45. 9.), “inlyti per Europae plerunque, atque Asiam omnem, regni.” Perses was led by the conqueror in triumph at Rome. There are three forms of this last proper name, Perses-is, abl. Perse; Perseus-i, abl. Perseo; and Perses-i, abl. Persa. Compare Aulus Gellius, 7. 3.

⁷ Rhodiorum civitas. Rhodes, an island in the Mediterranean, consecrated to the sun, and lying over against the southern coast of Caria. In this island was the famous colossus, or statue of Apollo. Rhodes was famous also as a maritime state, and for its code of com-

quae populi Romani ¹opibus creverat, infida atque ad-vorsa nobis fuit : sed postquam, bello confecto, de Rhodiis consultum est, majores nostri, ne quis divitiarum magis, quam injuriae caussa, bellum incepturn diceret, ²impunitos dimisere. Item bellis Punicis omnibus, cum saepe Carthaginenses et in pace, et ³per inducias, multa nefaria facinora fecissent, numquam ipsi ⁴per occasionem talia fecere : magis, quid se dignum foret, quam quid ⁵in illis jure fieri posset, quaerebant. Hoc idem providendum est, Patres conscripti, ⁶ne plus valeat apud vos P. Lentuli et ceterorum scelus, quam vestra dignitas ; neu magis irae, quam famae, consulamercial laws. The Rhodians were auxiliaries to the Romans in the war against Antiochus, king of Syria, and at the close of the contest received a large part of Lycia and Caria as a reward. Compare Livy, 37. 55.

¹ Opibus, “by the powerful aid.” Vide the latter part of the preceding note.—Infida atque advorsa. There were no actual hostilities between the Rhodians and Romans; but the former, to use the language of Velleius Paterculus (1. 9.), “fidelissimi antea Romanis, tum dubia fide speculati fortunam, prouiores regis partibus fuisse visi sunt.”—Hitherto remarkable for their fidelity to the Romans, began now to waver, and to watch the turns of fortune, apparently inclined to the party of the king.”—Baker.

² Impunitos dimisere, “allowed them to escape unpunished.” The Romans did not indeed make war upon them, which, according to the spirit of the passage, would have been the punishment they deserved, but merely took from them the portions of Lycia and Caria which they had previously bestowed. Aulus Gellius (7. 3.) supplies us with some fragments of a very beautiful oration which Cato the elder delivered in their behalf.

³ Per inducias, “during the season of truce.”

⁴ Per occasionem, “when opportunity offered.”—Talia fecere, “retaliated;” i. e. talia fecere qualia illi fecerant.

⁵ In illis, “in their case.”

⁶ Ne plus valeat apud vos, &c. “in order that the crime of Publius Lentulus and the rest may not have more weight with you than a regard for your own dignity, and that you may not listen more to the dictates of resentment than to what your own character demands.”

tis. Nam si digna poena pro factis eorum reperitur, ¹ novum consilium adprobo: sin magnitudo sceleris
² omnium ingenia exsuperat, ³ iis utendum censeo, quae legibus comparata sunt. Plerique eorum, qui ante me sententias dixerunt, ⁴ composite atque magnifice ⁵ casum reipublicae miserati sunt: quae belli saevitia, quae victis acciderent, enumeravere; divelli liberos a parentium complexu; matres familiarum pati, quae victoribus collibuisserint; fana atque domos exspoliari; caedem incendia fieri; postremo, armis, cadaveribus, cruento atque luctu omnia compleri. Sed, per deos immortalis! ⁶ quo illa oratio pertinuit? an, uti vos infestos con-jurationi faceret? Scilicet quem res tanta atque tam atrox non permovit, eum oratio accendet! Non ita est:
 neque cuiquam mortalium injuriae suae parvae videntur: multi eas gravius aequo habuere. Sed ⁷ aliis alia licentia, Patres conscripti. ⁸ Qui demissi in obscuro vitam habent, si quid iracundia delinquere, pauci sciunt;

¹ Novum consilium, “the novel measure which has been proposed,” viz. of putting citizens to death in violation of the laws. Cicero however (4. in Cat. 4.) says, that Silanus had reminded the senate “hoc genus poenae saepe in improbos cives in republica esse usurpatum.—That this punishment had often been inflicted by the state on seditious citizens.”—Duncan.

² Omnium ingenia exsuperat, “transcends the imaginations of all.”

³ Iis. Understand poenis; “those forms of punishment.”

⁴ Composite atque magnifice, “in studied and glowing language.”

⁵ Casum reipublicae, “the unhappy condition of the state.” Some editions have caussam, but this is an inferior reading.

⁶ Quo illa oratio pertinuit? &c. “what was the object of that strain of oratory? Was it to embitter you against the conspiracy? Him, whom so great and so atrocious a crime has not moved, a mere speech no doubt will inflame!”—Scilicet is here used ironically.

⁷ Aliis alia licentia, “all men have not the same freedom of action.” Literally, “there is one kind of freedom in action allowed to one class of men, another to a different class.”

⁸ Qui demissi in obscuro, &c. Understand loco; “who pass their lives sunk in obscurity.”

fama atque fortuna pares sunt: qui magno imperio praediti in excelso aetatem agunt, eorum facta cuncti mortales novere. ¹Ita in maxima fortuna minima licentia est: neque studere, neque odisse, sed minime irasci decet: quae apud alios iracundia dicitur, in imperio superbia atque crudelitas adpellatur. Evidem ego sic ²aestumo, Patres conscripti, omnis cruciatus minores, quam facinora illorum, esse: sed plerique mortales ³postrema meminere, et in hominibus implis sceleris obliti de poena disserunt, si ea paullo severior fuit. D. Silanum virum ⁴fortem atque strenuum, certe scio, quae dixerit, ⁵studio reipublicae dixisse, neque illum in tanta re gratiam, aut inimicitias exercere; ⁶eos mores, eam modestiam viri cognovi. Verum sententia non mihi crudelis, quid enim in talis homines crudele fieri potest? sed ⁷aliena a republica nostra videtur. Nam profecto aut metus, aut ⁸injuria te subegit, Silane, consulem designatum, genus poenae novum decernere. De timore supervacaneum est disserire, cum, ⁹praesenti diligentia clarissimi viri, consulis,

¹ Ita in maxima fortuna, &c. "thus, in the highest elevation there is the least freedom of action. In such a situation it becomes us neither to show favour nor hatred, but, least of all, resentment: what in others is called hastiness of temper, is, in those invested with power, styled haughtiness and cruelty."

² Aestumo. In other editions existimo.

³ Postrema, "the last of an affair;" "the things last done," as, in the present instance, the punishment of the conspirators.

⁴ Fortem atque strenuum, "a man of firmness and energy."

⁵ Studio reipublicae, "through love of country."

⁶ Eos mores, &c. "such I know to be the principles, such the moderation of the man."

⁷ Aliena a republica nostra, "uncongenial with the principles of our government."

⁸ Injuria, "the nature of the crime which has been committed."

⁹ Praesenti diligentia. Used for praesentia et diligentia, "by the promptitude and diligence." Some manuscripts have praesertim diligentia.

¹tanta praesidia sint in armis. De poena possumus equidem dicere id, quod res habet; in luctu atque miseriis mortem aerumnarum requiem, non cruciatum esse; eam cuncta mortalium mala dissolvere; ² ultra neque curae neque gaudio locum esse. Sed, per deos immortalis! quamobrem in sententiam non addidisti, uti prius verberibus in eos animadverteretur? an, quia ³lex Porcia vetat? at aliae leges item condemnatis civibus animam non eripi, sed in exilium permitti jument. An, quia gravius est verberari, quam necari? quid autem acerbum, aut grave nimis in homines tanti facinoris convictos? sin, quia levius; ⁴ qui convenit in minore negotio legem timere, cum eam in majore neglexeris? ⁵ At enim quis reprehendet, quod in parricidas reipublicae decretum erit? ⁶ Tempus, dies, for-

¹ Tanta praesidia. These words appear to contain a secret censure of Cicero, as if it were at all necessary to have such powerful guards under arms in the very heart of the city.

² Ultra, "after this;" i. e. beyond the grave. The doctrine advocated by Caesar in the text, and which corresponded so intimately with his life and actions, was one unhappily but too prevalent in the ancient world. Cicero makes mention of this opinion of Caesar's with regard to the soul in his fourth oration against Catiline; and Cato also alludes to it in the following speech.

³ Lex Porcia. The Porcian Law, proposed by P. Porcius Laeca, a tribune of the commons, A. U. C. 454, ordained that no one should bind, scourge, or kill a Roman citizen, but that, in capital cases, the alternative of exile should be granted.

⁴ Qui convenit, "how is it consistent in you to observe that law," &c. Qui is here the old form of the ablative for quo.

⁵ At enim quis reprehendet, &c. The particles At enim are equivalent here to αλλα γαρ. "But, some one may say, what need is there of all this discussion, for who will blame," &c.

⁶ Tempus, dies, &c. We have here the answer to the preceding question. At some future "time," argues Caesar, we may see cause to condemn what we are now doing, when critical "conjunctions" arise through the "caprice" of "fortune."—Cuius lubido, &c. "whose caprice sways the destinies of nations."

tuna, cuius lubido gentibus moderatur. Illis merito accidit, quidquid evenerit: ceterum vos, Patres conscripti, quid¹ in alios statuatis, considerate. Omnia mala exempla ex² bonis orta sunt; sed, ubi imperium ad ignaros, aut minus bonos pervenit, novum illud [exemplum]³ ab dignis et idoneis ad indignos et non idoneos transfertur. Lacedaemonii,⁴ devictis Atheniensibus, triginta viros imposuere, qui rempublicam eorum tractarent. Hi primo coepere pessimum quemque et omnibus invisum indemnatum necare: ⁵ea populus laetari et merito dicere fieri. Post, ubi paullatim licentia crevit, juxta bonos et malos⁶ lubidinose interficere, ceteros metu terrere. Ita civitas, servitute oppressa, ¹ In alios. Literally, “against others.” The true meaning of the whole passage, however, appears to be as follows: “But do you, Conscription Fathers, reflect what influence upon others that which you are now determining may have:” i. e. what effect upon others the example you are now setting may produce.

² Bonis. Understand exemplis. Some editions insert initius after bonis.

³ Ab dignis et idoneis, &c. “from proper and fit subjects of punishment.” Understand poena after dignis. As regards the use of idoneus in this passage, compare Cicero (pro Cluentio, 47.), “Per hominum idoneorum ignominiam;” and Terence (Andr. 4. 4.), “Adeone vobis videmur esse idonei in quibus sic illudatis?” In each of these passages it is taken, to adopt the language of grammarians, “in malam partem.”

⁴ Devictis Atheniensibus. Alluding to the termination of the Peloponnesian war, when the Athenians were compelled to demolish the fortifications of their city, together with the long walls, and submit to the rule of the thirty tyrants. Compare with Caesar’s statement the words of Xenophon (Hist. Graec. 2. 3. 12. ed. Schneid.) Επειτα πρῶτον μὲν οὐς πάντες θέσθαι ἐν τῇ δημοκρατίᾳ ἀπὸ συνοφαντίας ζόντας, κ. τ. λ.

⁵ Ea. Understand negotia. Some editions have eo.

⁶ Lubidinose, “at their pleasure.” Xenophon says that the thirty tyrants put to death, in the space of eight months, as many as had been slain during ten years of the Peloponnesian war.

stultae laetitiae gravis poenas dedit. Nostra memoria, victor Sulla cum ¹Damasippum et alios hujusmodi, qui malo reipublicae creverant, jugulari jussit, quis non factum ejus laudabat? homines scelestos, factiosos, qui seditionibus rempublicam exagitaverant, merito necatos aiebant. Sed ea res magnae initium cladis fuit. Nam, uti quisque domum, aut villam, postremo aut vas, aut vestimentum alicujus concupiverat, dabat operam, uti in proscriptorum numero esset. Ita, quibus Damasippi mors laetitiae fuerat, post paullo ipsi trahabantur: neque prius finis jugulandi fuit, quam Sulla omnis suos divitiis explevit. ²Atque ego haec non in M. Tullio, neque his temporibus, vereor: sed in magna civitate multa et varia ingenia sunt. Potest, alio tempore, alio consule, cui item exercitus in manus, ¹ Damasippum. Damasippus was praetor during the consulship of Papirius Carbo and the younger Marius, A.U.C. 671. As a follower of the Marian party, he indulged in many cruel excesses against the opposite faction, and also against such as were suspected by him of favouring it. Compare Velleius Paternulus (2. 26.), “Damasippus Domitium, Scævolam etiam pontificem maximum et divini humanique juris auctorem celeberrimum, et C. Carbonem, praetorium, consulis fratrem, et Antistium, aedilium, velut faventes Sullæ partibus in curia Hostilia trucidavit.—Damasippus murdered in the Hostilian senate-house, as abettors of Sulla's party, Domitius Scævola, who was chief pontiff, and very highly celebrated for his knowledge of the laws, both divine and human, Caius Carbo of praetorian rank, brother of the consul, and Antistius, who had been aedile.”—Baker. Consult also Livy, Epit. 86.

² Atque ego haec non in Marco Tullio, &c. “I do not, it is true, apprehend such things as these in Marcus Tullius, nor in the present complexion of the times; but in a great state there are many and various characters. At some other time, under some other consul, to whose hands, likewise, an army may have been entrusted, some false suggestion may be credited for truth; and when, by virtue of the precedent you are now establishing, that consul shall have drawn the sword of punishment, who shall set limits to his power, or who restrain him in its exercise?”

falsum aliquid pro vero credi: ubi hoc exemplo, per senati decretum, consul gladium eduxerit, quis finem statuet, aut quis moderabitur? Majores nostri, Patres conscripti, neque consilii, neque audaciae umquam eguere: neque superbia obstabat, quo minus aliena instituta, si modo proba, imitarentur. ¹Arma atque tela militaria ab ²Samnitibus, ³insignia magistratum ab ⁴Tuscis pleraque sumserunt: postremo, quod ubique apud socios aut hostis idoneum videbatur, cum summo studio domi exsequebantur: ⁵imitari, quam invidere bonis malebant. Sed, eodem illo tempore, Graeciae morem imitati, verberibus ⁶animadvertebant in civis, de condemnatis summum supplicium sumebant. Post-

¹ Arma atque tela, “ arms defensive and offensive:” ὄπλα καὶ τελτά.

² Samnitibus. The Samnites were a people of Italy, who inhabited the country between Apulia, Latium, Campania, the territory of the Marsi, and Lucania. They distinguished themselves by their implacable hatred against the Romans, in the first ages of the republic, till they were at last almost totally extirpated, after a war of 70 years. They were of Sabine origin.

³ Insignia. The trabea, a white robe adorned with purple; the ivory sceptre or staff; the sella curulis; the twelve lictors, &c.

⁴ Tuscis. The country of the Tisci (Etruria), answers in some measure to the modern Tuscany. The origin of this remarkable people is lost in obscurity. It is probable that a body of Pelasgi, leaving the coast of Lydia in Asia Minor, settled in this part of Italy; and, by uniting in some degree, though not very closely, with the inhabitants whom they found there, laid the foundation of the Etrurian confederacy.

⁵ Imitari, quam invidere, &c. “ they preferred to imitate rather than to envy what was good in the institutions of other nations.” Understand institutis after bonis. One of Cortius’s manuscripts has imitari bonos, quam invidere bonis, &c. a reading of little value.

⁶ Animadvertebant in civis. The verb animadvertere sometimes, as in the present instance, denotes “ to punish” by authority, and then refers to the vigilance of the magistrate in marking offences committed. In this case there is often an application of the preposition in before the name or designation of the culprits, intimating

quam respublica adolevit, et multitudine civium factiones valuerent, circumveniri innocentes, alia hujuscemodi fieri coepere; tum lex Porcia aliaeque paratae, quibus legibus exilium damnatis permisum.¹ Hanc ego caussam, Patres conscripti, quo minus novum consilium capiamus, in primis magnam puto.² Profecto virtus atque sapientia major in illis fuit, qui ex parvis opibus tantum imperium fecere, quam in nobis, qui ea bene parta vix retinemus. Placet igitur, eos dimitti, et augeri exercitum Catilinae?³ minime: sed ita ⁴censo;⁵ publicandas eorum pecunias, ipsos in vinculis habendos⁶ per municipia quae maxume opibus valent; more strongly the steady attention directed towards the conduct found to be reprehensible.—Hill's Synonymes, p. 89. 4to ed.

¹ Hanc ego caussam, &c. The train of reasoning which is here ascribed by the historian to Caesar, would appear to be as follows: Our forefathers, though they wanted neither sagacity in devising plans for their own advantage, nor boldness in carrying those plans into operation, yet never disdained to imitate, in the institutions of other nations, what they conceived to be of utility to themselves. Among other things, they borrowed the custom of inflicting capital punishment on condemned citizens. As, however, they had adopted this from the Greeks at a period when it promised to be productive of salutary effects, so they changed it for a different course when positive evil was found to result. This was their latest alteration; and as such, we, their descendants, should be guided in this instance by their wisdom, and pursue without any deviation the path they have marked out for us.

² Profecto virtus, &c. “Surely there was greater energy and wisdom in those, who reared from trifling resources so mighty an empire,” &c.

³ Bene parta, “happily obtained from them;” i. e. “obtained in an auspicious hour from our fathers.”

⁴ Censeo. This was the usual and formal word applied to the expression of his opinion on the part of a senator. Sed ita censeo must therefore be rendered, “But my opinion is this.”

⁵ Publicandas eorum pecunias, “that their property be confiscated.”

⁶ Per municipia, “throughout the free towns.”

¹neu quis de is postea ad senatum referat, neve cum populo agat: qui aliter fecerit, senatum existumare, eum contra rempublicam et salutem omnium facturum."

LII. POSTQUAM Caesar dicendi finem fecit, ²ceteri verbo, alias alii, varie adsentiebantur: at ³M. Porcius Cato, rogatus sententiam, hujuscemodi orationem habuit. " ⁴Longe mihi alia mens est, Patres conscripti, cum res atque pericula nostra considero, et cum sen-

¹ Neu quis, &c. " and that no one, for the time to come, consult the senate in relation to their case, or treat, respecting them, with the people."

² Ceteri verbo, &c. " the rest gave merely a verbal assent, one to one of the speakers, another to another, in support of different opinions." — Alii, i. e. Silano, Neroni, Caesari. When the senators gave merely a verbal assent to the opinion of any speaker, they retained their seats and exclaimed assentior, adding the name of the individual with whom they agreed; as, assentior Silano; assentior Neroni; assentior Caesari.

³ M. Porcius Cato. Surnamed in history Uticencis, from his death at Utica, where he destroyed himself after the battle of Thapsus. He was great-grandson of Cato the Censor.

⁴ Longe mihi alia, &c. " When I reflect, Conscript Fathers, on the dangerous posture of our present affairs, my opinion is far different from what it is when I merely revolve in mind the sentiments of some of the speakers of this day." After et understand alia. The exordium of this speech is an evident imitation of the beginning of the third Olynthiac. Οὐχὶ ταῦτα παρίσταται μοι γινώσκειν, ὃ ἂνδρες Αθηναῖοι, ὅταν τε εἰς τὰ πρόγυματα ἀποβλέψω, καὶ ὅταν πρὸς τοὺς λόγους οὓς ἀκούων τοὺς μὲν γὰρ λογάν τεξὶ τοῦ τιμωρήσασθαι Φίλιππον ὃρῶ γιγνομένους, (" Illi mihi disseruisse videntur de poena eorum," &c.) τὰ δὲ πρόγυματα εἰς τοῦτο προΐκοντα, μῆτε ὅτας μὴ πιστεύσατε αὐτοὶ πρότερον κακᾶς σκέψασθαι δίον. (" Res autem monet, cavere ab illis magis," &c.) Demosth. Olynth. 3. init. " I am by no means affected in the same manner, Athenians! when I review the state of our affairs, and when I attend to those speakers who have now declared their sentiments. They insist that we should punish Philip: but our affairs, situated as they now appear, warn us to guard against the dangers with which we ourselves are threatened." — Leland.

tentias nonnullorum mecum ipse reputo. ¹Illi mihi disseruisse videntur de poena eorum, qui patriae, parentibus, ²aris atque focus suis, bellum paravere : res autem monet, cavere ab illis, ³quam, quid in illis statuamus, consultare. Nam ⁴cetera tum ⁵persequare, ubi facta sunt ; hoc, nisi provideris ne accidat, ubi evenit, frus-

¹ Illi mihi disseruisse violentur, &c. " they seem to me to have been arguing about the kind of punishment to be inflicted upon those, who," &c.

² Aris atque focus suis, " their religion and their homes." Ara refers here to the altar in the middle of the house, (impluvium), where the Penates were worshipped, and focus denotes the hearth in the hall, (atrium), around which were ranged the little images of the Lares. In such expressions as the present, care must be taken not to confound arae with the altars in public temples. Compare, on this head, the remark of Ernesti (Clav. Cic. s. v. Ara.), " Arae et foci quum junguntur, cave putes, aras de templis, focos de aedibus privatis intelligi, ut vulgaris opinio fert, in illo proverbio, pro aris et focus pugnare; quem errorem etiam erravit cl. Dukerus ad Flor. 3. 13. quum eum locus ille docere meliora posset, quem frustra tentat. Sed utrumque dicitur de privatis aedibus in quibus ara erat Deorum. Penatum patiorum, in impluvio, focus autem in atrio, isque Larium erat. Dom. 40. Unius cuiusque vestrum, sedes, aras, focus, &c. Ibid. 41. hic arae, hic foci, hic dii penates." The "vulgaris opinio," however, is adopted by Cortius.

³ Quam, quid in illis, &c. Cato's argument is this: The public safety demands that we rid ourselves of them at once, (cavere ab illis), and not waste valuable time in deliberating on the kind of punishment which their case may seem to demand. We should hold no terms with these guilty wretches: they have placed themselves, by their misdeeds, without the pale of the law, and the only thing to be done is to deprive them for ever of the means of injuring the state.

⁴ Cetera. Understand maleficia, which is expressed in some editions.

⁵ Persequare, " you may punish." Caesar, by the artful oration which the historian has assigned to him, had endeavoured to draw off the attention of the senate from the true point in the debate. Cato here brings back the question in its strongest and plainest colours.

tra ¹judicia implores ; capta urbe, nihil fit reliqui victis. Sed, per deos immortalis ! vos ego adpello, qui semper domos, villas, signa, ²tabulas vestras pluris, quam rem-publicam fecistis : si ista, cujuscumque modi sint, quae ³amplexamini, retinere, si voluptatibus vestris otium praebere voltis ; expurgiscimini aliquando, et ⁴capes-site rempublicam. ⁵Non agitur de vectigalibus, non de sociorum injuriis : libertas et anima nostra in dubio est. Saepenumero, Patres conscripti, multa verba ⁶in hoc ordine feci ; saepe de luxuria atque avaritia nostro-rum civium questus sum, multosque mortalis ea caussa advorsos habeo ; ⁷qui mihi atque animo meo nullius umquam delicti gratiam fecisset, haud facile alterius lubidini malefacta condonabam. Sed, ea tametsi vos

¹ Judicia, “the aid of public justice.”

² Tabulas. Understand pictas, “your paintings.”

³ Amplexamini. From amplexor, “to be fondly attached to any thing,” &c.

⁴ Capesite rempublicam, “take upon you the defence of your country.”

⁵ Non agitur de vectigalibus, &c. “The question is not now respecting the revenues of our empire, nor of wrongs inflicted on our allies : our freedom, our very existence is at stake.”

⁶ In hoc ordine, “in this house.” Facere verba, “to express one’s sentiments,” “to speak.” Habere verba, “to converse with one.” Dare verba, “to impose upon one.”

⁷ Qui mihi atque animo meo, &c. Cortius considers mihi atque animo meo equivalent simply to meo animo. The meaning of the clause will then be:—“I, who never extended to my own self indulgence for any fault, was not easily induced to pardon the misdeeds of others, for the sake of gratifying their ruling propensities.” Condonabam, strictly speaking, refers to the custom or habit of pardoning, as expressed by the imperfect tense. Plutarch’s biography of Cato will furnish an ample commentary on the words of the text. The stern and unbending character of this remarkable man, while it renders him a conspicuous object amid the general corruption of the age, must necessarily have exposed him to the hatred and the virulence of his contemporaries.

parvi pendebat, tamen res publica firma; ¹ opulentia neglegentiam tolerabat. Nunc vero non id agitur, ² bonis an malis moribus vivamus; neque quantum, aut quam magnificentum imperium populi Romani: ³ sed, cuius haec cumque modi, nostra, an nobiscum una, hostium futura sint. ⁴ Hic mihi quisquam mansuetudinem et misericordiam nominat? jam pridem equidem nos ⁵ vera rerum vocabula amisimus; quia bona aliena largiri, liberalitas; malarum rerum audacia, fortitudo vocatur: ⁶ eo res publica in extremo sita. Sint sane, quoniam ita se mores habent, liberales ex sociorum fortunis, sint misericordes ⁷ in furibus aerarii: ⁸ ne illis sanguinem nostrum largiantur, et, dum paucis sceletatis pareunt, bonos omnis perditum eant. ⁹ Bene et

¹ Opulentia neglegentiam tolerabat, “its resources saved it from the consequences of your neglect.”

² Bonis an malis moribus vivamus, “whether we be living under the influence of good or evil morals.”

³ Sed, cuius haec cumque, &c. “but whether these things, of what kind soever they may be, are to remain our own, or, together with ourselves, are to become the prey of our enemies.”

⁴ Hic mihi quisquam, &c. “Does any one here make mention unto me of clemency and compassion?” i. e. Does any one tell me here that the course to be pursued by us should be a mild and a merciful one?

⁵ Vera rerum vocabula, “the true names for things.” Compare Thucydides (3. 82.), Την εισθίαν ἀξίωσιν τῶν ὄντωνάτω ἀντίλλαζαν τόλμαιν γὰρ αἰλογιστος, ἀνδρία φιλέταιρος ινομίσθη. “The accustomed acceptation of names they interchanged thus a rash headlong daring was accounted a faithfully devoted courage.”—Blomfield.

⁶ Eo res publica in extremo sita, “in so critical a situation has the republic been placed.”

⁷ In furibus aerarii, “in the case of the pilferers of our treasury.” In furibus is the reading of all the manuscripts.

⁸ Ne illis sanguinem, &c. “let them only not lavish upon these men our blood.” Ne is here put for ne modo.

⁹ Bene et composite, “in fair and studied language.” Cato here composite C. Caesar paullo ante in hoc ordine de vita et morte disseruit, falsa, credo, existumans, quae de inferis memorantur; ¹diverso itinere malos a bonis loca tetra, inulta, foeda atque formidolosa ²habere. Itaque censuit PECUNIAS EORUM PUBLICANDAS, IPSOS PER MUNICIPIA IN CUSTODIIS HABENDOS; ³videlicet timens, ne, si Romae sint, aut a popularibus conjurationis, aut a ⁴multitudine conducta, per vim eripiantur. Quasi vero mali atque scelesti tantummodo in urbe, et non per totam Italiam sint; aut non ibi plus possit audacia, ubi ad defendantum opes minores. ⁵Quare refutes Caesar's remarks on the eternal sleep of the grave, rather by oratorical irony than philosophic disputation. The latter would have been altogether out of place in so bold and animated an harangue. We are not to suppose, however, that in thus censuring the opinion of Caesar, Cato assented to the fictions which marked the poetical accounts of Elysium and Tartarus, but merely that he entertained a belief in the existence of a future state of rewards and punishments. For some excellent remarks on the ideas entertained by the Greeks of a future state, consult Constant's admirable work, "De la Religion," vol. iii. p. 377. seqq.

¹ Diverso itinere, &c. "that the wicked, having pursued a different route from the good," &c.

² Habere, "inhabit." Used in the sense of habituare. Compare Cicero, Tusc. 1. 30.

³ Videlicet timens, "fearing, to be sure." Strong irony is expressed by both of these terms, but especially by the latter, since Caesar was more than suspected of being implicated in the conspiracy.

⁴ Multitudine conducta, "by a hired mob." With conducta understand pretio or mercede; and compare note 1. page 111.

⁵ Quare vanum equidem, &c. "Wherefore this advice is idle indeed, if he actually apprehends danger from them: while, on the other hand, if, amid the great alarm which pervades all classes, he alone feels none, on that very account it concerns me to fear the more for myself, and you for yourselves." The expression magis refert, mihi, &c. is equivalent to magis refert me mihi, vosque vobis timere. Cato here alludes in pointed terms to Caesar's supposed connexion with the conspiracy.

vanum equidem hoc consilium, si periculum ex illis metuit: sin in tanto omnium metu solus non timet, eo magis refert mihi atque vobis timere. Quare, cum de P. Lentulo ceterisque statuetis, pro certo habetote, vos simul de exercitu Catilinae et de omnibus conjuratis decernere. ¹Quanto vos attentius ea agetis, tanto illis animus infirmior erit: si paullulum modo vos languere viderint, jam omnes feroce^s ²aderunt. Nolite existumare, majores nostros ³armis rempublicam ex parva magnam fecisse. Si ita res esset, multo pulcherrumam eam nos haberemus: ⁴quippe sociorum atque civium, praeterea armorum atque equorum major nobis copia, quam illis. ⁵Sed alia fuere, quae illos magnos fecere, ⁶quae nobis nulla sunt; domi industria, foris justum imperium, ⁷animus in consulendo liber, neque delicto, neque lubidini obnoxius. Pro his nos habemus luxuriam atque avaritiam; ⁸publice egesta-

¹ Quanto vos attentius ea agetis, “the more vigorously ye shall act on the present occasion.”

² Aderunt, “will be present at your gates.”

³ Armis. Understand tantum or modo. “By martial prowess alone.”

⁴ Quippe sociorum, &c. Compare Demosthenes (Philipp. 3. 4.), Επεὶ καὶ τριήρεις γε, καὶ σωματῶν πλῆθος, καὶ χρημάτων πρόσθodoi, καὶ τῆς ἀλληλεγγύης ἀφθονία, καὶ τὸ ἀλλασσόν τὸ τις ισχύειν τὰς πόλεις πρίν, νῦν ἔταντα καὶ πλεῖστα καὶ μείζω ἐστι τὸν πότε πολλῷ. “For, as to naval power, troops, revenues, and all kinds of preparations, every thing that is esteemed the strength of a state, we are now much better and more amply provided than formerly.”—Leland.

⁵ Sed alia fuere, &c. Compare Demosth. I. c., ἡν τι τότε, οὐ, ὁ ἄδρες Ἀθηναῖοι, ἵν ταῦτα πολλῶν διανοίας, ὁ νῦν εἰς ἴστιν. “It is this, Athenians! Formerly mens’ minds were animated with that which they now feel no longer,” &c.—Leland.

⁶ Quae nobis nulla sunt, “which have no existence for us.”

⁷ Animus in consulendo liber, &c. “a mind unfettered in deliberation; neither swayed by a consciousness of guilt, nor biassed by any ruling propensity.”

⁸ Publice egestatem, &c. “as a people, poverty; in private, oputem, privatum opulentiam ; laudamus divitias, sequimur inertiam ; inter bonos et malos discrimen nullum ; omnia¹ virtutis praemia ambitio possidet. Neque mirum ; ubi vos separatim sibi quisque consilium capit, ubi domi voluptatibus, hic pecuniae, aut gratiae servitis : eo fit, ut impetus fiat in² vacuam rempublicam. Sed ego haec omitto. Conjuravere nobilissimi cives patriam incendere : Gallorum gentem infestissimam nomini Romano ad bellum arcessunt : dux hostium³ supra caput est : vos cunctamini etiam nunc, quid intra moenia⁴ adprehensis hostibus faciatis ?⁵ Misereamini censeo ; deliqueru homines adolescentuli, per ambitionem ; atque etiam armatos dimittatis. ⁶Ne, ista vobis mansuetudo et misericordia, si illi arma ceperint, in miseriam vertet. ⁷Scilicet res aspera est ; sed vos non timetis eam. Immo lence." The resources of the state are plundered by the powerful, (fures aerarii), who lavish in private their ill-gotten wealth.

¹ Virtutis praemia, "the recompenses of merit."

² Vacuam rempublicam, "the unprotected republic." After vacuam understand defensoribus, or else consilio et defensione, as Dahl supplies the ellipsis.

³ Supra caput est. A figurative expression, analogous to the English phrases, "is at our very doors," or "has the sword at our throats."

⁴ Adprehensis hostibus. The dative, not the ablative. Compare Cicero, Acad. 4. 115. "Diodoro quid faciam Stoico?" and Pro Caecin. 30. "Quid huic tu homini facias?" The common editions of Sallust have deprehensis; but the reading we have given is more significant. Deprehendere is to come upon one unawares, but ap-prehendere is to seize, to lay hands upon.

⁵ Misereamini censeo. Uttered ironically. "My advice is that you take pity on them."

⁶ Ne, ista vobis, &c. "Yes, that clemency and compassion, should they take up arms, will change into misery for you." Ne is an archaism for nae, from the Greek ναί. Ista denotes strong contempt. With vertet understand se.

⁷ Scilicet res aspera est, &c. "The crisis is undoubtedly a dangerous one, but you fear it not: nay, indeed, you do fear it very greatly,

vero maxume; sed inertia et mollitia animi, alius alium exspectantes cunctamini, dis immortalibus confisi, qui hanc rempublicam in maxumis saepe periculis servare. Non votis, neque ¹suppliciis muliebribus auxilia deorum parantur: vigilando, agendo, bene consulendo ²prospera omnia ³cedunt: ubi secordiae te atque ignaviae tradideris, nequidquam deos implores; irati infestique sunt. Apud majores nostros, T. Manlius Torquatus ⁴bello Gallico filium suum, quod⁵ is contra imperium in hostem pugnaverat, necari jussit; atque ille egregius adolescens immoderatae fortitudinis morte ⁵poenas dedit: ⁶vos de crudelissimis parricidis quid statuatis, cunctamini? ⁷Videlicet vita cetera eorum but," &c. After immo vero maxume understand eam timetis. The idea intended to be conveyed is this: You will acknowledge, very probably, that the present posture of our affairs is a dangerous one; but you will assert, at the same time, that it fills you with no alarm. Your assertion is a false one: for the condition of the state does inspire you with apprehensions, and those, too, of the strongest kind; but you are too spiritless, too slothful, to act the part that becomes you.

¹ Suppliciis muliebribus, "womanish supplications."

² Prospera. Some editions have prospere, which is inferior in point of elegance. Prospera is used adverbially here by a Hellenism.

³ Cedunt, "eventuate."

⁴ Bello Gallico. This is an historical error on the part of Sallust. The occurrence mentioned in the text took place in a war with the Latins. Compare Florus, 1. 14. and Livy, 8. 7.

⁵ Poenas dedit. "Atoned with his life for his intemperate valour."

⁶ Vos de crudelissimis, &c. An instance of the argument a fortiori. The premises are Apud majores nostros, &c. If a father put to death his own son for merely disobeying a military order, though that very act of disobedience enabled the latter to destroy one of the enemies of his country, should their country hesitate to inflict the most signal punishment upon those who, with a cruel and parricidal spirit, have attempted to plunge the steel into her own bosom?

⁷ Videlicet vita cetera, &c. "No doubt the rest of their lives stands huic sceleri obstat. Verum parcite dignitati Lentuli, si ipse pudicitiae, si famae suae, si dis aut hominibus umquam ullis pepercit: ignoscite Cethegi adolescentiae, ¹nisi iterum patriae bellum fecit. Nam quid ego de Gabinio, Statilio, Coepario loquar? Quibus ²si quidquam umquam pensi fuisse, non ea consilia de republica habuissent. Postremo, Patres conscripti, si mehercule peccato locus esset, facile paterer vos ipsa re corrigi, quoniam verba contemnitis; sed undique circumventi sumus. Catilina cum exercitu ³faucibus urget: alii intra moenia, in sinu urbis sunt hostes: ⁴neque parari, neque consuli quidquam occulre potest: quo magis properandum. Quare ita ego censeo: cum nefario consilio sceleratorum civium respublica in maxima pericula venerit, hique indicio T. Volturci, et legatorum Allobrogum, convicti confessique sint, caedem, incendia, alia foeda atque crudelia facinora in civis patriamque paravisse; de confessis, sicuti de ⁵maniin direct opposition to this crime. Well, then, spare the rank of Lentulus," &c. Strong irony.

¹ Nisi iterum, &c. "unless this be the second time that he has made war upon his country." The irony of adolescentiae is extremely severe. Some commentators suppose that the allusion in the text is to his having taken part with Marius in the contest between him and Sylla. It is more probable, however, that the orator is made to refer to the conspiracy of Piso, mentioned in chap. 18. of this work.

² Si quidquam umquam pensi, &c. "If they had ever exercised the least reflection;" i. e. if they had not always been rash and inconsiderate in their actions. The irony is still continued: It was not from any hostile intent that they harboured these designs against their country. Oh! no; but from mere want of reflection. Their conduct has always been marked by inconsiderateness and haste.

³ Faucibus urget, "is ready to spring upon us as his prey." A metaphor taken from a wild beast about to dart upon its victim.

⁴ Neque parari, &c. Cato here hints that some of the senators were implicated, and betrayed the deliberations of the senate to the conspirators.

⁵ Manifestis, " palpably guilty."

festis rerum capitalium, more majorum, supplicium sumendum."

LIII. POSTQUAM Cato adsedit, consulares omnes, itemque senatus magna pars, sententiam ejus laudant, ¹virtutem animi ad coelum ferunt; alii alios increpan tes timidos vocant; Cato magnus atque clarus habetur; senati decretum fit, ²sicuti ille censuerat. ³Sed mihi multa legenti, multa audienti, quae populus Romanus, domi militiaeque, mari atque terra, praeclara facinora fecit, forte lubuit attendere, ⁴quae res maxume tanta negotia sustinuisse. Sciebam, saepenumero parva manu cum magnis legionibus hostium contendisse: cog-

¹ Virtutem animi, "his firmness of soul."

² Sicuti ille censuerat. The decree of the senate is said to have been made in accordance with the opinion of Cato; not because he was the only one who spoke in favour of capital punishment, but because he advocated that measure with the most ability and zeal. Thus Cicero (Ep. ad. Att. 12. 21.) remarks, "Cur ergo in sententiam Catonis? Quia verbis luculentioribus et pluribus rem eandem comprehendenterat.—Why then was the sentence drawn up according to Cato's opinion? The reason was, he spoke to the point more perspicuously and copiously than the others did."—Guthrie.

³ Sed mihi multa legenti, &c. On the score of historical fidelity, Sallust is highly censurable for the silence which he preserves respecting the public honours that were paid to Cicero on this occasion. "It is in the conclusion of the business," observes Mr Dunlop, "that the historian withdraws from Cicero his due share of applause, and contrives to eclipse him by always interposing the character of Cato, though it could not be unknown to any witness of those transactions that Cato himself, and other senators, publicly hailed the consul as the Father of his country; and that a thanksgiving to the gods was decreed in his name, for having preserved the city from conflagration, and the citizens from massacre. This omission, which may have originated partly in enmity, and partly in disgust at the ill-disguised vanity of the consul, has in all times been regarded as the chief defect, and even stain, in the history of the Catilinarian conspiracy."

—Dunlop's Roman Literature, vol. ii. p. 154. Lond. ed.

⁴ Quae res maxume, &c. "What circumstance in particular had supported the weight of such important concerns."

noveram, parvis copiis bella gesta cum opulentis rebus; ad hoc, saepe fortunae violentiam toleravisse; facundia Graecos, gloria belli Gallos ante Romanos fuisse. Ac mihi multa ¹agitanti constabat, paucorum civium egregiam virtutem cuncta patravisse; eoque factum, uti divitias paupertas, multitudinem paucitas superaret. Sed postquam luxu atque desidia civitas corrupta est, rursus respublica magnitudine sua imperatorum atque magistratum vitia sustentabat; ac, ²veluti effoeta parente, multis tempestibus haud sane quisquam Romae virtute magnus fuit. Sed, memoria mea, ³ingenti virtute, divorsi moribus fuere viri duo, M. Cato, et C. Caesar; quos, quoniam res obtulerat, ⁴silentio praeterire non fuit consilium, quin utriusque naturam et mores, quantum ingenio possem, aperirem.

LIV. Igitur his ⁵genus, ⁶aetas, eloquentia, prope aequalia fuere; magnitudo animi par, item ⁷gloria; sed ⁸alia alii. Caesar beneficiis ac munificentia mag-

¹ Agitanti, "reflecting."

² Veluti effoeta parente, "the parent being, as it were, exhausted." Cortius reads effueta parentum, and considers it equivalent to effoeta parentis inter parentes, "a parent whose strength has departed." We have followed the Bipont text, with which that of Burnouf agrees.

³ Ingenti virtute, "of distinguished merit."

⁴ Silentio praeterire, &c.; i. e. Consilium non fuit illos silentio praeterire; ita ut non utriusque, &c.

⁵ Genus, "birth." M. Porcius Cato, called, after his death, Uticensis, from the city of Utica, near Carthage, where he ended his existence, was the great-grandson of M. Porcius Cato, the censor. The Porcian gens was plebeian; the Julian, patrician: illustrious achievements, however, and public honours, had raised the former to a full equality with the latter.

⁶ Aetas. At the time of this conspiracy, Cato was 33 years of age, Caesar about 37.

⁷ Gloria. Understand par.

⁸ Alia alii, "one kind of glory to the one, another to the other." The student will observe the use of alii alii in place of altera alteri; which last would be too limited in signification for the spirit of the nus habebatur; integritate vitae Cato. Ille mansuetudine et misericordia clarus factus: ¹huic severitas dignitatem addiderat. Caesar dando, sublevando, ²ignoscendo; Cato ³nihil largiundo gloriam adeptus. In altero miseris perfugium; in altero malis perniciis: ⁴illius facilitas; hujus constantia laudabatur. Postremo, Caesar ⁵in animum induxerat laborare, vigilare; negotiis amicorum intentus, sua neglegere; nihil denegare, quod dono dignum esset; sibi magnum imperium, exercitum, novum bellum exoptabat, ubi virtus enitescere posset. ⁶At Catoni studium modestiae, decoris, sed maxime severitatis erat. Non divitiis cum divite, neque ⁷factione cum factioso; sed cum strenuo virtute, cum modesto pudore, cum innocentia ⁸abstinentia certabat: ⁹esse, quam videri, bonus malebat: ita, quo minus gloriam petebat, eo magis sequebatur.

passage. Compare Livy (1. 21.), “ Ita duo deinceps reges, alius alia via, ille bello, hic pace, civitatem auxerunt.”

¹ Huic severitas, “ to the latter the rigid practice of virtue had imparted additional dignity.”

² Ignoscendo, “ by forgiving.” Ignosco properly means to take no notice of a fault, (non nosse). Thus Cicero (Ep. ad. Brut. 15. a med.), “ Sed sceleris poenam praetermittere (id enim est quod vocatur ignoscere) in hoc bello peniculosum puto.—But to omit the punishment of wickedness, which we call pardoning, I take to be pernicious in this war.”—Middleton.

³ Nihil largiundo, “ by bestowing no favours.” Dureau de Lammalle renders it “ en refusant;” and Beauzée, “ en ne se relachant sur rien.”

⁴ Illius facilitas, hujus constantia, &c. “ The yielding temper of the former, the firmness of the latter, were subjects of continual praise.”

⁵ In animum induxerat, “ had formed the resolve.”

⁶ At Catoni studium modestiae, &c. “ But Cato’s only study was moderation, honour; but most of all, the rigid practice of virtue.”

⁷ Factione, “ in party-spirit.”

⁸ Abstinentia, “ in purity of heart.”

⁹ Esse, quam videri, &c. The idea here expressed appears to be

LV. POSTQUAM, ut dixi, senatus in Catonis sententiam discessit, consul¹ optimum factum ratus, noctem, quae instabat, antecapere, ne quid eo spatio novaretur, ²triumviro, quae supplicium postulabat, parare jubet: ipse, dispositis praesidiis, Lentulum in carcerem deducit: idem fit ceteris per praetores. Est³ locus in carcere, quod⁴ Tullianum adpellatur, ubi paullulum borrowed from Aeschylus, (Sept. contra Theb. 589. ed. Blomf.). Οὐ γὰρ δοκίνις ἀλλ’ εἴναι Στάτη. Compare Choricius, ap. Villoison, (Anecd. Graec. vol. ii. p. 22.), ἴσβεύλεσθο γὰρ οὐ δοκεῖν, ἀλλ’ εἴναι κενῆσθαι. “The parallel drawn between Cato and Caesar,” observes Mr Dunlop, “is one of the most celebrated passages in the history of the conspiracy. Of both these famed opponents we are presented with favourable likenesses. Their defects are thrown into shade; and the bright qualities of each different species by which they were distinguished are contrasted, for the purpose of showing the various qualities by which men arrive at eminence.”—Dunlop’s Roman Literature, vol. i. p. 160. Lond. ed. Steele has given an imitation of this passage of Sallust, in the Christian Hero, p. 4. Compare Velleius Paterculus, 2. 35.

¹ Optimum factum, “the most advisable course.”

² Triumviro. Understand capitales. These were magistrates who had charge of the prison, and of the execution of condemned criminals. They judged also concerning slaves, and persons of the lowest rank. They were likewise called Tresviri or Treviri. From Valerius Maximus (5. 4. 7), it appears that they acted commonly by deputies.

³ Locus—quod, &c. The relative here agrees in gender with the following noun. Some grammarians term this the Greek construction. It is the usual practice of Cicero; but other authors give the relative the gender of the preceding noun: Cicero himself adopts this latter custom when the word explained is a foreign one; as, “cohibere motus animi quos Graeci πάθη vocant;” still, however, he has also the following: “Consensus quam συμπαθεῖσιν Graeci vocant.”—Zumpt. L. G. p. 238. Kenrick’s transl.

⁴ Tullianum. The prison at Rome was originally built by Ancus Martius, and afterwards enlarged by Servius Tullius; whence that part of it which was under ground, and built by him, received the name of Tullianum. Thus Varro (L. L. 4.) observes, “In hoc,

¹escenderis ad laevam, circiter duodecim pedes humi depresso. Eum muniunt undique parietes, atque in-super ²camera, lapideis fornicibus vincta : sed ³incultu, tenebris, odore foeda atque terribilis ejus facies est. In eum locum postquam demissus Lentulus, ⁴quibus praeceptum erat, ⁵laqueo gulam fregere. Ita ille patricius, ex clarissima gente Corneliorum, qui consulare imperium Romae habuerat, dignum moribus factisque suis exitum vitae invenit. De Cethego, Statilio, Gabinio, Coepario, eodem modo supplicium sumtum.

LVI. DUM ea Romae geruntur, Catilina ⁶ex omni copia, quam et ipse adduxerat, et Manlius habuerat, ⁷duas legiones instituit ; cohortes, pro numero militum, pars quae sub terra Tullianum, ideo quod additum a Tullio rege." The full expression is Tullianum robur, from its walls having been originally of oak; but in the days of Sallust they were of stone. This dungeon now serves as a subterranean chapel to a small church built on the spot, called San Pietro in Carcere, in commemoration of St Peter, who is supposed to have been confined there. Its only entrance, when a dungeon, was through a hole in the arched roof; now, however, there is a door in the side wall. " Notwithstanding the change," observes Eustace, " it has still a most appalling appearance." — Eustace, Clas. Tour, vol. i. p. 365. note. Lond. ed.

¹ Escenderis. An archaism for ascenderis. Some editions have descendens, but erroneously; for escenderis refers to the elevation on which the prison stood. Compare Descrizione di Roma Antica, p. 151. where the different opinions are stated relative to the situation of the Tullianum.

² Camera, &c. " a vaulted roof secured by stone arches."

³ Incultu, " from want of cleanliness."

⁴ Quibus praeceptum erat. Understand lictores. Compare note 2, page 137.

⁵ Laqueo gulam fregere, " strangled him." It was the Roman custom to put to death criminals of rank in the prison; to inflict public punishment on others.

⁶ Ex omni copia, " out of the entire force."

⁷ Duas legiones instituit, " formed two legions." Catiline formed, if the expression may be allowed, the skeletons of two legions. He had not, at first, a sufficient number of men to form the regular complet: deinde, ut quisque voluntarius, aut ex sociis in castra venit, aequaliter distribuerat; ac brevi spatio legiones¹ numero hominum expleverat, cum initio non amplius duobus millibus habuisset. Sed ex omni copia circiter pars quarta erat militaribus armis instructa; ceteri, ut quemque casus armaverat, ²sparos, aut lanceas, alii ³praeacutas sudes portabant. Sed, postquam Antonius cum exercitu adventabat, Catilina per montes iter facere, ad urbem modo, modo ⁴in Galcomplement of each legion; still, however, he divided what men he had into twenty cohorts, ten for a legion, and these cohorts he subdivided into maniples and centuries. The cohorts, maniples, and centuries, all wanted at first their regular complement of men, and only obtained it gradually as fresh troops arrived at the camp.

¹ Numero hominum, "with the regular number of men." The legion contained different numbers of men at different times, from 3000 to 6000. In the time of Polybius it was 4200. The subject is well discussed by Lipsius, De Militia Romana, dial. 4. Each legion was divided into ten cohorts, each cohort into three maniples, and each maniple into two centuries. So that there were thirty maniples and sixty centuries in a legion; and if there always had been 100 men in each century, as its name imports, the legion would have consisted of 6000 men.

² Sparos, "darts." The form of this weapon is not clearly ascertained. Servius (ad Aen. 11. 682.) describes it as follows: "Telum rusticum in modum pedis (read, with R. Stephens, pedi) recurvum." Festus observes, "Spara parvissimi generis jacula, ab eo quod spargantur dicta;" and Nonius (c. 18. n. 12.), "Spari tela sunt non bellica."

³ Praeacutas sudes, "stakes pointed at the end."

⁴ In Galliam versus, "in the direction of Gaul," or, "towards Gaul." Dr Butler's remarks on the preposition versus may not prove unacceptable to the student:—"This preposition marks the tendency or direction of an object. It is, in fact, only the participle of the verb verto, signifying the direction towards which the thing or person spoken of is turned, and is frequently used with the preposition ad or in; with the former of which it also combines into one preposition, adversus or adversum. Indeed, when it appears used alone, one of these prepositions is probably understood after it, liam versus castra movere; hostibus occasionem pugnandi non dare; sperabat prope diem ¹sese habiturum, si Romae socii inceptra patravissent. Interea servitia repudiabat, ²cujus initio ad eum magnae copiae concurrebant, opibus conjurationis fretus; simul ³alienum suis rationibus existumans videri caussam civium cum servis fugitivis communicavisse.

LVII. SED, postquam in castra nuncius pervenit, Romae conjurationem patefactam, de Lentulo, Cethego, ceteris, quos supra memoravi, supplicium sumtum; plerique, quos ad bellum spes rapinarum, aut novarum rerum studium illexerat, dilabuntur; reliquos Catilina per montis asperos, magnis itineribus, ⁴in agrum unless it be said, like secundum, to govern the case of its verb; but there is this material difference between them, that secundum comes from sequor, a verb with an active meaning, versus from the passive verto: it is better, therefore, after this word, to understand the prepositions ad or in. Though called a preposition, which it is, in point of grammatical order of construction, yet in speaking or writing it is always placed after its case."—Butler's Praxis on the Latin Prepositions, p. 125.

¹ Sese, habiturum, "that he himself would soon have one." Understand occasione pugnandi. Some editions have magnas copias habiturum.

² Cujus, "of which class of persons." Understand generis, or serviti. Singular relatives are sometimes referred to collective antecedents in the plural. Compare Priscian (17. 20. vol. ii. p. 81. ed. Krehl), "Cujus enim singulare ad rem retulit (Sallustius) id est cujus rei servitorum." Consult also the excursus of Cortius on this passage of Sallust.

³ Alienum suis rationibus, "inconsistent with his views." Catiline, however, had intended originally to have employed the services of the slaves. Compare chapters 24. and 46. of this same history.

⁴ In agrum Pistoriensem. Pistoria was a town of Etruria, about 20 miles north-west of Florentia, (Florence). It was situate on the Stella, which falls into the Ombrone, a northern branch of the Arno or Arno. Near it the battle was fought between the forces of Catiline and the army of the Republic. It is now called Pistoia.

Pistoriensem abducit, eo consilio, uti per tramites occulte ¹perfugerent in ²Galliam. At Q. Metellus Celer cum tribus legionibus in agro Piceno praesidebat, ³ex difficultate rerum eadem illa existumans, quae supra diximus, Catilinam agitare. Igitur, ubi iter ejus ex perfugis cognovit, castra propere movet, ac ⁴sub ipsis radicibus montium consedit, qua illi descensus erat [in Galliam properanti]. Neque tamen Antonius procul aberat; ⁵utpote qui magno exercitu, locis aequioribus ⁶expeditus, in fuga sequeretur. Sed Catilina, postquam videt ⁷montibus atque copiis hostium sese clausum, in urbe res adversas, neque fugae, neque

¹ Perfugerent. In some editions perfugeret; in others, profugeret.

² Galliam. Cisalpine, not Transalpine, Gaul is here meant.
‘ $\text{H} \dot{\iota}\pi\tau \tau\ddot{\alpha}\tau \tau\eta$ ’ ‘ Αλπιαν Κελτικη̄, not ‘ $\text{H} \dot{\iota}\pi\tau \acute{\iota}\kappa\iota\pi\tau \tau\eta$ ’ ‘ Αλπιαν .

³ Ex difficultate rerum, &c. “Suspecting, from the difficulties which encompassed him, that Catiline was meditating those very plans of which we have made mention above;” i. e. was meditating an escape into Gaul.

⁴ Sub ipsis radicibus, “at the very foot.”—In Galliam properanti. We have inclosed these words within brackets as savouring of a gloss, in accordance with the opinion of the best editors.

⁵ Utpote qui, &c. “Inasmuch as he.”

⁶ Expeditus. Some editions place a comma after aequioribus, and another after expeditus, which then may signify “unencumbered by baggage.” We have given, however, the reading of Cortius, which may be rendered as follows: encountering fewer obstacles to his progress along a more level country;” fewer obstacles, namely, than Catiline did in his passage across the mountains. Others prefer placing a comma after aequioribus, and reading expeditos in fugam sequeretur. They make expeditos in fugam equivalent to sine impedimentis fugientes.

⁷ Montibus atque copiis. The forces of Antonius, in Etruria, pressed Catiline in the rear, while Metellus stood ready in Gaul, at the foot of the Apennines, to intercept the enemy as they fled. Compare the words of Catiline in the following chapter: “Exercitus hostium duo, unus ab urbe, alter a Gallia, obstant.”

¹praesidii ullam spem; optumum factum ratus in tali re fortunam belli tentare, statuit cum Antonio quam primum configere. Itaque, concione advocata, hujus cemodi orationem habuit.

LVIII. “COMPERTUM ego habeo, milites, ²verba virtutem non addere; neque ex ignavo strenuum, neque fortem ex timido exercitum, oratione imperatoris, fieri. Quanta cujusque animo audacia natura, aut ³moribus, inest, tanta in bello patere solet: quem neque gloria, neque pericula, excitant, nequidquam hortere; timor animi auribus obficit. Sed ego vos, quo pauca monerem, advocavi; simul uti caussam consilii aperirem. Scitis equidem, milites, secordia atque ignavia Lentuli quantam ipsi cladem nobisque attulerit; ⁴quoque modo, dum ex urbe praesidia opperior, in Galliam proficiisci nequierim. Nunc ⁵quo in loco res nostrae sint, juxta mecum omnes intellegitis. Exercitus hostium duo, ⁶unus ab urbe, alter a Gallia, obstant: diutius in his locis esse, ⁷si maxume animus ferat, frumenti atque aliarum rerum egestas prohibet. Quocumque ire placet, ferro iter aperiundum est. Quapropter vos moneo, uti ⁸forti atque parato animo sitis; et, cum praelium inibitis, memineritis, vos divitias, decus, gloriam, praeterea libertatem atque patriam in dextris portare. Si vincimus, omnia nobis tuta, commeatus abunde, colo-

¹ Praesidii. “Relief,” or, “succour.”

² Verba. Some editions have viris after verba. Its omission is more in accordance with the general style of the historian.

³ Moribus, “by habit.”

⁴ Quoque modo. “And in what way.”

⁵ Quo in loco. “In what situation.”

⁶ Unus ab urbe, alter a Gallia. “One on the side of the city, the other on the side of Gaul.” Compare note 7, page 141.

⁷ Si maxume animus ferat. “Even if we be very greatly inclined;” i. e. however much we may be inclined so to do.

⁸ Forti atque parato animo. “Of a brave and resolute spirit.”

niae atque municipia patebunt: sin metu cesserimus, eadem illa advorsa fiunt: neque locus, neque amicus quisquam teget, quem arma non texerint. Praeterea, milites, non eadem nobis et illis necessitudo impendet: nos pro patria, pro libertate, pro vita certamus; ¹ illis supervacaneum est pugnare pro potentia paucorum. Quo audacius adgredimini, memores pristinae virtutis. Licuit nobis, cum summa turpitudine, in exilio aetatem agere: potuistis nonnulli Romae, amissis bonis, alienas opes exspectare. Quia illa foeda atque intoleranda ² viris videbantur, haec sequi decrevistis. Si ³ relinquere voltis, audacia opus est: nemo, nisi vitor, ⁴ pace bellum mutavit. Nam in fuga salutem sperare, ⁵ cum arma, ⁶ quis corpus tegitur, ab hostibus averteris, ⁷ ea vero dementia est. Semper in praelio maximum est periculum; ⁸ qui maxume timent: audacia pro muro habetur. Cum vos considero, milites, et cum facta vestra aestumo, magna me spes victoriae tenet. Animus, aetas, virtus vestra hortantur; praeterea necessitudo, ¹ Illis supervacaneum est, &c. Equivalent to illis nec necessitatis nec utilitatis est pro potentia paucorum pugnare. “They lie under no obligation to fight in defence of the power of a few.” No necessity urges them to throw away their lives in support of an odious aristocracy; and therefore you will find them the easier to be subdued.”

² Viris. “To men of spirit.”

³ Relinquere. Understand haec, “to abandon this career on which you have entered.” Some editions express haec.

⁴ Pace bellum mutavit. “Has exchanged war for peace.” Equivalent to pro bello pacem habuit.

⁵ Cum. Some editions have tum, cum arma, &c.

⁶ Quis. For quibus.

⁷ Ea vero dementia est. “That indeed is folly.” Demens, strictly speaking, denotes one who is deficient in point of sense and judgment in certain things. Some editions give vera, in place of vero, in the text.

⁸ Qui maxume timent. The antecedent illis is elegantly understood.

quae etiam timidos fortis facit. Nam multitudo hostium ne circumvenire queat, prohibent angustiae. Quod si virtuti vestrae fortuna inviderit, cavete, ¹inulti animam amittatis; neu capti potius, sicuti pecora, trucidemini, quam, virorum more pugnantes, cruentam atque luctuosam victoriam hostibus relinquatis."

LIX. HAEC ubi dixit, paullulum commoratus, signa canere jubet, atque ²instructos ordines in locum aequum deducit: dein, remotis omnium equis, quo militibus, exaequo periculo, animus amplior esset, ipse ³pedes exercitum, ⁴pro loco atque copiis, instruit. ⁵Nam, uti planities erat inter sinistros montis, et, ab dextra, rupes aspera, octo cohortis in fronte constituit: ⁶reliqua signa in subsidio artius collocat. ⁷Ab his centuriones omnis lectos, et ⁸evocatos, praeterea ex gregariis militibus

¹ Inulti animam amittatis. Understand ne. "That ye part not with life unavenged."

² Instructos ordines. "His troops as they were drawn up."

³ Pedes. "On foot." The nominative singular.

⁴ Pro loco atque copiis. "In accordance with the nature of the ground, and the extent of his forces."

⁵ Nam, uti planities, &c. "For, as the plain was situate between mountains on the left, and as there was on the right a craggy rock." If we read rupe, as some editions have it, existente is understood: if rupes, it is the nominative to erat, understood. The meaning, however, is the same in either case.

⁶ Reliqua signa, &c. "The rest of his forces he stations in closer order, as a body of reserve." Signa, which properly denotes the standards, is here put by metonymy for the troops themselves. Each century, or at least each maniple, had its proper standard and standard-bearer.

⁷ Ab his centuriones, &c. We have given lectos with Cortius and others. Some editions have electos, which may be construed as a substantive. The electi, according to Vegetius (2. 6.), composed the first cohort, which took its post by the eagle, and was regarded as the head of the legion, (caput legionis). The Bipont edition reads electos.

⁸ Evocatos. The evocati were veterans who had served out their time, but had been prevailed upon to follow the standard of a com-optimum quemque armatum, in primam aciem subducit. C. Manlium in dextera,¹ Faesulanum quendam in sinistra parte curare jubet: ipse cum ²libertis et colonis ³propter aquilam adsistit, quam, bello ⁴Cimbrico, C. Marius in exercitu habuisse dicebatur. At ex altera parte C. Antonius, ⁵pedibus aeger, quod praelio adesse mander whom they approved. They were exempted from the drudgery of military service.

¹ Faesulanum quendam. "A certain inhabitant of Faesulae." Plutarch calls him Furius.—Curare, "to take command." Curare appears to be the proper word on such occasions. Compare Jug. 57. "Legatis imperat ubi quisque curaret."

² Libertis et colonis. By the liberti are meant his own freedmen; for if freedmen in general had been meant, Sallust would have used libertinis instead of libertis. By coloni are meant Sylla's veterans, who had been settled in the military colonies.

³ Propter aquilam, &c. Each Roman legion had for its chief standard an eagle of gold or silver, with expanded wings, on the top of a spear, sometimes holding a thunderbolt in its claws, with the figure of a small chapel above it. Consult Rasche. Lex Rei Numm. vol. i. p. 995. Probably the same eagle is meant in the text of which Cicero speaks (l. in Cat. 9.), "cui domi (Catilinae) sacrarium scelerum constitutum fuit."

⁴ Bello Cimbrico. In the year of the city 640, the Cimbri, from the north of Germany and the Cimbric Chersonese, uniting with the Teutones, another German nation, made an irruption into the Roman provinces. After having defeated several Roman commanders, they were completely overthrown by Marius and Catulus. Marius vanquished the Teutones at Aquae Sextiae in Gaul, now Aix; while to Catulus, his colleague, must be ascribed the merit of the victory over the Cimbri, in the Raudii Campi, near Milan, or rather Cremona.

⁵ Pedibus aeger. Dio Cassius informs us that Antonius feigned illness on the day of battle, fearful of encountering the reproaches of Catiline in case the latter should meet him in the fight. Catiline, according to the same authority, preferred coming to an engagement with the forces of Antonius rather than with those of Metellus, although the former commander had the larger army of the two, because nequibat, ¹M. Petreio legato exercitum permittit. Ille cohortis veteranas, quas ²tumulti caussa conscripsérat, in fronte; post eas, ceterum exercitum in subsidiis lo-cat. ³Ipse equo circumiens, unumquemque nominans adpellat, hortatur, rogat, uti meminerint, se contra la-trones ⁴inermos, pro patria, pro liberis, pro aris atque focus suis, ⁵cernere. Homo militaris, quod amplius he hoped that Antonius would purposely mismanage matters during the fight.—Dio. Cass. 37. 39. vol. i. p. 136. ed. Reimar.

¹ M. Petreio. Marcus Petreius, here mentioned, is the same individual who afterwards took part with Pompey against Caesar, and, as a lieutenant of the former, was engaged in military operations against Caesar in Spain and Africa. When Caesar had proved victorious in the battle of Thapsus, Petreius attempted to destroy himself by fighting with his friend, king Juba, in single combat. Juba was killed first, and Petreius obliged one of his slaves to run him through. Compare Appian, Bell. Civ. 2. 100. Cicero speaks of him in terms of high commendation (pro P. Sextio, 5.), “Si M. Petreii non excellens animo, et amore républicae, non praestans in republica virtus, non summa auctoritas apud milites, non mirificus usus in re militari extitisset, neque adjutor ei P. Sextius ad excitandum Antonium, cohortandum, impellendum fuisse; datus illo in bello esset hiemi locus, neque unquam Catilina, cum e pruina Apenmini atque e nivibus illis emersisset, atque aestatem integrum nactus, Italiae calles et pastorum stabula praeclara cepisset, sine multo sanguine, ac sine totius Italiae vastitate miserrima concidisset.”

² Tumultus. A war in Italy, or against the Gauls, was called tumultus, a much stronger term than bellum.

³ Ipse. Some commentators condemn the use of ipse in this, and ille in the preceding clause, with reference to the same person. The explanation, however, is an easy one: Antonius exercitum Petreio permittit. Ille Petreius, &c. (“that officer;”) and again, Petreius suum cuique cohorti locum assignat. Ipse equo circumiens, (“riding around in person.”)

⁴ Inermos. Inermus and inermis are indiscriminately used.

⁵ Cernere. Used here for decernere: the simple verb for the compound.—Homo militaris. Used, καὶ τὸν ἔργον, for “homo rei militaris peritissimus,” “a man of great military experience.”

annos triginta ¹tribunus, aut ²praefectus, aut legatus, aut praetor cum magna gloria fuerat, plerosque ipsos factaque eorum fortia noverat: ea commemorando militum animos accendebat.

LX. SED ubi, rebus omnibus exploratis, Petreius ³tuba signum dat, cohortis paullatim incedere jubet; idem facit hostium exercitus. Postquam eo ventum, unde a ⁴ferentariis praelium committi posset, maxumo clamore ⁵cum infestis signis concurrunt; ⁶pila omittunt; gladiis res geritur. ⁷Veterani, pristinae virtutis memores, cominus acriter instare: ⁸illi haud timidi resistunt: maxuma vi certatur. ⁹Interea Catilina cum ¹ Tribunus. “Tribune.” The military tribunes of the Romans nearly corresponded to the colonels of modern times. There were six in each legion, who commanded under the consul.

² Praefectus. “Prefect.” When the term praefectus stands alone, as in the present instance, it denotes a commander of the allies. The praefecti among the allies were of the same rank with the tribuni among the Roman forces. The officers of the allies were for the most part Romans, chosen by the consul or senate.

³ Tuba. The Romans used only wind-instruments of music in the army. The tuba was straight, like our trumpet; the lituus, or clarion, was bent a little at the end, like the augur’s staff (lituus), whence the name. The tuba was used as a signal for the foot, the lituus for the horse. Compare Lipsius, de Militia Romana, dial. 10.

⁴ Ferentarii. The light-armed troops, beside other appellations, were styled ferentarii, because they carried what they threw.

⁵ Cum infestis signis. Some editors reject cum as superfluous in this passage. The preposition, however, must be retained, since it indicates an immediate and rapid advance, along with the very standards, (cum ipsis signis.)

⁶ Pila omittunt, “they throw aside their spears.”

⁷ Veterani. Belonging to the Roman army.

⁸ Illi. Referring to the veterans of Catiline.

⁹ Interea Catilina, &c. The student will observe the animated air which the succession of infinitives imparts to this sentence, until the mind of the reader is allowed to repose itself on the finite form at its close, exsequebatur.

expeditis in prima acie versari, laborantibus succurrere, integros pro sauciis ¹arcessere, omnia providere, multum ipse pugnare, saepe hostem ferire; strenui militis, et boni imperatoris officia simul exsequebatur. Petreius, ubi videt Catilinam, ²contra ac ratus erat, magna vi tendere, ³cohoret praetoriam in medios hostis inducit; eos perturbatos atque alios alibi resistentes interficit; deinde utrinque ex lateribus adgreditur. Manlius et Faesulanus ⁴in primis pugnantes cadunt. Postquam fusas copias, seque cum paucis relicta videt Catilina, memor generis atque pristinae dignitatis, ⁵in confertissimos hostes incurrit, ibique pugnans confoditur.

LXI. SED, confecto praelio, tum vero cerneret, quanta audacia, quantaque animi vis fuisset in exercitu Catilinae. Nam fere, quem quisque ⁶pugnando locum ceperat, eum, amissa anima, corpore tegebat.

¹ Arcessere. In some editions accersere; but the latter is a mere corruption of the former, and ought never to be used.

² Contra ac ratus erat. "Contrary to what he had imagined would be the case."

³ Cohoret praetoriam. Among the Romans, the general was usually attended by a select band, called cohors Praetoria. It was first instituted by Scipio Africanus, according to Festus, but something similar was used long before that time, as appears from Livy, 2. 20. This differs essentially from the praetorian cohort in the history of the empire.

⁴ In primis. "Among the first," not, as some render it, "among the foremost." The expression must be referred to cadunt, not to pugnantes. It would have been very scanty praise to have said of them, that they fell fighting "among the foremost," or "in the foremost ranks;" for how could they, as commanders, have done otherwise? Besides, if such had been the meaning of the historian, he would have preferred to express it by inter primos.

⁵ In confertissimos, &c. "He rushes into the thickest of the enemy."

⁶ Pugnando. In other editions vivus is inserted before pugnando without any necessity.

Pauci autem, ¹quos cohors praetoria disjecerat, ²paullo diversius, sed omnes tamen ³adversis volneribus conciderant. Catilina vero longe a suis inter hostium cadavera repertus est, paullulum etiam spirans, fericiamque animi, quam habuerat vivus, in voltu retinens. Postremo, ex omni copia, neque in praelio, neque in fuga, quisquam ⁴civis ingenuus captus. ⁵Ita cuncti suae hostiumque vitae juxta pepercerant. Neque tamen exercitus populi Romani laetam aut incruentam victoriam adeptus: nam strenuissimus quisque aut occiderat in praelio, aut graviter vulneratus discesserat. Multi autem, qui de castris, visundi, aut spoliandi gratia, processerant, volventes hostilia cadavera, amicum alii, pars hospitem, aut cognatum reperiebant: fuere item, qui inimicos suos cognoscerent. Ita varie per omnem exercitum ⁶laetitia, moeror; luctus atque gaudia agitabantur.

¹ Quos. Some editions have quos medios.

² Paullo diversius. "In a somewhat more scattered manner."

³ Adversis volneribus. "With wounds in front." Volneribus, an archaism for vulneribus.

⁴ Civis ingenuus, "free citizen." Ingenuus, among the Romans, denoted a person born of parents who had always been free.

⁵ Ita. "So little."

⁶ Laetitia, moeror, &c. Laetitia properly denotes a transport of joy, or joy expressed strongly by the actions of the individual. Gaudium, on the contrary, denotes the calm and rational emotion of joy. Cicero ranks laetitia among the "perturbationes animi," or "appetitus vehementiores," (Tusc. Quaest. 4.), and observes that laetitia occasions "profusam hilaritatem," extravagant gaiety, intemperate gladness or mirth. The same writer furnishes us likewise with the following distinctions between an opposite class of words: "Aegritudini subjiciuntur angor, moeror, dolor, luctus, aerumna, afflictatio. Angor est aegritudo premens, Moeror aegritudo flebilis, Aerumna aegritudo laboriosa, Dolor aegritudo crucians, Afflictatio aegritudo cum vexatione corporis, Luctus aegritudo ex ejus, qui carus fuit, interitu." (Tusc. Quaest. 4.) The passage of Sallust, therefore, to which this note refers, may, in accordance with the above, be rendered “ Joy, grief, sorrow, and gladness prevailed,” &c.

We have now reached the close of this eventful narrative, and have traced the progress of a conspiracy which, though arrested in its earlier stages, yet proved one of those violent shocks that hastened the fall of the Roman state. It may not be amiss, before concluding, to mention a few particulars which are passed over in silence by the historian. From Dio Cassius (37. 40. and 41.) we learn, that Antonius, after the battle, sent the head of Catiline to Rome, in order to quiet all apprehension on the part of the inhabitants; and that he himself was honoured with the title of Imperator, although he had taken no active part in the fight, and although the number of slain (3000) was less than that for which this title was usually awarded (5000). A public thanksgiving was also decreed, and the garb of mourning, which the citizens had assumed when the conspiracy broke out, was again laid aside. The accomplices of Catiline, who had either not been present in the battle, or had escaped from the field, spread themselves over Italy, but were in part taken and executed. One of the number, Lucius Vettius, turned informer against the rest: but he accused so many as to excite the suspicion of the senate, who ordered him, not to commit to writing the names of those against whom he informed, but to mention them at once by word of mouth. This confused and alarmed him, and but few were subsequently accused. The names of those whom he had implicated having been concealed from the people at large, great confusion and alarm in consequence prevailed. To quiet this general feeling of insecurity, the senate resolved to publish the names in question, which was accordingly done. Some of the accused stood trial, and were condemned; others abandoned their sureties, and fled.

C. CRISPI

SALLUSTII

BELLUM JUGURTHINUM.

C. CRISPI
SALLUSTII

BELLUM JUGURTHINUM.

I. FALSO queritur de natura sua genus humanum, quod, ¹imbecilla atque aevi brevis, ²forte potius, quam virtute regatur. Nam contra, reputando, neque majus aliud, neque praestabilius invenias; magisque naturae industriam hominum, ³quam vim aut tempus deesse. Sed dux atque imperator vitae mortalium animus est: qui, ubi ad gloriam virtutis via grassatur, abunde ⁴pollens potensque et clarus est, neque fortunae eget; ⁵quippe probitatem, industriam, alias artis bonas neque dare, neque eripere potest. ⁶Sin, captus pravis cupi-

¹ Imbecilla. Agreeing with natura.

² Forte potius, &c. "It is influenced more by chance than by the exertion of intellect."

³ Quam vim aut tempus, "than ability or duration;" i. e. than additional power or an enlarged period of existence.

⁴ Pollens potensque, "powerful and vigorous." Pollens refers here to innate strength; potens to its exercise.

⁵ Quippe probitatem, &c. "since it (i. e. fortune) can neither give nor take away integrity, industry, other praise-worthy qualities." Industria, in this passage, properly implies the active exercise of our abilities.

⁶ Sin, captus pravis cupidinibus, &c. "But if, ensnared by vicious desires, it has been consigned to the destructive bondage of sloth and corporeal gratifications," &c. Cortius makes pessum a supine from the old verb petior (petio), "I am forced downwards," "I am trampled upon." Scheller regards it as a noun, equivalent in meaning to fundum, "the bottom:" thus pessum ire, "to go to dinibus, ad inertiam et voluptatis corporis pessum datus est; ¹ perniciosa lubidine paullisper usus, ubi per secordiam vires, tempus, ingenium defluxere, naturae infirmitas accusatur: ² suam quisque culpam auctores ad negotia transferunt. ³ Quod si hominibus bonarum rerum tanta cura esset, quanto studio aliena ac nihil profutura, multumque etiam periculosa, petunt; neque regerentur magis, quam regerent casus, et eo magnitudinis procederent, ⁴ ubi, pro mortalibus, gloria aeterni fierent.

II. NAM, uti genus hominum compositum ex anima et corpore, ita res cunctae, studiaque omnia nostra, corporis alia, alia animi naturam sequuntur. Igitur ⁵ praecolla facies, magnae divitiae, ad hoc vis corporis, the bottom," "to be destroyed," or ruined. So in Plautus (Rud. 2. 3. 64.), "Nunc eam cum navi scilicet abivisse pessum in altum;" i. e. "to have gone to the deep bottom," "to have sunk to the bottom;" and in Tacitus (Ann. 1. 79.), "pessum ituros campos," "that the fields would be ruined." We have endeavoured, in our translation of the passage of Sallust to which this note refers, to unite these two explanations; which in fact differ very little from one another, since every supine is a verbal noun.

¹ Perniciosa lubidine, &c. The nominative absolute, instead of Ubi, postquam perniciosa lubidine paullisper usus est, per secordiam vires, &c. "When, after it has enjoyed for a season this destructive indulgence," &c.

² Suam quisque culpam, &c. "The authors of these evils transfer each to affairs the blame which is their own;" i. e. they allege, in extenuation of their mental inactivity, that the affairs to which they had directed their attention, proved too difficult to be accomplished by them.

³ Quod si hominibus, &c. "But if mankind were inspired with as great a regard for things conducive to their welfare, as is the zeal with which they seek after," &c.

⁴ Ubi. Equivalent to in quo collocati, or to our phrase "in which." — Pro mortalibus, "instead of mortals," or, "from mortals."

⁵ Praecolla facies, "personal beauty."

alia hujuscemodi omnia brevi dilabuntur ; at ¹ingenii egregia facinora, sicuti anima, immortalia sunt. ²Postremo, corporis et fortunae bonorum, ut initium, finis est : omnia orta occidunt, et aucta senescunt : animus incorruptus, ³aeternus, rector humani generis, ⁴agit

¹ Ingenii egregia facinora, “ the splendid exertions of intellect.”

² Postremo, corporis, &c. “ In fine, as there is a beginning, so is there an end, of the advantages of person and fortune.”

³ Aeternus. A slight sketch of the Platonic doctrine respecting the soul, may not prove uninteresting. The human soul, according to them, is derived from the supramundane soul, or first principle of life, and is, in this respect, sister to the soul which animates the world. Souls are not in the body as their place, nor as their receptacle, nor as their subject, nor as a part of a whole, nor as a form united to matter, but simply as the animating principle ; for it is in this respect only that we know the soul to be present with the body. The power of the soul is diffused through every part of the body ; and though it be said to reside in its chief instrument, the brain, it is incorporeal, and exists entirely every-where within the sphere of its energy. Partaking of the nature of real being, it is immutable. It is the principle of motion, moving itself, and communicating motion to bodies. The vices and infelicities of the soul are wholly derived from its union with the body. Souls, in the periodical revolutions of nature, separate themselves from their fountain, and descend into the lower regions of the world. In their passage they attract to themselves an ethereal vehicle, and at last sink into animal bodies, as into a cavern or sepulchre. But when, by the power of reminiscence, they again turn themselves to the contemplation of intelligible and divine natures, they regain their freedom. God, on account of his greatness, is not known by intelligence or sense, but by a kind of intuition superior to science, by means of which the soul can see him in his real nature, as the fountain of life, mind, and being, and the cause of good. A soul which has attained to this vision of God, will lament its union with the body, and will rejoice to leave its prison, and return to the divine nature from which it proceeded. After death, the souls of men pass into other animals, or ascend into upper regions, and are converted into beings of an higher order, according to their present degree of defilement or purification.—Enfield's History of Philosophy, vol. ii. p. 90.

⁴ Agit atque habet cuncta. “ Controls the movements of, and atque habet cuncta, neque ipse habetur. ¹Quo magis pravitas eorum admiranda est, qui, dediti corporis gaudiis, per luxum atque ignaviam aetatem agunt; ceterum ingenium, quo neque melius, neque amplius aliud in natura mortalium est, ²incultu atque secordia torpescere sinunt; cum praesertim tam multae variaeque sint ³artes animi, quibus summa claritudo paratur.

III. VERUM ⁴ex his magistratus et imperia, postremo ⁵omnis cura rerum publicarum, minime mihi hac tempestate cupiunda videntur: quoniam neque virtuti honos datur; neque illi, ⁶quibus per fraudem jus fuit, tuti, aut eo magis honesti sunt. Nam vi quidem regere patriam, aut ⁷parentes, quamquam et possis, et ⁸delicta corrugas, tamen importunum est; cum praesertim ⁹omnes rerum mutationes caedem, fugam, aliaque hostilia portendant: frustra autem niti, neque aliud ¹⁰fatigando, nisi odium, quaerere, extremae dementiae est; nisi forte quem dishonesta et perniciosa lubido tenet, potentiae paucorum decus atque libertatem suam ¹¹gratificari.

holds all things beneath its sway." Compare Ovid. Met. l. 197.
" Quum mihi, qui fulmen, qui vos habeoque regoquo." — Neque ipse habetur, "and is itself subjected by none."

¹ Quo. "On which account."

² Incultu, "through want of culture."

³ Artes animi, "mental employments."

⁴ Ex his. "Of these employments of the mind." Understand artibus animi.

⁵ Omnis cura, &c. "all charge of public affairs," or, "every office of administration."

⁶ Quibus per fraudem, &c. "who have obtained authority by unfair means;" i.e. by bribery or other unworthy and degrading practices.

⁷ Parentes. From pereo, "subjected states."

⁸ Delicta corrugas, "may rectify abuses."

⁹ Omnes rerum mutationes, "all innovations in the state."

¹⁰ Fatigando, "after all one's exertions." Understand se, which in some editions is expressed.

¹¹ Gratificari, "of sacrificing." More usual Latinity would require gratificandi.

IV. CETERUM, ex aliis negotiis ¹quae ingenio exercentur, in primis magno usui est ²memoria rerum gestarum : cuius de ³virtute quia multi dixere, praeter eundum puto ; simul, ne, ⁴per insolentiam, quis existimet, memet, ⁵studium laudando, extollere. Atque ego credo fore qui, quia decrevi procul a republica aetatem agere, tanto tamque utili labori meo nomen inertiae imponant ; ⁶certe, quibus maxima industria videtur, ⁷salutare plebem, et conviviis gratiam quaerere. Qui si reputaverint, et quibus ege ⁸temporibus magistratus adeptus sum, et quales viri idem adsequi nequi-

¹ Quae ingenio exercentur, “ which form the exercise of the mind.” Literally, “ which are exercised upon by the mind.”

² Memoria rerum gestarum, “ the recording of past events ;” i. e. historical composition.

³ Virtute, “ excellence.”

⁴ Per insolentiam, “ through any feelings of ostentatious vanity.”

⁵ Studium laudando, “ by praising my own profession ;” i. e. of an historian.

⁶ Certe. Complete the ellipsis as follows: Ii certe hoc nomen imponent (or, hoc facient) quibus, &c.

⁷ Salutare plebem, “ to court the favour of the populace.” For a long time before the election, the candidates for office endeavoured to gain the favour of the people by every popular art; by going round to their houses, by shaking hands with those whom they met, by addressing them in a friendly manner, and naming them, &c., on which account they commonly had along with them a monitor, or Nomenclator, who whispered in their ears every body’s name.

⁸ Temporibus. Sallust obtained the office of Quaestor, which entitled him to a seat in the Senate, at the age of twenty-seven, a few years after the conspiracy of Catiline, and while the state was thrown into the greatest confusion by the acts of Clodius and his followers. He was made tribune of the commons six years after; on which occasion, according to some authorities, Cato was his competitor, but according to others, when he was made praetor. To his success over Cato, the historian alludes in the words quales viri, &c. If this competition occurred for the office of praetor, he had no great reason to be proud of his success, since he obtained that magistracy entirely through the interest of Caesar.

verint; et postea quae genera hominum in senatum pervenerint; profecto existumabunt, me magis ¹merito, quam ignavia, judicium animi mutavisse, majusque commodum ex otio meo, quam ex aliorum negotiis, reipublicae venturum. Nam saepe audivi, ²Q. Maxumum, ³P. Scipionem, praeterea civitatis nostrae praeclaros viros solitos ita dicere, CUM MAJORUM ⁴IMAGINES INTUERENTUR, VEHEMENTISSUME SIBI ANIMUM AD VIRTUTEM ACCENDI. ⁵Scilicet non ceram illam, neque figuram, tantam vim in sese habere; sed, memoria rerum gestarum, eam flammat egregiis viris in pectori

¹ Merito, "on good grounds."

² Q. Maxumum. Quintus Fabius Maximus, the famous opponent of Hannibal; of whom Ennius says, "Unus qui nobis cunctando restituit rem :

Non ponebat enim rumores ante salutem."

³ P. Scipionem. The elder Africanus, who conquered Hannibal in the battle of Zama.

⁴ Imagines. Among the Romans, those whose ancestors, or who themselves, had borne any curule office, that is, had been consul, praetor, censor, or curule aedile, were called Nobiles, and had the right of making images of themselves, which were kept with great care by their posterity, and exhibited only at funerals or on solemn occasions. These images were nothing more than the busts or effigies of the individuals, down to the shoulders, made of wax and painted. They were placed in the courts of the houses, enclosed in wooden cases. One particular, relative to the mode in which they were exhibited, deserves attention. They were not carried before the deceased at funerals, as Dr Adam erroneously states, but actors were employed to personate the individual ancestors, and these busts or images formed a part of the disguise. A Roman funeral therefore must have presented a singular appearance, with a long line of ancestors stalking gravely through the streets of the capital. The authorities on this curious point are as follows: Plin. H. N. 35. 12. Plaut. Amph. 1. 1. 301. Polyb. 6. 53. Sueton. Vespas. 19. Diod. Sic. vol. ii. p. 518. ed. Wess.

⁵ Scilicet non ceram illam, &c. "We may well suppose that neither the mere wax of which they were made, nor the form it had assumed, possessed such power in themselves." Scilicet must be here crescere, neque prius sedari, quam virtus ¹ eorum famam atque gloriam adaequaverit. At contra, quis est omnium ² his moribus, quin divitiis et sumptibus, non probitate neque industria cum majoribus suis contendat? etiam homines ³ novi, qui antea per virtutem soliti erant nobilitatem antevenire, furtim et ⁴ per latrocinia potius [quam bonis artibus] ad imperia et honores nituntur; proinde quasi praetura et consulatus, atque alia omnia hujuscemodi, per se ipsa clara, magnifica sint, ac non ⁵ perinde habeantur, ut eorum qui sustinent virtus est. Verum ego ⁶ liberius altiusque processi, dum me civitatis morum piget taedetque: nunc ad incepturn ⁷ redeo.

V. BELLUM scripturus sum, quod populus Romanus

resolved into its component members (scire licet); and hence the grammatical construction of the sentence is as follows: scire licet non ceram illam, &c. habere.

¹ Eorum. "Of the former;" i. e. their ancestors.

² His moribus, "amid the manners of the day."

³ Novi. "New men." Those who were the first of their family that had raised themselves to any curule office were called among the Romans homines novi. Compare note 9. page 55. in the Conspiracy of Catiline.

⁴ Per latrocinia. We have enclosed quam bonis artibus in brackets, as this idea is sufficiently expressed by per virtutem which precedes. The expression furtim et per latrocinia may be rendered, "by private intrigue and unfair practices."

⁵ Perinde habeantur, ut, &c. Ac is more frequently used in this sense after perinde; but its occurrence at the beginning of the clause prevents its being again employed, on the principle of euphony. Ac non perinde habeantur, &c. may be rendered as follows: "and are not to be estimated according to the merit of those who fill them."

⁶ Liberius altiusque, "too freely and too far."

⁷ Redeo. Used for the simple eo, which is here to be taken in the sense of venio. According to Donatus, the particle re is sometimes redundant in composition. He cites as an instance of very frequent occurrence, renuntio for the simple nuntio.

cum Jugurtha, rege ¹Numidarum, gessit : primum, quia magnum et atrox, ²variaque Victoria fuit : dein, quia tum primum superbiae nobilitatis obviam ³itum est ; quae contentio ³divina et humana cuncta permis-cuit, eoque recordiae processit, uti ⁴studiiis civilibus bellum atque vastitas Italiae finem faceret. Sed, priusquam hujuscemodi rei initium expedio, ⁵pauca supra repetam ; ⁶quo, ad cognoscendum, omnia illustria magis, magisque in aperto sint. Bello Punico secundo, quo dux Carthaginensium Hannibal, ⁷post magnitudinem nominis Romani, Italiae opes maxime adriverat, Ma-sinissa, rex Numidarum, ⁸in amicitia receptus a P.

¹ Numidarum. Numidia, now Algiers, a country of Africa, was bounded on the north by the Mediterranean ; on the west, by the Ampsagas, now Wad-el-kibir (i. e. the Great River), which separated it from Mauretania, now Marocco and Fex ; on the south by Gætulia, now Beled-el-gerid ; and on the east by the Mulucha, now Mulviah, the boundary between Numidia and Africa Propria or Tunis.

² Variaque Victoria fuit, “and the success was various;” i. e. sometimes on the side of Jugurtha, and again on that of the Romans.

³ Divina et humana cuncta. “All things religious and civil.” Compare Florus, 5. 7. “Tum quidem domus, templa et aera, humana omnia, et divina jura violata sunt.”

⁴ Studiis civilibus, “civil dissensions.”

⁵ Pauca supra repetam, “I will take a brief review.”

⁶ Quo, ad cognoscendum, &c. “In order that all things may be clearer, and placed in a more distinct point of view, for the purpose of being thoroughly understood.” The gerund is here used in a passive sense, according to the grammarians. A few instances of the same construction occur elsewhere in the ancient writers. Compare Sancii Minerv. 3. 8. p. 454. with the note of Perizonius. In fact, however, the gerund may always be considered as active in its meaning: thus, in the present instance, ad cognoscendum may be rendered “for the knowing of them.”

⁷ Post magnitudinem nominis, &c. Equivalent to Postquam nomen Romanum magnum est factum, “Since the Roman name became illustrious.”

⁸ In amicitia. The more common reading is in amicitiam.

Scipione, cui postea Africano cognomen ex virtute fuit, multa et paeclara rei militaris facinora fecerat: ob quae, victis Carthaginiensibus, et capto¹ Syphace, cuius in Africa magnum atque late imperium valuit, populus Romanus, quascumque urbis et agros manu ceperat, ²regi dono dedit. Igitur amicitia Masinissae bona atque honesta nobis permansit: ³imperii vitaeque ejus finis idem fuit. Dein Micipsa, filius, regnum solus obtinuit, Mastanabale et Gulussa, fratribus, morbo ⁴absunitis. Is Adherbalem et Hiempusalem ex sese genuit;

Many manuscripts, however, give the lection which our text exhibits; and it would seem to recommend itself by its reference to a long continued and firm friendship, as expressed by the ablative.

¹ Syphace. Syphax was king of the Masaesyli in Africa. He married Sophonisba, the daughter of Asdrubal, and forsook the alliance of the Romans for that of the Carthaginians. Encamping his army apart from that of Asdrubal, both camps were in the night surprised and burnt by Scipio; and afterwards, in a general engagement, the united Carthaginian and Numidian armies were defeated. Syphax, upon this, hastened back to his own country, but being pursued by Lælius and Masinissa, he, together with his son, was taken prisoner, and brought back to Scipio. The conqueror carried him to Rome, where he adorned his triumph. Syphax died in prison, B. C. 201. This proper name is said to have the penult of the genitive common, (Syphacis and Syphæcis.) The short quantity, however, occurs only in Claudian (de Bello Gildon. 91.), “Compulimus dirum Syphacem, fractumque Metello.” But the true reading here is Hannibalem, as conjectured by Barth, and adopted in the best subsequent editions.

² Regi. Masinissa.

³ Imperii vitaeque, &c. The grant of the Romans ceased with the life of Masinissa. His son Micipsa reigned merely over that part of Numidia which had originally belonged to his parent. Cirta and the portion of Numidia which Syphax had possessed, were formed into a Roman province. Hence imperii, in our text, refers to the empire of Masinissa in its full extent, embracing what he had received from the Romans.

⁴ Absunitis, “being carried off.” The more usual form is absumptis.

Jugurthamque, Mastanabalis fratri filium, quem Masi-nissa, quod ortus ex concubina erat, privatum reliquerat, eodem ¹cultu, quo liberos suos, domi habuit.

VI. Qui ubi primum adolevit, pollens viribus, decora facie, sed multo maxume ingenio validus, non se ²luxu, neque inertiae corrumendum dedit; sed, uti mos gentis illius est, equitare, jaculari, cursu cum aequalibus certare: et, ³cum omnis gloria anteiret, omnibus tamen carus esse: ad hoc, pleraque tempora in venando agere, leonem atque alias feras ⁴primus, aut in primis ferire: plurimum facere, minimum ipse de se loqui. Quibus rebus Micipsa tametsi initio laetus fuerat, existumans virtutem Jugurthae regno suo gloriae fore; tamen, postquam hominem adolescentem, ⁵exacta sua aetate, parvis liberis, ⁶magis magisque cres-

¹ Cultu. Cultus here implies every thing which has relation to the rearing of youth, so that the whole clause may be rendered as follows: “he reared at home in the same way with his own children.”

² Luxu. The old dative for luxu. The following examples of the same form may be here mentioned. Anu, (Lucil. fragm. 135.) Tactu, (Plaut. Asin. 2. 2. 50.) Usu, (Lucret. 3. 984). Visu, (Lucret. 5. 102.) Compare also Burmann, ad Propert. p. 119. Some consider luxu, in the passage under consideration, as an ablative: if this be preferred, there will be a variety of construction in the same sentence, which is not unusual with our author. The best editions, however, take both luxu and inertiae (and not the latter merely) for the dative case.

³ Cum omnis, &c. “though he surpassed all in reputation.”

⁴ Primus, aut in primis ferire, “he was the first, or among the first, to strike.” So primus fecit, “he was the first to do it;” but primus erat qui fecit, “he who did it was the first.” This rule of construction, simple as it is, formed, not many years ago, a fertile ground of controversy between the Edinburgh Review and an Oxford critic, evidently to the advantage of the latter. Compare Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 68. et seqq. in notis, 3d ed.

⁵ Exacta sua aetate, &c. “his own age being far advanced, his children small.”

cere intellegit, vehementer negotio permotus, multa cum animo suo volvbat. Terrebat natura mortaliū, avida ⁶imperii, et ⁷praeceps ad explendam animi cupidinem: ⁸praeterea opportunitas suaequē et liberorum aetatis quae etiam mediocris viros spe praedae transversos agit: ad hoc, studia Numidarum in Jugurtham accensa; ex quibus, si talem virum interfecisset, ne qua seditio, aut bellum oriretur, anxius erat.

VII. His difficultatibus circumventus, ubi videt, neque per vim, neque insidiis, opprimi posse hominem tam acceptum ¹⁰popularibus; quod erat Jugurtha manu promptus et adpetens gloriae militaris, statuit eum objectare periculis, et eo modo fortunam tentare. Igitur, bello ¹¹Numantino, Micipsa, cum populo Romano equitum atque peditum auxilia mitteret, sperans, vel

⁶ Magis magisque crescere, “increased more and more in reputation,” or “rose daily in favour with the people.”

⁷ Imperii. “Power,” or “sway.”

⁸ Praeceps ad explendam, “hurried headlong to the gratification of their ruling passion.”

⁹ Praeterea opportunitas, &c. “besides, the favourable opportunity afforded by his own and the age of his children, which leads even moderate men astray from the path of duty by the hope of self-aggrandisement.”

¹⁰ Popularibus, “to his countrymen.”

¹¹ Numantino. Numantia was a town of Spain, near the source of the river Durius, now Douro, celebrated for its long resistance to the Roman power. It was not indeed defended by very regular fortifications, and yet, at the same time, was very strong both by nature and art. It was built upon a mountain, between two of the branches of the Durius, and was surrounded by very thick woods on three sides. One path alone led down into the plain, and this was defended by ditches and pallisades. The great length of time it withstood the Romans (14 years), may be easily accounted for by its difficult situation, and by the circumstance of its circuit being so large as to admit within it pastures for cattle. Compare Liv. Epit. 56. Vell. Patrc. 2. 4. 2. and 5.

¹ostentando virtutem, vel hostium ²saevitia, facile occasurum, praefecit Numidis quos in Hispaniam mittebat.
Sed ea res longe aliter, ac ratus erat, evenit. Nam Jugurtha, ut erat ³impigro atque acri ingenio, ubi natu-ram P. Scipionis, qui tum Romanis imperator, et ⁴mo-rem hostium cognovit; multo labore, multaque cura, praeterea modestissime parendo, et saepe obviam eundo periculis, in tantam claritudinem brevi pervenerat, ut nostris vehementer carus, Numantinis maxumo ter-rori esset. Ac sane, quod difficultum in primis est, et praelio strenuus erat, et bonus consilio; quorum alterum ex providentia timorem, alterum ex audacia te-meritatem ⁵adferre plerumque solet. Igitur imperator omnis fere ⁶res asperas per Jugurham agere, in amicis habere, ⁷magis magisque in dies amplecti; quippe cujus neque consilium, neque incepsum ullum frustra erat.
Huc accedebat munificentia animi, et ⁸ingenii sollertia, quis rebus sibi multos ex Romanis familiari amicitia conjunxerat.

VIII. EA tempestate in exercitu nostro fuere complures, novi atque nobiles, quibus divitiae bono honesto-toque ⁹potiores erant, factiosi, domi potentes, ¹⁰apud socios clari magis, quam honesti: qui Jugurthae ¹¹non

¹ Ostentando virtutem, “in displaying his valour.”

² Saevitia, “by the furious bravery.”

³ Impigro atque acri ingenio, “of a quick and penetrating turn of mind.”

⁴ Morem hostium, “the mode of fighting practised by the enemy.”

⁵ Adferre, “to generate.”

⁶ Res asperas, “difficult enterprises.”

⁷ Magis magisque in dies amplecti, “he became more and more attached to him every day.” — Frustra erat, “failed.”

⁸ Ingenii sollertia, “a shrewdness of intellect.”

⁹ Potiores, “possessed of more charms.”

¹⁰ Apud socios, &c. “men rather of note among our allies than really possessed of integrity.”

¹¹ Non mediocrem animum, “the ambitious spirit.”

mediocrem animum pollicitando accendebant, si M
ICIPSA REX OCCIDISET, FORE, UTI SOLUS IMPERII
NUMIDIAE POTIRETUR: IN IPSO MAXUMAM VIRTU
TEM, ROMAE OMNIA VENALIA ESSE. Sed postquam, Numantia deleta, P. Scipio dimittere auxilia, ipse ¹re vorti domum decrevit; donatum atque laudatum mag nifice pro concione Jugurtham in ²praetorium abduxit, ibique secreto monuit, "uti potius ³publice, quam pri vatim amicitiam populi R. coleret; neu ⁴quibus largiri insuesceret; periculose a paucis emi, quod multorum esset: si permanere vellet in suis ⁵artibus, ⁶ultra illi et gloriam, et regnum venturum; sin ⁷properantius perge ret, suamet ipsum pecunia praecipitem casurum."

IX. Sic locutus, cum litteris, quas Micipsa redde ret, dimisit: earum sententia haec erat. "Jugurtha tui bello Numantino longe maxuma virtus fuit; quam rem tibi certo scio gaudio esse: nobis ob merita carus est; uti idem senatui sit et populo Romano, summa

¹ Revorti. An archaism for reverti. The change from o to e, in words of this kind, was introduced, according to Quintilian, by (the younger) Scipio. "Quid dicam vortices et vorsus, ceteraque ad eund modum, quae primo Scipio Africanus in E literam secundam vertisse dicitur?" Quintil. 1. 7. 25. ed. Spald. Compare Schneider L. G. vol. i. p. 12.

² Praetorium, "the general's tent." The name of Praetor (is qui praeit jure et exercitu, Varro.) was anciently common to all the magistrates. Thus the dictator is called Praetor maximus (Liv. 7.
3.) The term praetorium, in its widest acceptation, includes the space around the tent itself, for the retinue and body-guard of the general.

³ Publice, quam privatim, "as a nation, rather than that of indivi duals."

⁴ Quibus. Used for aliquibus.

⁵ Artibus. Ars is here equivalent to virtus, and in suis artibus may be rendered, "in the exercise of those abilities which he pos sessed."

⁶ Ulro, "without any exertions on his part."

⁷ Properantius, "too hastily."

ope nitemur. Tibi quidem ¹pro nostra amicitia gratulator: en habes virum dignum te, atque avo suo Masiissa." ²Igitur rex, ubi, quae fama acceperat, ex literis imperatoris ita esse cognovit, ³cum virtute viri, tum gratia permotus, flexit animum suum, et Jugurtham beneficiis vincere adgressus est; statimque adoptavit, et testamento pariter cum filiis heredem instituit. Sed ipse paucos post annos, morbo atque aetate confectus, cum sibi finem vitae adesse intellegeret, coram amicis et cognatis, item Adherbale et Hiempsale filiis, dicitur hujuscemodi verba ⁴cum Jugurtha habuisse.

X. "PARVUM ego, Jugurtha, te, amisso patre, sine spe, sine opibus, ⁵in meum regnum accepi; existumans non minus me tibi quam ⁶liberis, si genuissem, ob bene-

¹ Pro nostra amicitia, "in consideration of our mutual friendship;" i. e. I congratulate you as a friend.

² Igitur rex, ubi, &c. "The king, therefore, when he learned from the general's letter that the things which he had heard from rumour were true." Ita esse for ita esse uti acceperat; were so as he had heard.

³ Cum virtute viri, &c. "strongly influenced both by the merit of the man and his popularity with the Romans."

⁴ Cum Jugurtha. The presence of the preposition in this passage marks the familiar nature of the address to Jugurtha, which approached in fact to a conversation.

⁵ In meum regnum, "into my kingdom;" i. e. as one of my heirs. In this assertion of Micipsa's there was evidently no truth; and Jugurtha, as appears from the beginning of the next chapter, viewed it in this light.

⁶ Liberis. All the manuscripts exhibit liberis. Ursinus, however, and Ciacconius, whom the Dauphin editor follows, reject this word as redundant, and make the clause equivalent to non minus me tibi, quam si te genuissem, &c. That this opinion is an erroneous one, must be very apparent. The meaning of the dying monarch is this: that, upon adopting Jugurtha, he expected from him the same return of natural affection as he would receive from his own children, should he ever have any. The clause, therefore, must be rendered, "thinking that I would be no less dear to you than to my own chilficia carum fore: neque ea res ¹falsum habuit. Nam, ut alia magna et egregia ²tua omittam, novissime, rediens Numantia, meque regnumque meum gloria honoravisti: tua virtute nobis Romanos ex amicis amicissimos fecisti: in Hispania nomen familiae renovatum: postremo, quod difficillum inter mortalibus, gloria invidiam vicisti. Nunc, quoniam mihi natura vitae finem facit, per hanc dextram, ³per regni fidem moneo obtestorque, uti hos, qui tibi genere propinquui, beneficio meo fratres sunt, caros habeas; neu malis alienos adjungere, quam sanguine conjunctos retinere. ⁴Non exercitus, neque thesauri praesidia regni sunt, verum dren, in case I should become the father of any." According to this declaration of Micipsa's, he adopted Jugurtha previous to having any offspring of his own. The want of truth in this assertion speaks for itself. Compare the preceding note.

¹ Falsum habuit. Understand me. Falsum habere is a circumlocution for fallere, the simple verb. Neque ea res falsum habuit, "nor was I deceived in my expectation." The essential difference between decipere and fallere appears to be this. Decipere always implies that the person deceived is misled, or imposed upon, by something positive and express in the person or thing deceiving; and fallere, that we are deceived by something negative, or indirect, in words, actions, or appearance. The former denotes that we are deceived by something which we see, or hear, or know; the other, by something which we do not know in the character of the person or thing deceiving. Hence fallere often denotes "to elude our notice," "to escape our observation;" but decipere never implies this idea. If we are deceived by the pretended virtues of the hypocrite, we say, me decepit: if by his concealed vices, me fecellit.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 437. 3d ed.

² Tua. Understand facinora, in the sense of "exploits."

³ Per regni fidem, "by the fidelity you owe my kingdom."

⁴ Non exercitus, &c. This beautiful idea is borrowed from the dying speech of Cyrus, in Xenophon, (Cyrop. 8. 7. 14.), Οὐ τὸς τὸς χρυσοῦς σκῆπτρον το τὴν βασιλίαν διασῶζον ἰστιν ἀλλὰ οἱ πολλοὶ φίλοι σκῆπτρον βασιλεῦσσιν ἀληθεύστατον καὶ ἀσφαλιστατον.—"It is not the golden sceptre which can preserve your kingdom, but faithful friends are a prince's truest and surest sceptre."—Ashley.

amici quos neque armis cogere, neque auro parare queas : ¹officio et fide pariuntur. ²Quis autem amicior, quam frater fratri ? aut quem alienum fidūm invenies, si tuis hostis fueris ? Evidem ego vobis regnum trado firmum, si boni eritis ; sin mali, imbecillum. Nam concordia parvae res crescunt, discordia maxumae ³dilabuntur. Ceterum ante hos te, Jugurtha, qui aetate et sapientia prior es, ne aliter quid eveniat, providere decet. Nam, in omni certamine, qui opulentior est, etiamsi accipit injuriam, quia plus potest, facere videtur. Vos autem, Adherbal et Hiempsal, colite, observe talem hunc virum, imitamini virtutem, et enitimini, ne ego meliores liberos ⁴sumsisse videar, quam genuisse."

XI. AD ea Jugurtha, tametsi regem ⁵ficta locutum intellegebat, et ipse longe aliter animo agitabat, tamen pro tempore benigne respondit. Micipsa paucis ⁶diebus moritur. Postquam illi, more regio, ⁷justa magnifice fecerant, ⁸reguli in unum convenere, uti inter se de cunctis negotiis disceptarent. Sed Hiempsal, qui minimus ex illis, natura ferox, etiam antea ignobilitatem Jugurthae [quia materno genere impar erat] despi-

¹ Officio et fide, " by kind offices and by the exercise of fidelity."

² Quis autem amicior. Understand debet esse. Compare Menander, as cited by Wasse ; νόμις ἀδειφοὺς τοὺς ἀληθινοὺς φίλους.

³ Dilabuntur, " fall gradually to ruin."

⁴ Sumsisse, " to have adopted." The more usual form is sumpsisse.

⁵ Ficta, " insincerely."

⁶ Diebus. Some manuscripts and editions have paucis post diebus.

⁷ Justa, " his obsequies." Understand funera. We have it expressed in Caesar (B. G. 6. 4.), " Justis funeribus confectis." Compare the corresponding Greek form, τὰ νομίζουσα.

⁸ Reguli, " the princes." Adherbal, Hiempsal, and Jugurtha. The term regulus is here employed, not so much with reference to their age, as to the division of the kingdom among them : it denotes properly " a petty monarch."

ciens, ¹dextra Adherbalem adsedit; ne medius ex tribus, quod ²apud Numidas honori ducitur, Jugurtha foret. Dein tamen, uti aetati concederet, ³fatigatus a fratre, vix in partem alteram transductus est. Ibi cum multa de administrando imperio dissererent, Jugurtha inter alias res ⁴jacit: OPORTERE QUINQUENNII CONSULTA OMNIA ET DECRETA RESCINDI; NAM PER EA TEMPORA CONFECTUM ANNIS MICIPSAM PARUM ANIMO VALUISSE. Tum IDEM, Hiempsal, PLACERE SIBI, respondit; NAM ⁵IPSUM ILLUM TRIBUS HIS PROXUMIS [ANNIS] ADOPTATIONE IN REGNUM PERVENISSE. Quod verbum in pectus Jugurthae ⁶altius, quam quisquam ratus, descendit. Itaque, ex eo tempore, ⁷ira et metu anxius moliri, parare atque ea modo animo habere, quibus Hiempsal per dolum caperetur. Quae ubi ⁸tardius procedunt, neque lenitur animus ferox, statuit quovis modo incepsum perficere.

XII. PRIMO conventu, quem ab regulis factum su-

¹ Dextra Adherbalem adsedit, “sat down on the right hand of Adherbal;” i. e. adsedit Adherbalem a dextra manu. The accusative Adherbalem is governed by ad in composition.

² Apud. Some editions give et before apud, on the ground that the middle place was the most honourable also among the Romans. This reading is sanctioned by no manuscripts, but was first conjectured by Lipsius, (2. Elect. c. 2.) The remark of Cortius, in condemnation of it, is perfectly satisfactory: “Quis talia ab historico exegerit? Si de Numidis narrat, non facile aliquis intulerit aliter propterea fuisse apud Romanos.”

³ Fatigatus a fratre, “being wearied out by the solicitations of his brother.”

⁴ Jacit, “throws out the remark.”

⁵ Ipsum illum, referring to Jugurtha.

⁶ Altius descendit, “sank deeper.”

⁷ Ira et metu anxius, &c. “distracted by anger and fear, he plotted, he contrived,” &c.

⁸ Tardius, “too slowly.” Tardius, scil. quam voluerat.

pra memoravi, ¹ propter dissensionem placuerat dividi thesauros, finisque imperii singulis constitui. Itaque tempus ad utramque rem decernitur, sed maturius ad pecuniam distribuendam. ² Reguli interea in loca propinqua thesauris alius alio concessere. Sed Hiempsal, in oppido Thirmida, forte ejus domo utebatur, qui, ³ proximus lictor Jugurthae, carus acceptusque semper fuerat; quem ille casu ministrum oblatum promissis onerat, ⁴ uti tamquam suam visens domum eat, portarum ⁵ clavis adulterinas paret; nam verae ad Hiempсалem referebantur; ceterum, ubi res postularet, se ipsum cum magna manu venturum. Numida mandata brevi confecit; atque, ut doctus erat, noctu Jugurthae milites

¹ Propter dissensionem, “to prevent disputes;” Ne esset dissensioni locus.

² Reguli interea, &c. “The princes, in the mean time, retired to places in the vicinity of the treasures, one to one quarter, another to another.” The custom of the barbarian monarchs in these parts, was to keep their treasures in fortified places and strong-holds. In the 37th chapter of this same narrative, mention is made of Suthul, “ubi regis thesauri erant;” and again, in the 92d chapter, a fortress situate on a rock is spoken of, which Marius besieges “quod ibi regis thesauri erant.” Compare Strabo, (lib. 17. ed. Tzsch. vol. vi. p. 667.) Κάψαι τὸ ἡμίσηφον λάκιον τοῦ Ἰενυγεύθα.

³ Proximus lictor, “chief lictor.” The lictors went before those whom they attended, one by one, in a regular line. The foremost was called Lictor primus, and the hindmost, who immediately preceded the magistrate, was called Lictor proximus, or postremus, and used to receive and execute the commands of the individual on whom he attended. Sallust either uses the term on this occasion in accordance with the custom of other Roman writers, who applied terms which only suited the institutions of their own country to the customs and usages of other nations, or else, what is far more probable, Jugurtha had imitated the Roman form of being attended by these public functionaries.

⁴ Uti. Some editions insert impellitque before uti; but it would appear to have originated in a gloss.

⁵ Clavis adulterinas, “false keys.”

introducit. Qui postquam in aedis irrupere, ¹diversi regem quaerere: dormientis alios, alios occursantis interficere: scrutari loca abdita; clausa effringere: ²strepitu et tumultu omnia miscere: cum Hiempsal interim reperitur, occultans sese tugurio ³mulieris ancillae, quo, initio, pavidus et ignarus loci perfugerat. Numidae caput ejus, ut jussi erant, ad Jugurtham referunt.

XIII. CETERUM fama tanti facinoris per omnem Africam brevi divulgatur: Adherbalem omnisque, qui sub imperio Micipsa fuerant, metus invadit: in duas ⁴partis discedunt: plures Adherbalem sequuntur, sed ⁵illum alterum bello meliores. Igitur Jugurtha quam maximas potest copias armat; urbis partim vi, alias voluntate imperio suo adjungit; omni Numidiae impereare parat. Adherbal, tamen etsi Roman legatos miserat, qui senatum docerent de caede fratris et fortunis suis; tamen, fretus multitudine militum, parabat armis contendere. Sed, ubi res ad certamen venit, victus ex praelio profugit in ⁶provinciam, ac deinde Romanam contendit. Tum ⁷Jugurtha, patratis consiliis, in otio faci-

¹ Diversi, “in different directions.”

² Strepitu et tumultu, “with uproar and confusion.”

³ Mulieris ancillae, “of a maid-servant.” Ancilla, strictly speaking, is an adjective, and is so used by the old writers, whom Sallust here imitates; not, however, by those of a later age. Compare Festus, p. 13.

⁴ Partis. For partes. Some editions have Numidae after discedunt.

⁵ Illum alterum, “the other.” The pronoun ille here represents the definite article, which the Latin language wants.

⁶ Provinciam, “the Province;” i. e. the territory of Carthage, which the Romans, after the death of Masinissa, on whom they had bestowed it for the period of his life, formed into a province. Compare Strabo, lib. 17. ed. Tzsch. vol. vi. p. 675.

⁷ Jugurtha. In some editions, postquam omni Numidia potiebatur follows Jugurtha. Cortius condemns it in very unequivocal terms: “Turpissima glossa, quae dudum ad Gemonias trahi debuerat.”

nus suum cum animo reputans, timere populum Romanum, neque advorsus iram ejus usquam, nisi in avaritia nobilitatis et pecunia sua, spem habere. Itaque paucis diebus cum auro et argento multo Romam ¹mittit, quis praecepit, uti primum veteres amicos muneribus expleant; deinde novos adquirant; postremo, ²quemcumque possint largiundo parare, ne cunctentur. Sed, ubi Romam legati venere, et, ex pracepto regis, hospitibus, aliisque, quorum ea tempestate auctoritas pollebat, ³magna munera misere; tanta commutatio incessit, uti ex maxuma ⁴invidia in gratiam et favorem nobilitatis Jugurtha veniret; ⁵quorum pars spe, alii praemio induci, singulos ex senatu ambiundo, nitebantur, ⁶ne gravius in eum consuleretur. Igitur, legati ubi satis confidunt, die constituto, senatus utrisque datur. Tum Adherbalem hoc modo locutum accepimus.

XIV. “PATRES conscripti, Micipsa, pater meus, moriens, praecepit, uti regnum Numidiae tantummodo ⁷procuratione existumarem meum; ceterum ⁸jus et imperium penes vos esse: simul eniter domi militiaeque quam maxumo usui esse populo Romano: vos

¹ Mittit. Understand legatos. In some editions it is expressed.

² Quemcumque. Some editions, and among them that of Cortius, have quaecunque. The reading in our text is preferable.

³ Magna munera. In some editions munera is omitted.

⁴ Invidia, “odium.” — In gratiam et favorem nobilitatis, “into the good graces and favour of the nobility.”

⁵ Quorum, referring to nobilium understood; a collective noun, nobilitas, preceding.

⁶ Ne gravius in eum consuleretur, “that too severe measures should not be taken against him.”

⁷ Procuratione, “in the administration of it.” Most editions have regni procurationem, which is the reading of nearly all the manuscripts. The lecture which we have adopted is a conjectural emendation of Cortius.

⁸ Jus et imperium, “the highest civil and military authority.”

mihi ¹cognatorum, vos in adfinium locum dueerem: si ea fecisset, in vestra amicitia exercitum, divitias, munimenta regni ²habere. Quae cum [praecepta parentis mei] agitarem, Jugurtha, homo omnium quos terra sustinet, sceleratissimus, contemto imperio vestro, Massinissae me nepotem, ³et jam ab stirpe socium et amicum ⁴populo Romano, regno fortunisque omnibus expulit. Atque ego, Patres conscripti, quoniam eo miseriарum venturus eram, vellem, potius ob mea, quam ob majorum beneficia posse auxilium petere; ⁵ac maxime deberi mihi a populo Romano, quibus non ¹ Cognatorum, “of kindred.”—Adfinium, “of relatives.” Hill lays down the following distinction between agnati and affines, which does not seem, however, to be always strictly observed, though its leading features are undoubtedly correct. “Cognatus agrees with agnatus in denoting relation by blood, but differs from it in implying that the connexion is traced by the female, not by the male line: ‘Cognati sunt qui per foeminas conjunguntur, quasi simul nati, vel commune nascendi initium habentes.’ (Inst. de legiū. agnat. tut. § 1.) Affinis differs from both agnatus and cognatus, in denoting relation by marriage, and in having no reference to the line, whether male or female, in which the connexion is traced. A relation of this kind was said by the Greeks to be διαγένεσις. ‘Affines sunt viri et uxoris cognati, dicti ab eo, quod duae cognitiones, quae diversae inter se sunt, per nuptias copulantur, et altera ad alterius cognitionis finem accedit; ut cognati uxoris sunt affines viri, ac viri cognati uxoris affines, quorum nomina fere haec sunt, Socer, Socrus; Gener, Nurus; Noverca, Vitricus; Privignus, Privigna; et alii ulteriores.’ (Modestin. de grad. et affin. 38—10. 4.)—Hill’s Synonymes, p. 61. 4to ed.

² Habere. Some editions read habiteturum. Habere, however, is here used for habiteturum esse, and must not be altered. The best writers sometimes use the present for the future when they refer to what will certainly take place.

³ Et jam. In some editions utique.

⁴ Populo Romano. Some editions have Populi Romani.

⁵ Ac maxime, “and above all.” After deberi understand beneficia, which in some editions is expressed.

egerem; ¹secundum ea, si desideranda erant, uti debitis uterer. Sed, quoniam parum tuta per se ipsa probitas, ²neque mihi in manu fuit, Jugurtha qualis foret; ad vos configui, Patres conscripti, quibus, quod miserrimum, cogor prius oneri, quam usui esse. Ceteri reges, aut bello victi in amicitiam a vobis recepti, aut in suis dubiis rebus societatem vestram adeptiverunt: familia nostra cum populo Romano bello Carthaginensi amicitiam instituit; ³quo tempore magis fides ejus, quam fortuna petenda erat. Quorum progeniem vos, Patres conscripti, nolite pati frustra a vobis auxilium petere. Si ad impetrandum nihil caussae haberem, praeter miserandam fortunam; quod paullo ante rex, genere, fama atque copiis potens, nunc ⁴deformatus aerumnis, inops, alienas opes exspecto; ⁵tamen erat majestatis Romani populi, prohibere injuriam, neque cuiusquam regnum per scelus cresceret. Verum ego his finibus ejectus sum, quos majoribus meis popu-

¹ Secundum ea, “next to this.” Secundum ea is opposed to maxime. Some editions separate secundum and ea by a comma, and then secundum will signify, “in the second place,” and ea be joined in construction with desideranda essent.

² Neque mihi in manu fuit, &c. “nor was it in my power to effect what kind of person Jugurtha should be;” i. e. “nor was it in my power to form the character of Jugurtha.” After foret, efficere may be understood, though this is not necessary, since the clause qualis foret Jugurtha may be regarded as the subject-nominative to fuit.

³ Quo tempore, &c. This refers to the Romans, who were at that time engaged in an important and difficult war with the Carthaginians, and might be faithful, but could not, when their resources were thus pre-occupied, prove very efficient, allies. Ejus therefore will regard, not familia nostra, but populo Romano. *

⁴ Deformatus aerumnis, “abject and wretched.”

⁵ Tamen erat, &c. “still it would be for the majesty of the Roman people to prevent the commission of injustice, and not to suffer the kingdom of any potentate to increase in power by the perpetration of crime.”

Ius Romanus dedit; unde pater et avus una vobiscum expulere Syphacem et Carthaginenses. Vesta beneficia erecta sunt, Pātres conscripti: ¹vos in mea injuria despecti estis. Eheu me miserum! Huccine, Micipsa pater, beneficia evasere, uti, quem tu parem cum libēris, regnique participem fecisti, is potissimum stirpis tuae extinctor sit? ²Nunquamne ergo familia nostra quieta erit? semperne in sanguine, ferro, fuga versabimur? Dum Carthaginenses ³incolumes fuere, ⁴jure omnia saeva patiebamur: hostes ab latere, vos amici procul, spes omnis in armis erat. Postquam illa ⁵pestis ejecta, laeti pacem agitabamus; quippe quis hostis nullus, nisi forte quem jussissetis. Ecce autem ex improviso, Jugurtha, intoleranda audacia, scelere atque superbia ⁶sese ecferens, fratre meo, atque eodem propinquo

¹ Vos in mea injuria despecti estis, “you are treated with contempt in the injustice which is done me.” According to Hill (Synonymes, p. 226. 4to ed.), contemnere denotes the absolute vileness of an object, while spernere and despicere imply its relative inferiority. The two last, he observes, differ thus: Despicere always implies that the person despising thinks meanly of the person despised, as compared with himself; whereas spernere denotes, that the person, or thing, is thought meanly of in comparison with the person despising, or in comparison with some other person or thing. Crombie remarks, that spernere implies a greater degree of contempt than either of the other two verbs express, and conveys more nearly the idea of our English word “to scorn.”—Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 166. 3d ed.

² Nunquamne. In pronouncing nunquamne and semperne, the stress of the voice must be laid on the antepenultimate, syllables, (núnquamne, sémperne), ne not being an enclitic here, but only when it expresses doubt. Compare Port-Royal Latin Gr. vol. ii. p. 357.

³ Incolumes, “safe;” viz. from the Romans; i. e. powerful.

⁴ Jure. Understand necessitatis: “as a matter of necessity.”

⁵ Pestis. Referring to the Carthaginians. Some editions have ex Africa after pestis.

⁶ Sese ecferens. A circumlocution for insurgens. Ecferens, an archaism for efferens.

suo interfecto, primum regnum ejus sceleris sui praedam fecit: post, ubi me isdem dolis nequit capere, ¹nihil minus, quam vim, aut bellum exspectantem, ²in imperio vestro, sicuti videtis, ³extorrem patria, domo, inopem et coopertum miseriis effecit, ut ubivis tutius, quam in ⁴meo regno essem. Ego sic existumabam, Patres conscripti, ut praedicantem audiveram patrem meum: qui vestram ⁴amicitiam colerent, eos multum laborem suspicere; ceterum ex omnibus maxume tutos esse. ⁵Quod in familia nostra fuit, praestitit, uti in omnibus bellis vobis adessent; nos uti per otium tutsimus, in manu vestra est, Patres conscripti. Pater nos duos fratres reliquit; tertium, Jugurtham, beneficiis suis ratus nobis conjunctum fore: alter eorum necatus, ⁶alterius ipse ego manus impias vix effugi. Quid agam? quo potissimum infelix accedam? ⁷Generis praesidia omnia extincta sunt: pater, uti necesse erat, ⁸naturae concessit: fratri, ⁹quem minime decuit, propinquus, ¹ Nihil minus, quam vim, &c. “expecting nothing so little as violence,” &c.

² In imperio vestro, “in a country subjected to your authority.”

³ Extorrem patria, &c. An imitation of the Greek idiom, for “effecit uti ego, nihil minus quam vim aut bellum expectans in imperio vestro, sicuti videtis, extorris patria, domo, inops, coopertus miseriis, et ubivis tutius quam in regno meo essem.”

⁴ Amicitiam. In some editions diligenter follows amicitiam.

⁵ Quod in familia nostra fuit, &c. “what was in the power of our family, it did; that it might aid you, namely, in all your wars.” Our idiom would require the past tense of the indicative; “it aided you, namely,” &c.

⁶ Alterius. Jugurtha. Some editions have alter.

⁷ Generis praesidia omnia extincta sunt, “all the supports of our family are cut off.”

⁸ Naturae concessit, “has paid the debt of nature.” Literally, “has yielded to nature;” i. e. to the universal law of nature.

⁹ Quem minime decuit, “whom it least of all became;” i. e. who should have been the last to do it. The clause refers to propinquus, not to fratri.

per scelus vitam eripuit: adfines, amicos, propinquos ceteros, alium alia clades oppressit: ¹capti ab Jugurtha, pars in crucem acti, pars bestiis objecti; pauci, quibus relicta anima, clausi in tenebris, cum moerore et luctu, morte graviorem vitam exigunt. Si omnia, quae aut amisi, aut ex ²necessariis advorsa facta sunt, incolumia manerent, tamen, si quid ex ³improviso accidisset, vos implorarem, Patres conscripti; quibus, pro magnitudine imperii, jus et injurias omnis curae esse decet. Nunc vero exsul patria, domo, solus, et omnium ⁴honestarum rerum egens, ⁵quo accedam, aut quos adpellem? nationesne, an reges, qui omnes familiae nostrae ⁶ob vestram amicitiam infesti sunt? an quoquam adire licet, ubi non ⁷majorum meorum hostilia monumenta plurima? ⁸aut quisquam nostri misereri potest, qui aliquando vobis hostis fuit? Postremo, Masinissa nos ita instituit, Patres conscripti, ne quem coleremus, nisi

¹ Capti. Agreeing in gender with adfines, amici, &c. to which also acti and objecti refer by synesis.

² Necessariis, “friendly.” Necessaria are here opposed to adversa, and denote those acts of kindness and affection which we are necessarily led to expect from those who are connected with us by the ties of consanguinity; whence the term necessitudo is used for relationship, or any intimate connexion. Adherbal expected from Jugurtha the kindness and affection of a brother, but met only with acts of hostility.

³ Improviso. Some editions add mali.

⁴ Honestarum, “which my rank in life demands.”

⁵ Quo. Some editions have quos.

⁶ Ob vestram amicitiam, “on account of your friendship towards us;” i.e. our alliance with you.

⁷ Majorum meorum, &c. “very many a memorial of the hostilities committed by my forefathers.” He refers here to the hostilities committed by them against the neighbouring nations, in furtherance of the Roman power.

⁸ Aut, &c. “or who can feel compassion for us, who has been at any time an enemy to you?” Some editions read an for aut.

populum Romanum, ne societas, ne foedera nova acciperemus: abunde magna praesidia nobis in vestra amicitia fore: si huic imperio fortuna mutaretur, ¹una nobis occidendum esse. Virtute ac dis volentibus magni estis et opulentis: omnia ²secunda et obedientia sunt: quo facilius sociorum injurias curare licet. Tantum illud ³vereor, ne quos privata amicitia Jugurthae, parum cognita, transversos agat: quos ego audio maxima ope niti, ambire, fatigare vos singulos, ne quid de absente, incognita caussa statuatis: ⁴fingere me verba, fugam simulare, cui licuerit in regno manere. ⁵Quod utinam illum, cuius impio facinore, in has miserias projectus sum, eadem haec simulantem videam; et aliquando aut apud vos, aut apud deos immortalis rerum humanarum cura oriatur: ⁶ne, ille, qui nunc sceleribus

¹ Una nobis occidendum esse, “that we must fall along with it.”

² Secunda et obedientia sunt, “second your views, and are obedient to your sway.”

³ Vereor. After the verbs vereor, metuo, timeo, ne is used when the following word expresses a result contrary to our wish, and ut when it is agreeable to it. Thus vereor nefacias, “I am afraid lest you will do it;” but vereor ut facias, “I am afraid you will not do it.” The idiom may be explained as follows: vereor ne facias is simply, “I am afraid lest you may do it,” which implies of course that its performance would be contrary to my wishes; whereas vereor ut facias is nothing more than “I am afraid in order that you may do it;” which means of course that I wish the thing done, and am fearful lest that wish be not realized.—In this same passage quos is put for aliquos, and parum cognita may be rendered, “little seen into by those who rely upon it.”

⁴ Fingere me verba, “that I feign what I say;” i. e. that my complaints are mere fictions of my own.

⁵ Quod utinam videam, &c. “But would that I may see,” &c. The use of quod before many conjunctions, &c. merely as a copulative, appears to have arisen from the fondness of the Latin writers for the connexion by means of relatives. Compare Zumpt, L. G. Kenrick's translation, p. 404. 2d ed.

⁶ Ne, “Yes!” The more usual form is nae, from the Greek ναι.

suis ferox atque praeclarus est, omnibus malis excruciatu*s*, impietatis in parentem nostrum, fratris mei necis, mearumque miseriarum gravis poenas reddet. Jam jam, frater, animo meo carissime, quamquam immaturo, et unde minime decuit, vita erecta est; tamen laetandum magis, quam dolendum puto casum tuum; ¹non enim regnum, sed fugam, exilium, egestatem, et omnis has, quae me premunt, aerumnas cum anima simul amisisti. At ego infelix, in tanta mala praecipitatus ²ex patrio regno, rerum humanarum spectaculum praebeo, incertus quid agam; tuasne injurias persequar, ipse auxiliu egens, ³an regno consulam, ⁴cujus vitae necisque potestas ex opibus alienis pendet. Utinam ⁵emori fortunis meis honestus exitus esset, ⁶neu jure contemtu*s* viderer, si, defessus malis, injuria*e* concessissem. Nunc ⁷neque — Qui nunc sceleribus suis ferox atque praeclarus est, “ who is now imboldened by, and glories in, his crimes.”

¹ Non enim, &c. “ for you have not, together with life, parted with a kingdom merely, but with flight, with exile, with poverty, and with all those sufferings which press heavy upon me.” After regnum understand tantum or tantummodo. So πένος is often to be supplied in Greek after the particle μὲν.

² Ex patrio regno, “ from the throne of my fathers.” Some editions insert pulsus before ex.

³ An regno consulam, “ or consult for the welfare of my kingdom;” i. e. by making peace with the usurper, save my subjects from the horrors of war.

⁴ Cujus vitae necisque, &c. “ whose own life and death depend entirely upon the aid which I am soliciting from others.”

⁵ Emori, “ a speedy death.”

⁶ *Neu jure contemtu*s, &c. “ and that I might not appear a just object of contempt,” &c. Cortius reads *neu vivere contemtu*s* vide*r*er*, which he makes equivalent to *aut tamen non contentu*s* viverem*, “ or that I might not live an object of contempt.” It is, however, an inferior lection in our opinion.

⁷ Neque vivere lubet, “ life neither possesses any charms.” Some editions read neque quoniam, and complete the sentence at the close of the speech.

vivere lubet, neque mori licet sine dedecore. Patres conscripti, per vos, per ¹liberos atque parentes, per majestatem populi R. subvenite misero mihi; ite obviam injuriae; nolite pati regnum Numidiae, quod vestrum est, per scelus et sanguinem familiae nostrae tabescere."

XV. POSTQUAM rex finem loquendi fecit, legati Jugurthae largitione magis, quam caussa freti, paucis respondent: "Hiempalem ob saevitiam suam ab Numidis interfectum: Adherbalem ultro bellum inferentem, postquam superatus sit, queri, quod injuriam facere nequivisset: Jugurtham ab senatu petere, ne alium putarent, ac Numantiae cognitus esset, neu verba inimici ante facta sua ponerent." Deinde utriusque curia egrediuntur. Senatus statim consulitur: fautores legatorum, praeterea magna pars, gratia ²depravati, Adherbalis dicta contemnere, Jugurthae virtutem extollere laudibus; ³gratia, voce, denique omnibus modis pro alieno scelere et flagitio, sua quasi pro gloria, nitebantur. At contra pauci, quibus bonum et aequum divitiis ⁴carius, ⁵subveniendum Adherbali, et Hiempalis mortem severe vindicandam censebant: sed ex omnibus maxume ⁶Aemilius Scaurus, homo

¹ Liberos. We have inserted per before liberos, as producing a more forcible reading than that adopted by Cortius, viz. per vos, liberos, atque parentes.

² Depravati, "corrupted." Depravati refers through pars to senatores, which senatus implies.

³ Gratia, voce, "by private influence, by openly opposing the measure."

⁴ Carius. Agreeing with aequum, the nearer noun.

⁵ Subveniendum. Dumesnil makes the following distinction between subvenire and succurrere. The former denotes "to go to the aid of;" the latter, "to run or fly to the assistance of another." Thus, "destituti, debilioribus, lapsuris subvenire, humanitas est; deprehensi et periclitantibus celerando succurrimus."

⁶ Aemilius Scaurus. The house of the Scauri gave many distinnobilis, impiger, factiosus, avidus potentiae, honoris, dicitiarum; ceterum vitia sua callide occultans. Is postquam videt regis largitionem ¹famosam impudentemque, veritus, quod in tali re solet, ne ²polluta licentia invidiam accenderet, animum a consueta lubidine continuit.

guished men to the Roman republic. Among them, the most eminent were M. Aemilius Scaurus, princeps senatus, a nobleman of great ability, and his son M. Scaurus. The former triumphed over the Carni, and made the road from Pisae and Luna to Dertona, which lies north of Genua. (Οὕτος δὲ ὁ Σκαῦρος ἡστὸν δὲ καὶ τὴν Αἰγαίαν ἐδὼν στρεψάσας, τὴν διὰ Πισαῖν καὶ Λούναν μέχει Σαββεάτων, χάρτεύθεν διὰ Δίερθρους. Strab. 5. ed. Tzsch. vol. ii. p. 117.) He would have ranked in history with the very first characters of the Roman state, had not his splendid talents been tarnished with avarice and other degrading passions. Pliny agrees with Sallust in giving the unfavourable side of the picture, observing of him (36. 15.), “Marianis sodalitiis rapinarum provincialium sinus fuit.” On the other hand, Cicero highly extols his virtues, abilities and achievements. (De Off. 1. 22. et 30. Ep. ad Lentul. 1. 9. Brut. 29. Orat. pro Murena, 7. ; pro Fonteio, 7.) It is of this same individual that Valerius Maximus (3. 7. 8.) relates the well-known anecdote, so illustrative of the high estimation in which he was held by the people. Being accused of having received a bribe from a foreign prince, he concluded a very brief defence with the following words: “Varius Sucronensis Aemilius Scaurum, regia mercede corruptum, imperium populi Romani perdidisse ait: Aemilius Scaurus huic se affinem esse culpae negat. Ut creditis?” The writer adds: “Cujus dicti admiratione populus commotus, Varium ab illa dementissima actions pertinaci clamore depulit.” It is more than probable, therefore, that Sallust endeavours to depreciate Scaurus, because the latter was a member, and a strong advocate for the power, of the nobility; while Cicero, on the other hand, strives for this same reason to exalt his character. The truth undoubtedly lies between either extreme. The son, M. Scaurus, was celebrated for the splendour of his aedileship.

¹ Famosam impudentemque, “barefaced and shameless.”

² Polluta licentia, “this gross corruption.” — Invidiam, “popular odium.”

XVI. VICTI tamen in senatu pars illa, ¹qui vero preium aut gratiam anteferebant. Decretum fit, UTI DECEM LEGATI REGNUM, QUOD MICIPSA OBTINUE-RAT, INTER JUGURTHAM ET ADHERBALEM DIVIDE-RENT: cuius legationis princeps fuit L. Opimius, homo clarus et tum in senatu potens; quia consul, ²C. Grac-

¹ Qui. Referring to senatorum understood, or more correctly, perhaps, by synesis, to pars as a collective noun.

² C. Gracchus. Tiberius Gracchus, tribune of the commons, A.U.C. 620, had a law passed, called an Agrarian law, which prohibited any person from possessing more than 350 acres of public land, and ordered the surplus to be distributed among the poorer class of citizens. This law produced much dissension and confusion, was never executed, and cost the proposer his life. C. Gracchus, supported by his colleague, M. Fulvius Flaccus, pursued the footsteps of his brother Tiberius. Both of them suffered a violent death. The opinion which has, until of late years, universally prevailed, that the Agrarian laws had for their object to enforce an equality of estates, and to prevent an individual from owning more than 350 acres of any kind of land, is now completely exploded. We are indebted for a more correct view of the subject to the learning and ingenuity of Niebuhr, who has laid down the true doctrine in his Roman history. These laws concerned not landed estates, but public lands, commons, domains. They limited not the quantity of land which the Roman citizen had a right to own and to cultivate, but the portion of the public lands which he had a right to take on lease from the state. The Roman patrician was as free to buy of any one who would sell, as the English or American citizen; but the arrogance of the nobles, and the jealousy of the tribunes, led to a series of laws limiting the quantity of the public domains which any one might occupy or lease, to about 350 acres. Compare North American Review, New Series, No. 39. Quarterly Review, No. 63. "As long," observes Niebuhr, "as the Roman nation of Quirites were subject to a king, and consisted of the three original tribes, it was natural that a share of the conquests should be set apart for the prince; the remainder was allotted as common property to the knights or patricians, who leased it to their clients in small tenements, and by those leases multiplied their number. But when several thousand strangers were adopted into the rights of citizenship, and the plebeian order had formed itself; when the plebeians, either exclu-cho et M. Fulvio Flacco interfectis, acerrume¹ victoriam nobilitatis in plebem exercuerat. Eum Jugurtha tametsi Romae in amicis habuerat, tamen² adcuratissime recepit; dando et pollicitando perfecit, uti³ fama, fide, sively or with few exceptions, composed the infantry of the legions also; they then possessed an uncontested right to the enjoyment of lands purchased by their blood. Their great numerical superiority would have limited the original gentes, the patricians, to a very small allotment; and therefore the latter maintained an exclusive title to those lands. Both classes seem to have entered into an arrangement, that the patricians should continue to enjoy the usufruct of the domains, but the plebeians be compensated by the assignment of small lots, in full and absolute proprietorship. Hence the latter, towards the middle of the fourth century of Rome, were almost exclusively proprietors of all the lands assigned or sold by the state; while the patricians alone were in possession of the domains. Thus plebeianism incapacitated from enjoying the latter in simple possession."—Niebuhr's Roman History, vol. i. p. 468. 1st ed. Walter's transl.

¹ Victoriam. The number of the commons put to death on this occasion was, according to Plutarch, not less than three thousand. Thus, in speaking of Opimius, he observes: Οὗτος μέντος πρῶτος ἔσονται δικτάτωρος ἐν ὑπατίᾳ χειρόμενος, καὶ κατασχίνας ἀνεργίους ἐπὶ τρισχιλίοις πολίταις Γάιος Γεάνχον καὶ Φοβλέον Φλάκκον ἀν δὲ μὲν ἡν̄ ὑπατίος καὶ Θρηαμβεῖος, ὁ δὲ τῆς καθ' αὐτὸν ἡλικίας ἀρετῆς καὶ δόξης πεποντευκάς.—Plut. Vit. C. Gracch. c. 18. ed. Hutton. vol. v. p. 249.

² Adcuratissime, "with the most studied respect."

³ Fama, fide, &c. A variety of opinion exists with respect to this passage. By some, fama and fide are regarded as old forms for the dative, while others view them as ablatives used for datives, by an imitation of early Latinity. We are inclined to adopt this latter opinion, in favour of which the following examples of a similar imitation may be cited from Cicero and Tacitus. "Cum magna pars in iis civitatibus foederis sui libertatem civitate anteferrent." (Cic. pro Balb. 8.) "Tranquillitates majore impedimento fuerunt quam custodiae." (Cic. ep. ad Att. 10. ult.) "Is finis fuit ulciscenda Germanici morte." (Tacit. Ann. 3. 19.) With these may be compared the form of inscription cited by Ernesti, (ad Tacit. I. c.) "Triumviri auro, argento, aere, flando, feriundo:" and a passage of Vopiscus (Numerian: 14.), "Curiosum non puto, neque satis vulgare fabellam de Diocletiano Augusto ponere hoc convenientem loco."

postremo omnibus suis rebus commodum regis anteferret. Reliquos legatos eadem via adgressus, plerosque capit; paucis carior fides, quam pecunia fuit. In divisione, quae pars Numidiae¹ Mauretaniam adtingit, agro,

Should the student, however, find himself disposed, notwithstanding these authorities, to favour the opinion which makes fama and fide, in the passage under consideration, old forms of the dative, he may find in what follows some plausible arguments for such a supposition. Fama may be shortened from the old fama; and fide from the longer and more usual form fidei. It has been asserted, it is true, that the termination —aī for the dative singular of the first declension, is rarely or rather never met with. This remark is based in a great measure, we believe, on the authority of Nigidius Figulus, as cited by Aulus Gellius (13. 25.), by which the termination —aī is rejected from the dative, and confined to the genitive singular. In opposition to this, we may produce the express language of Quintilian (1. 7. 16.), “ A syllabam, cuius secundam nunc E literam ponimus, varie per A et I efferebant, quidam semper ut Graeci: quidam singulariter tantum, cum in dativum vel genitivum casum incidissent; &c. With this may be compared the note of Spalding, (ad Quint. l. c.) in which it is shewn that Velius Longus (p. 2222. ed. Putsch.) and Marius Victorinus (p. 2460.) acknowledge, in this respect, no difference between the genitive and dative. We have, it is true, no forms of the dative in —aī occurring in our present editions of the classics; but this we owe to the ignorance of copyists, and, it may be added, the timidity of editors. Planck, however, has introduced this form of the dative into the Medea of Eunius, (terraī, p. 80.) In ancient inscriptions nothing is of more frequent occurrence. Compare Gruter, 2. 12. and Index, p. 84. This of itself would furnish a strong argument in favour of such an ending for the dative singular. With regard to fide, the case is much clearer. The dative singular of the fifth declension, which commonly has the long form in eī, takes not unfrequently the shorter one in e; and even the genitive singular sometimes does the same. Compare Priscian, vol. i. p. 354. ed. Krehl. and Sruive, ueber die Leteinsche Declination und Conjugation, p. 8. and 38.

¹ Mauretaniam. Mauretania, now Fez and Marocco, was bounded on the north by the Straits of Gibraltar and the Mediterranean; on the east by Numidia; on the south by Gaetulia; and on the west by the Atlantic. In the time of Bocchus, the ally and betrayer viris opulentior, Jugurthae traditur : illam alteram specie, quam usu, potiorem, quae portuosior et aedificiis magis exornata erat, Adherbal possedit.

XVII. RES postulare videtur Africæ situm paucis exponere, et eas gentis, quibuscum nobis bellum aut amicitia fuit, adtingere. Sed quae loca et nationes ob calorem, aut asperitatem, item solitudines, ¹minus frequentata sunt, ²de is haud facile compertum narravemus : cetera quam paucissimum absolvam. In divisione orbis terræ plerique ³in partem tertiam Africam posuerunt : ⁴pauci tantummodo Asiam et Europam esse ; sed Africam in Europa. Ea finis habet, ab occidente ⁵freof Jugurtha, it was bounded by the river Mulucha or Melochath, now Mulvia, and corresponded nearly to the present kingdom of Fez; but, in the reign of the emperor Claudius, the western part of Numidia, which had been given to Bocchus as a reward for his treachery, was added to this province, under the name of Mauretania Caesariensis; the ancient kingdom of Mauretania being called Mauretania Tingitana, from the principal city Tingis, now Old Tangier, on the west of the Straits.

¹ Minus frequentata sunt, “ are less inhabited.” Compare Suetonius, Aug. 46. “ Italiā duodetriginta coloniarum numero deductarum ab se frequentavit.”

² De is haud facile, &c. “ respecting these I cannot easily speak with any degree of certainty.”

³ In partem tertium, &c. “ have reckoned Africa as a third part.” Some editions have in parte tertia; but the reading in the text may be easily defended, either on the ground of its being an imitation of earlier Latinity; (compare Zumpt, L. G. p. 268. Kenrick’s transl. 2d ed.); or, what is far preferable, on account of motion being virtually implied by the clause. Thus, the passage may be literally rendered, “ have set down Africa for a third part.”

⁴ Pauci tantummodo, &c. Understand voluerunt. Varro is one of those who make but two divisions of the ancient world. His words are as follows : “ Ut omnis natura in coelum et terram divisa est, sic coelum in regiones, terra in Asiam et Europam.” — Varro de L. L. 4.

⁵ Fretum nostri maris et oceani, “ the strait connecting our sea with the ocean.” By fretum is meant the Fretum Gaditanum or Herculeum, “ the Straits of Gibraltar.” Calpe (Gibraltar) and Abila tum nostri maris et oceani; ab ortu solis, ¹declivem latitudinem, quem locum Catabathmon incolae adpellant. ²Mare saevum, importuosum: ager frugum fertilis, bonus pecori, arbori infecundus: ³coelo, terra, penuria aquarum. Genus hominum salubri corpore, velox, patiens laborum: plerosque senectus dissolvit, nisi qui ferro, aut ⁴bestiis interiere: nam morbus haud saepe quemquam superat. Ad hoc, ⁵malefici generis (Ceuta) were regarded by the ancients as the limits of the Mediterranean and Atlantic in this quarter. Hence the cape which lies to the west, (Ampelusia sive Cotes promontorium, now Cape Spartel), was known even to Herodotus as the limit of Libya (Africa) to the west. By the Carthaginians it was considered as lying within the control of the deity who ruled over the ocean; and to this god, therefore, Hanno erected an altar in its vicinity, in order to propitiate his favour for the intended periplus. Compare Hanno's voyage, as given by Gosselin, and also Ritter's Erdkunde, oder allgem. vergleich. Geog. p. 889.

¹ Declivem latitudinem, “a wide sloping valley.” The term Catabathmos is Greek (Καταβάθμος), and signifies “a descent.” The word is here applied to a tract of land sloping towards Egypt, and remarkable, in Sallust and some other ancient authors, as forming the separation between Asia and Africa. This place is also taken for a boundary of Marmarica, ascribing to Cyrenaica what immediately succeeds, according to the extent which the princes who reigned at Cyrene might have given to their dominion. Compare Pliny (H. N. 5. 5.), “Finis Cyrenaicus Catabathmus oppidum et vallis repente convexa;” and Pomponius Mela (1. 8.), “Catabathmus, vallis devixa in Aegyptum, finit Africam.” The Arabians call it at the present day Akabet-osselom. This Catabathmus is generally denominated Magnus (Μύας), to distinguish it from another Catabathmus, nearer Egypt, and south-east of Paraetonium, called Parvus (Μικρός).)

² Mare saevum, importuosum. “The adjacent sea is boisterous, unprovided with harbours.”

³ Coelo, terra, &c. “from the skies, from the earth, a scarcity of water;” i. e. rain seldom falls, and the rivers and springs are few in number.

⁴ Bestiis. Some editions have a bestiis.

⁵ Malefici generis, “of a hurtful kind.”

plurima animalia. Sed qui mortales initio Africam habuerint, quique postea accesserint, aut quomodo inter se permixti sint; ¹quamquam ab ea fama, quae plerosque obtinet, diversum est; tamen, uti ex libris Punicis, qui regis Hiempsalis dicebantur, interpretatum nobis est, utique rem sese habere cultores ejus terrae putant, quam paucissumis dicam. Ceterum fides ejus rei penes auctores erit.

XVIII. AFRICAM initio habuere ²Gaetuli et ³Li-

¹ Quamquam ab ea fama, &c. “ although it is different from that opinion which prevails among most; still, as it has been explained to us out of the Punic volumes, which were said to have belonged to King Hiempsal, and as the inhabitants of that land deem the fact to be, I will relate in as brief a manner as possible. The truth of the narrative, however, shall rest with the authors of it.” The authors of the Universal History suppose that these books, preserved in the archives of king Hiempsal previous to his death, were Phoenician and Punic volumes, carried off from Carthage by Scipio after its destruction, and presented by him to Micipsa; and they give a curious account of such works, of which some memory still subsists, and which they conjecture to have formed a part of the royal collection of Numidia. (Compare Dunlop's Roman Literature, vol. ii. p. 155. Lond. ed.) Whatever these books may have been, however, it does not appear to us that the information derived from them by Sallust was of the most accurate character, although it was far from being without value. The part most liable to objection is that which relates to the army of Hercules, and its dispersion after his death. Hercules, in the mythology of the ancient nations, was only a type of the sun, and his twelve labours refer to the twelve signs of the zodiac. All the accounts of Hercules as the leader of armies appear to be perfectly fabulous.

² Gaetuli. Gaetulia was an extensive country of Africa, lying to the south of Mauretania and Numidia. It is thought to correspond in some degree with the modern Beledelgerid. Isidorus (9.) gives a curious account of the origin of the Gactuli. “ Gaetuli Getae dicuntur suis, qui ingenti agmine a locis suis navibus concidentes loca Syrtium in Libya occupaverunt: et, quia ex Getis venerant, derivato nomine Gaetuli cognominati sunt.” This statement is very properly refuted by Des Brosses; but he himself assigns an byes, asperi, inculti; quis cibūs erat caro ferina atque humi pabulum, uti pecoribus. ⁴Hi neque moribus, neque lege, neque imperio cujusquam regebantur: vagi palantes, ⁵qua nox coegerat, sedes habebant. Sed, postquam in Hispania ⁶Hercules, sicuti Afri putant, interit, exercitus ejus, compositus ex variis gentibus, amissō duce, ac passim multis, sibi ⁷quique, imperium potentibus, brevi dilabitur. Ex eo numero ⁸Medi, ⁹Persae et ¹⁰Armenii, navibus in Africam transvecti, proxetymology just as uncertain, namely, from the Phoenician term geth, "a flock," on the supposition that the Gaetuli were a shepherd-race.

³ Libyes. The Greek writers commonly mean by the Libyans the natives of Africa in general; a custom which the Roman poets frequently imitate. Strictly speaking, however, Libya was comprised in what succeeded to Aegypt on the west, as far as the greater Syrtis. It corresponds in some degree to Barca, part of Tripoli, and the desert of Zahara.

⁴ Hi neque moribus, &c. "These were neither governed by customs, nor by laws, nor by the authority of any individual."

⁵ Qua. Some editions have quis, referring to sedes.

⁶ Hercules. Compare note 1. page 187. near the close.

⁷ Quique. The ablative; the same with quoque. Qui is in fact the true ablative of quis, just as miti is from mitis: and the true nominative plural of quis is the obsolete ques, whence quibus is properly deduced. Quo is the regular ablative of qui; and queis the regular form of the dative and ablative from the nominative plural qui, as domini from dominis. These forms, however, became subsequently all intermingled.—Some editions of Sallust have quisque in place of quique in the passage to which this note refers.

⁸ Medi. Media was bounded on the west by Assyria; on the south by Susiana and Persis; on the east by Aria; and on the north by Parthiene and Hyrcania. It is now called Irak-Ajami or Persian Irak, to distinguish it from Irak-Arabi or Babylonian Irak.

⁹ Persae. Persia was bounded on the south by the Persian Gulf; on the west by the Tigris and Babylonia; on the north by Media and Assyria; and on the east by Carmania. It is called in Scripture Paras, and preserves that name in its modern appellation of Fars.

¹⁰ Armenii. Armenia was divided into Major and Minor. Ar-umos nostro mari locos occupavere. Sed Persae ¹ intra oceanum magis: iique alveos navium inversos pro tuguriis habuere, quia neque materia in agris, neque ab His-panis emundi, aut mutandi copia erat: mare magnum et ignara lingua commercia prohibebant. Hi paulla-tim per connubia Gaetulos ² miscuere: et, quia saepe ³ tentantes agros, alia, deinde alia loca petiverant, semet ipsi ⁴ Numidas adpellavere. Ceterum adhuc aedificia Numidarum agrestium, quae mapalia illi vocant, ob-longa, incurvis lateribus tecta quasi navium carinae sunt. Medis autem et Armenis accessere Libyes (nam hi proprius mare Africum agitabant; Gaetuli ⁵ sub sole menia Minor was originally a part of Cappadocia, bounded on the east by the Euphrates, which separated it from Armenia Major. This latter country, the true Armenia, was bounded on the south by Mesopotamia and Assyria; on the west by the Euphrates, and a ridge of Anti-Taurus, separating it from Pontus; on the north by Colchis and Iberia; and on the east by the barbarous nations north of Media.

¹ Intra oceanum magis. “More upon the ocean;” i. e. on the coast of Africa, without the Straits of Gibraltar, where the land bending outward, the Atlantic seems to embrace and enfold the country in its arms. Hence the literal meaning of the text is “more within the ocean.” Burnouf however maintains, that this mode of interpretation is decidedly erroneous, and that intra oceanum means here “citra oceanum, id est, orientem versus, in locis ab oceano, seu Atlantico mari, longius remotis.” Few, we conceive, will agree with him in this opinion.

² Miscuere. Understand secum, which in some editions is expressed.

³ Tentantes agros, “in trying the pasturage.”

⁴ Numidas. Little, if any, reliance can be placed on this account. If the name really denotes a pastoral people, and be derived from vóun, pasture, as some imagine, it must have been given them by the Greeks, among whom the term vópáðss was applied to pastoral nations in general. Le Clerc (ad Genes. 10. 6.) derives the term Numidae from the Phoenician Nemoudim, “wanderers.”

⁵ Sub sole magis, “more under the sun; i. e. nearer the equator.

magis, haud procul¹ ab ardoribus) ² hique mature oppida habuere; nam, ³ freto divisi ab Hispania, mutare res inter se instituerant. Nomen eorum paullatim Libyes corrupere, barbara lingua Mauros pro Medis adpellantes. Sed res Persarum brevi adolevit: ac postea nomine Numidae, propter multitudinem a parentibus digressi, possidere ea loca, quae proxume Carthaginem Numidia adpellatur. Dein utriusque, alteris freti, finitimos armis aut metu sub imperium cogere, nomen gloriamque sibi addidere; magis hi qui ad nostrum mare processerant: quia ⁵Libyes, quam Gaetuli, minus bellicosi: denique Africae pars ⁶inferior pleraque ab Numidis possessa est: victi omnes in gentem nomenque imperantium ⁷concessere.

XIX. POSTEA Phoenices, alii multitudinis domi minuendae gratia, pars imperii cupidine, sollicitata plebe, et aliis novarum rerum avidis, ⁸Hippomen, ⁹Hadrume-

¹ Ab ardoribus, “from the heats of the torrid zone.”

² Hique. Referring to the Medes and Armenians united with the Libyans.

³ Freti, “merely by a strait.” Understand tantum.

⁴ Ac postea nomine Numidae, &c. “and having, in consequence of an overflowing population, removed from the parent state, they subsequently, under their new name of Numidians, took possession of those regions which,” &c. With regard to the Latinity of appellatur, compare note 3. page 137. Conspiracy of Catiline.

⁵ Libyes. The meaning is, that the Numidians, when they removed to the Mediterranean, acquired glory by the conquest of the Libyans, who were less warlike than the Gaetulians.

⁶ Inferior, “nearer the sea;” i. e. the Mediterranean.

⁷ Concessere, “merged.”

⁸ Hippomen. Hippo, now Bona, was a town of Numidia, originally the capital of that country, which accounts for its being called by the Romans Hippo Regius. It was the birth-place of St Augustine.

⁹ Hadrumentum. Now Mahometta. The capital of Byzacium, a district of Africa Propria, or Tunis.

tum,¹ Leptim, aliasque urbis in ora maritima condidere: haecque brevi multum auctae, pars originibus praesidio, aliae decori fuere: nam de² Carthagine silere melius puto, quam parum dicere; quoniam alio properare tempus monet. Igitur³ ad Catabathmon, qui locus Aegyptum ab Africa dividit, ⁴ secundo mari, prima⁵ Cyrene est, colonia⁶ Thereōn, ac deinceps duae⁷ Syr-

¹ Leptim. There were two cities in Africa of the name of Leptis. The greater, called Leptis Major, now Lebida, was situate between the two Syrtes; the lesser, called Leptis Minor, now Lempia, lay between the smaller Syrtis and Carthage. The latter is here spoken of.

² Carthaginē. Compare note 5. page 23. Conspiracy of Catiline.

³ Ad Catabathmon. “Towards Catabathmos;” i. e. in the direction of that tract.

⁴ Secundo mari, “along the sea-coast.”

⁵ Cyrene. Cyrene, now Curin, was the capital of Cyrenaica, a district bounded on the west by the Syrtis Minor; on the north by the Mediterranean; on the east by Marmarica; and on the south by the deserts of Libya. The capital stood a little inland, and had Apollonia, now Marza Susa, for its port. It was founded by Battus, son of the nymph Cyrene, who led thither a Lacedaemonian colony from Thera, one of the Cyclades, B. C. 630, and the kingdom was bequeathed to the Romans by Ptolemy Apion: it was formed by them into a province with Crete. Cyrenaica was called Pentapolis, from its containing, inclusive of the capital, five cities.

⁶ Thereōn. The Greek genitive plural (Θηραιῶν) Latinized, and put here for the more common Latin form Theraeorum. The Therians were the natives of Thera, an island in the Aegean Sea, to the north of Crete. It is now called Santorin, and forms one of the cluster of islands denominated Sporades. According to Pliny, it rose from the sea in the 4th year of the 135th Olympiad (B. C. 237.), and was first called Calliste, (Κάλλιστη), from its beautiful appearance. Theras peopled it with a Grecian colony, and from him it received the name of Thera.

⁷ Syrtēs. The Syrtēs were two bays or gulfs on the coast of Africa, of which the one was called Syrtis Major, the other Syrtis Minor. The latter is now termed the Gulf of Cabes, from the ancient tes, interque eas¹ Leptis: dein² Philenōn aerae, ³ quem, Aegyptum versus, finem imperii habuere Carthaginenses: ⁴ post aliae Punicae urbes. Cetera loca usque ad Mauretaniam Numidae tenent: proxume Hispaniam Mauri sunt: ⁵ super Numidiam Gaetulos accepimus partim in tuguriis, alias incultius vagos agitare;

city of Tacape, which stood at the head of it. It is about 45 geographical miles in breadth, and runs up into the continent about 75 miles. It is opposite to the islands of Sicily and Malta, and was reckoned the more dangerous of the two. This gulf is still an object of apprehension to mariners, in consequence of the variations and uncertainties of the tides on a flat and shelvy coast. The Syrtis Major is about 180 geographical miles between the two capes, and penetrates 100 miles into the land. The natives call it Syrte-al-Kibber, i. e. the Great Syrtis, and sailors, Sydra or Seedra. The name Syrtis is generally derived from the Greek σύρειν, "to drag," in allusion to the agitation of the sand by the force of the tides. (Compare Sallust, Jugurtha. c. 78.) It is more than probable, however, that the appellation is to be deduced from the term Sert, which still exists in Arabic as the name for a desert tract or region; for the term Syrtis does not appear to have been confined to the mere gulfs themselves, but to have been extended also to the desert country adjacent, which is still at the present day called Sert. Compare Ritter, allgem. vergleichende Geogr. vol. i. p. 929.

¹ Leptis. The reference is here to Leptis Major. Compare note 1, page 191.

² Philenōn. The Greek genitive plural (Φιλαινῶν) Latinized. The common Latin form is Philenorum. An account of the Pheleni and the circumstances of their death is given in the 79th chapter of the present history.

³ Quem. Understand locum.

⁴ Post aliae, &c. "after this, other Carthaginian cities." Punicus and Poenus are from Φοίνιξ, (whence the Greek name Phoenicia, "country of palms;" the parent-land of the Carthaginians). This is analogous to the Doric usage of στ for φ. Compare Matthiae G. G. vol. i. p. 35. Blomfield's transl.

⁵ Super Numidium, "to the south of Numidia;" i. e. above Numidia in an inland direction.

post eos ¹Aethiopas esse; dein loca exusta solis ardoribus. Igitur bello Jugurthino pleraque ²ex Punicis oppida, et finis Carthaginiensium, quos ³novissime habuerant, populus Romanus per magistratus administra-bat: Gaetulorum magna pars et ⁴Numidia usque ad flumen ⁵Mulucham sub Jugurtha erant: Mauris omnibus rex Bocchus imperitabat, praeter nomen, ⁶cetera ignarus populi Romani; itemque nobis neque bello, neque pace, antea cognitus. De Africa et ejus incolis ad necessitudinem rei satis dictum.

XX. POSTQUAM, regno diviso, legati Africa disces-sere, et Jugurtha contra timorem animi ⁷praemia sceleris adeptum sese videt; certum ratus, quod ex amicis apud Numantiam acceperat, omnia Romae venalia esse, simil et illorum pollicitationibus accensus, quos paullo ante muneribus expleverat, in regnum Adherbalis ⁸animum intendit. Ipse acer, bellicosus: at is, ⁹quem pe-tebat, quietus, imbellis, placido ingenio, ¹⁰opportunus injuriae, metuens magis, quam metuendus. Igitur ex improviso, finis ejus cum magna manu invasit, multos mortalis cum pecore atque alia praeda capit, aedifica

¹ Aethiopas. The Aethiopes, according to our historian, would seem to have occupied the central parts of Africa from east to west.

² Ex Punicis oppida. The more usual form would be ex Punicis oppidis.

³ Novissime, "very lately;" i. e. since the fall of Carthage.

⁴ Numidia. Some editions have Numidac.

⁵ Mulucham. The ancient boundary of Mauretania; called also the Molochath, and now the Mulviah. Compare note 1. page 184.

⁶ Cetera, "in other respects."

⁷ Praemia sceleris; "the fruits of his wickedness;" i. e. the half of Numidia, in place of the third part.

⁸ Animum intendit, "directs his views."

⁹ Quem petebat, "at whom he aimed;" or "whom he was preparing to attack."

¹⁰ Opportunus injuriae, "a fit subject of injustice;" i. e. one on whom injuries might be committed without danger.

incidit, pleraque loca hostiliter cum equitatu accedit; dein cum omni multitudine in regnum suum convertit, existumans¹ dolore permotum Adherbalem injurias suas manu vindicaturum, eamque rem belli caussam fore. At ille, quod neque se parem armis existumabat, et amicitia populi Romani magis quam Numidis fretus erat, legatos ad Jugurtham de injuriis questum misit: qui tametsi contumeliosa dicta retulerant, prius tamen omnia pati decrevit, quam bellum² sumere; ³quia tentatum antea secus cesserat. Neque tamen eo magis cupidio Jugurthae minuebatur: quippe qui totum ejus regnum⁴ animo jam invaserat. Itaque non, ut antea, cum praedatoria manu, sed magno exercitu comparato, bellum gerere coepit, et aperte totius Numidiae imperium petere. Ceterum, qua pergebat, urbis, agros vastare, praedas agere; suis animum, terrorem hostibus augere.

XXI. ADHERBAL ubi intellegit, eo processum, uti regnum aut relinquendum esset, aut armis retinendum, necessario copias parat, et Jugurthae obvius procedit. Interim haud longe a mari, prope⁵ Cirtam oppidum,

¹ Dolore permotum, "stung with indignation."

² Sumere, "to engage in," or "undertake."

³ Quia tentatum antea, &c. "because, when tried on a former occasion, it had eventuated otherwise than he had anticipated;" i. e. it had not succeeded according to his expectations: (cesserat secus ac speraverat.)

⁴ Animo jam invaserat, "he had already grasped in thought."

⁵ Cirtam. Cirta, now Constantina, a city of Numidia, on the river Ampsagas, at a considerable distance from the coast. It appears to have been originally the only important city of the more inland parts of Numidia, and hence probably its name, from the Punic Kartha, "a city." It was the royal residence of the kings of Numidia, of whom Micipsa, according to Strabo, did the most to enlarge and improve it. Compare the words of the geographer. Κίρτα δὲ ιστιν ἐν μεσογαίᾳ, τῷ Μασσανίσσου καὶ τῶν ἔξης διαδόχων βασιλίσσιον, πόλις εὐεργεστάτη, κατικεννασμένη καλῶς τοῖς πάσι. Καὶ utriusque consedit exercitus: et, quia ¹die extremum erat, praelium non incepturn. Ubi plerumque noctis processit, ²obscuro etiam tum lumine, milites Jugurthini, signo dato, castra hostium invadunt; semisomnos ³partim, alias arma sumentes fugant funduntque; Adherbal cum paucis equitibus Cirtam profugit, et, ni multitudine ⁴togatorum fuisse, quae Numidas insequentes moenibus prohibuit, uno die inter duos reges coepit atque patratum bellum foret. Igitur Jugurtha μάλιστα ὑπὸ Μινίψα, δοτις καὶ "Ελληνας συνώνισεν ἐκεῖ, καὶ τοσαῦτην ἵποισαν, ὃς ἐκτέμηται μηδείς ιππίας, διστλασίους δὲ πέρισσους. (Strab. 17. vol. vi. p. 669. ed. Tzsch.) It was afterwards called Sittianorum Colonia, from P. Sittius Nucerinus, who greatly assisted Caesar in the African war, and was rewarded for his services with the city and district. Compare note 4. page 52. Conspiracy of Catiline.

¹ Die. An old form for the genitive singular, instead of diei. Compare Priscian, (7. 19. vol. i. p. 354. ed. Krehl.) "Veteres frequentissime inveniuntur similem ablativo protulisse in hac declinatione (scil. quinta) tam genitivum quam dativum. Sallustius, in Historiarum primo: Dubitavit acie pars, pro aciei. Et Virgilius in I. Georgicōn: Libra die somnique pares ubi fecerit horas; die pro diei. Ovidius quoque in III. Metamorphoseōn, fide pro fidei posuit: Prima fide vocisque ratae templamina sumpsiū. Idem in sexto: Utque fide pignus dextras utriusque poposcit."

² Obscuro etiam tum lumine, "the light of day being still as yet obscure;" i. e. before it was quite light.

³ Partim, "some."

⁴ Togatorum. The Romans, from their use of the toga, were called Togati or Gens Togata; and the Greeks, from their wearing the pallium, were denominated by the Romans Palliatī or Gens Palliata. So also the Gauls were styled Gens Braccata, from the braccae worn by the natives. "Breac is the Celtic word for a stripe; and therefore we need not doubt," observes Dr Butler, (Geogr. Class.), "but that these breeches, or rather kelts, were made of striped materials. Hence also we learn that the appellation vir-gati, applied to the Dahae by Virgil, has reference to their striped garments. Traces of this early apparel may be observed in the Scottish plaid. The highlanders of Scotland are a Gaelic, that is, a Celtic, race."

oppidum circumsedit, ¹vineis turribusque et machinis omnium generum expugnare adgreditur; maxume fes-tinans tempus legatorum antecapere, quos, ante praefilium factum, Romam ab Adherbale missos audiverat. Sed, postquam senatus de bello eorum accepit, [tres adolescentes] in Africam legantur, qui ambo reges adeant, senatus populique Romani verbis nuncient, “²velle et censere, eos ab armis discedere; de controversiis suis jure potius, quam bello disceptare; ita ³seque illisque dignum fore.”

XXII. LEGATI in Africam maturantes veniunt, eo magis, quod Romae, dum proficiunt, de praelio

¹ Vineis. The vineae were machines in the form of sheds or mantlets, constructed of wood and hurdles, and covered with earth or raw hides, or any materials which could not easily be set on fire. They were pushed forward by wheels below. Under them the besiegers either worked the ram, or tried to undermine the walls. The term vinea is properly an adjective, having porticus understood, and signifying originally an arbour in a vineyard. The name was applied to the military machine just described, from its general resemblance to a vine-arbour. That the term porticus is really understood, is apparent from a passage of Caesar (Bell. Civ. 2. 2.), where porticus is used in place of vinea. “Itaque, pedalibus lignis conjunctis inter se, porticus integebantur.”—² Turribusque. The turres, or towers, were of two kinds, fixed and moveable. The fixed towers were raised on the agger, or mount, and consisted of different stories, from which showers of darts and stones were discharged on the townsmen by means of engines called Catapultae, Balistae, and Scorpiones. The moveable towers were pushed forwards and brought back on wheels fixed below on the inside of the planks. To prevent them from being set on fire by the enemy, the towers, both fixed and moveable, but more particularly the latter, were covered with raw hides and pieces of coarse cloth and mattresses.

³ Velle et censere, “that it was their wish and determination.” The formal language used on such occasions. Velle, “to will a measure,” properly applies to the people; and censere, “to determine after mature deliberation,” to the senate.

⁴ Seque. Se refers here to the Roman senate and people; illis, to the princes.

facto et oppugnatione Cirtae audiebatur : sed is rumor ¹clemens erat. Quorum Jugurtha accepta ²oratione respondit : “ sibi neque majus quidquam, neque carius auctoritate senati : ab adolescentia ita enisum, uti ab optumo quoque probaretur : virtute, non malitia, P.
 Scipioni, summo viro, placuisse : ³ob easdem artis ab Micipsa, non penuria liberorum, in regnum adoptatum :
 ceterum, quo plura bene atque strenue fecisset, eo animum suum injuriam minus tolerare : Adherbalem dolis vitae suae insidiatum ; quod ubi comperisset, sceleri obviam isse ; populum Romanum neque recte, neque ⁴pro bono facturum, si ab jure gentium ⁵sese prohibu-erint : postremo de omnibus rebus legatos Romanam brevi-missurum.” Ita utrique digrediuntur. Adherbalis adpellandi copia non fuit.

XXIII. JUGURTHA, ubi eos Africa ⁶decessisse ra-tus est, neque, propter loci naturam, Cirtam armis expugnare potest, ⁷vallo atque fossa moenia circumdat,

¹ Clemens, “ a mild one;” i. e. diminishing or softening the atrocity of the act.

² Oratione, “ their embassy.”

³ Ob easdem artis, “ from the exercise of the same qualities.”

⁴ Pro bono, “ for their own interests.”

⁵ Sese. Referring to Jugurtha. In strict Latinity, if a second subject be introduced, se refers strictly to that subject, and is should be used of the first. But se often continues, if no ambiguity is produced, to be used of the original subject, especially if the second proposition expresses a thought or purpose of the subject of the first.
 Thus, “ Dionysius instituit, ut filiae sibi barbam adurerent.” So also, “ Herculi Eurystheus imperavit, ut arma reginae Amazonum sibi afferret.”

⁶ Decessisse, “ had left.” The strict distinction between decedo and discedo, which, however, is seldom observed, appears to be this:
discedo signifies to make room for another, to retire merely to a short distance; but decedo, to leave the place entirely, to depart; and, generally speaking, in different directions.

⁷ Vallo, “ with a rampart.” In besieging a place, the Roman mode, which Jugurtha here imitates, was to draw lines composed of ¹turris exstruit, easque praesidiis firmat: praeterea dies, noctes, aut per vim, aut dolis tentare; ²defensoribus moenium praemia modo, modo formidinem ostentare; suos hortando ad virtutem erigere; prorsus intentus cuncta parare. Adherbal, ubi intellegit omnis suas fortunas in extremo sitas, hostem infestum, auxilii spem nullam, penuria rerum necessiarum bellum trahi non posse; ex his, qui una Cirtam profugerant, duo maxime impigros, de legit, eos, multa pollicendo, ac miserando casum suum, confirmat, uti per hostium munitiones noctu ad proximum mare, dein Romam pergerent.

XXIV. NUMIDAE paucis diebus jussa efficiunt: litterae Adherbalis in senatu recitatae, quarum sententia haec fuit. “ Non mea culpa saepe ad vos oratum mitto, Patres conscripti, sed vis Jugurthae subigit: quem tanta lubido extinguendi me invasit, uti neque vos, neque deos immortalis ³in animo habeat; sanguinem meum, ⁴quam omnia, malit. Itaque quintum jam mensem, socius et amicus populi Romani, armis ob sessus teneor: neque mihi Micipsa patris beneficia, neque vestra de creta auxiliantur: ferro, an fame acrius ⁵urguear, incertus sum. ⁶Plura de Jugurtha scribere a rampart and ditch, strengthened with a parapet and battlements, (lorica et pinnae), and sometimes a solid wall of considerable height and thickness, flanked with towers and forts at proper distances round the whole.

¹ Turris. Fixed towers are here meant. Compare preceding note, and also note 1. page 196.

² Defensoribus moenium, &c. “ To the defenders of the ramparts he at one time displayed rewards, at another what was calculated to act upon their fears.”

³ In animo habeat, “ cares for;” i. e. allows to occupy his thoughts.

⁴ Quam. Malit being equivalent to magis velut, supersedes the necessity of inserting magis before quam.

⁵ Urguear. An archaism for urgear.

dehortatur fortuna mea: etiam antea expertus sum, parum fidei miseris esse: ⁷nisi tamen intellego, illum supra, quam ego sum, petere, neque simul amicitiam vestram, et regnum meum sperare: utrum ⁸gravius existumet, nemini occultum est. Nam initio occidit Hiempsalem, fratrem meum; dein patrio regno me expulit:—⁹quae sane fuerint nostrae injuriae, nihil ad

⁶ Plura de Jugurtha, &c. “ My wretched condition dissuades me from writing more respecting Jugurtha.”

⁷ Nisi tamen intellego, &c. Cortius explains this phrase as follows: Si mihi non creditis, tamen intelligo, &c. i.e. “ even, however, though credence be denied me, yet still am I well aware,” &c. This seems to us to wear a forced and unnatural appearance. It is certainly preferable to give nisi in this passage the force of præterquam. (Compare Tursellinus, de Part. Lat. s. v.) Adherbal has just declared that his wretched condition dissuades him from writing more respecting Jugurtha. He then assigns his reason for making such a remark: “ etiam antea expertus sum parum fidei miseris esse.” Now, if this last clause be taken parenthetically, nisi will serve to correct the assertion made in the words plura de Jugurtha, &c. and the meaning will be,—“ Only this, however, I will add, that I am well aware he aims at a higher object than myself.” The intention of Adherbal is to excite the suspicions of the Romans against Jugurtha.

⁸ Gravius, “ the more important.”

⁹ Quae sane fuerint, &c. Quae is here elegantly used in the sense of haec. “ These I allow may have been our own private wrongs; they may have been of no concern to you.” It may not be amiss to mention here some instances of the initial force of quae, from Cicero, Caesar, and Livy. Quod quoniam tibi exposui, (Cic. Ep. Fam. 1. 9.), “ Since I have explained this to you.”—Quae cum essent incerta, (Cic. Ep. Fam. 2. 19.), “ Since these things were uncertain.”—Quibus rebus inductus Caesar statuit, (B. G. 1. 11.), “ Caesar, induced by these circumstances, determined.”—Quod ubi Caesar resciit, (B. G. 1. 28.), “ When Caesar came to the knowledge of this.”—Quae res accendit militi animos, (Liv. 44. 4.), “ This circumstance kindled the spirit of the soldiery.” This construction, as also the analogous usage of the relative for et is or et ille, takes place when no particular stress is to be laid on the relative clause.

vos. Verum nunc vestrū regnum armis tenet: me, quem imperatōrem Numidis posuistis, clausum ¹obsidet; legatorum verba quanti fecerit, pericula mea declarant. Quid reliquum, nisi vis vestra, quo moveri possit? Nam ego quidem vellem, et haec quae scribo, et quae antea in senatu questus sum, vana forent potius, quam miseria mea fidem verbis faceret. Sed, quoniam eo natus sum, ²ut Jugurthae scelerum ostentui essem, non jam mortem neque aerumnas, ³tantummodo inimici imperium et cruciatus corporis deprecor. Regno Numidiae, quod vestrū est, uti lubet, consulite: me ex manibus impiis eripite, per majestatem imperii, ⁴per amicitiae fidem; si ulla apud vos memoria ⁵avi mei, Masinissae."

XXV. His litteris recitatis, fuere, qui exercitum in Africam mittendum censerent, et quam primum Adherbali subveniundum; de Jugurtha interim uti consuleretur, quoniam non paruisse legatis. Sed ab isdem regis fautoribus summa ope ⁶enism, ne ⁷decretum fieret. Ita bonum publicum, ut in plerisque negotiis solet, privata gratia devictum. Legantur tamen in Africam majores natu, nobiles, amplis ⁸honoribus; in quis M. Scaurus, de quo supra memoravimus, consula-

¹ Obsidet. Some editions have tenet atque obsidet. But tenet already precedes.

² Ut Jugurthae scelerum, &c. "that I might be a proof of the wickedness of Jugurtha." Equivalent to, "ut in me Jugurtha ostenderet sclera sua."

³ Tantummodo inimici imperium, &c. "I only pray to be saved from the power of an inveterate foe, and from bodily tortures."

⁴ Per amicitiae fidem, "by the regard which is due to friendship," or "by the ties of friendship."

⁵ Avi. Before avi some editions insert remanet.

⁶ Enism. Taken in a passive sense; "every effort was made by the partisans of the king."

⁷ Decretum. In some editions tale decretum.

⁸ Honoribus. Some editions have honoribus usi.

ris, et tum senati ¹princeps. Hi, quod ²in invidia res erat simul, et ab Numidis obsecrati, triduo navim ³escendere: dein brevi ⁴Uticam adpulsi litteras ad Jugurtham mittunt, QUAM OCISSUME AD PROVINCIAM ACCE-DAT; SEQUE AD EUM AB SENATU MISSOS. Ille ubi accepit, homines claros, quorum auctoritatem Romae pollere audiverat, contra inceptum suum venisse; primo commotus, metu atque lubidine divorsus agitabatur. Timebat iram senati, [ni paruisset legatis]: porro animus cupidine caecus ad inceptum scelus rapiebat. ⁵Vicit tamen in avido ingenio pravum consilium. Igitur, exercitu circumdato, summa vi Cirtam irrumpere nititur, maxume sperans, diducta manu hostium, aut vi, aut dolis, sese casum victoriae inventurum.

¹ Princeps. He whose name was first entered in the censor's books, was called princeps Senatus; which title used to be given to the person who, of those alive, had been censor first, but after A. U. C. 544, to him whom the censors thought most worthy. This dignity, although it conferred no command or emolument, was esteemed the very highest, and was usually retained for life. It was called principatus: hence afterwards the emperor was named princeps; which word properly denotes only rank and not power.

² In invidia, "connected with public odium."

³ Escendere. An archaism for ascendere.

⁴ Uticam. Utica was an ancient and celebrated city of Africa Propria, near the mouth of the river Bagradas, (now the Mejerdah). It was founded by a colony of Phoenicians, 286 years before Carthage, according to Aristotle, and was distant from that city, according to Appian, sixty stadia. Bochart makes the name of Utica contain an allusion to the antiquity of the place, deriving it from the Phoenician Ityca, "ancient." We should have strong doubts respecting the correctness of his etymology. In greatness and magnificence Utica was next to Carthage; and, after the destruction of that city, was made the capital of the Roman province. It was famous for the death of M. Porcius Cato, who put an end to his life there after the battle of Thapsus.

⁵ Vicit tamen in avido ingenio, &c. "Evil suggestions, however, gained the ascendency in his ambitious soul."

Quod ubi secus procedit, neque, quod intenderat, efficeret potest, uti prius, quam legatos conveniret, Adherbalis potiretur: ne amplius morando, Scaurum, quem plurimum metuebat, incenderet, cum paucis equitibus in provinciam venit. Ac, tamen etsi senati verbis minae graves nuncibantur, quod oppugnatione non desisteret, multa tamen oratione consumta, legati frustra discessere.

XXVI. EA postquam Cirtae audita sunt, Italici, quorum virtute moenia defensabantur, confisi, ditione facta, propter magnitudinem populi Romani inviolatos sese fore, Adherbali suadent, uti seque, et oppidum Jugurthae tradat; tantum ab eo vitam paciscatur; de ceteris senatui curae fore. At ille, tametsi omnia ¹potiora fide Jugurthae rebatur; quia penes eosdem, si advorsaretur, cogendi potestas erat, ita, uti censuerant Italici, ditionem facit. Jugurtha in primis Adherbalem ²excruciatum necat: dein omnis ³puberes,

¹ Potiora, “more worthy of reliance.”

² Excruciatum necat. The participle is often, with peculiar elegance, put under the government of the verb in the succeeding clause: thus, in the present instance, “having cruelly tortured, puts to death.” “Postquam excrucierat necat,” would have been far inferior. So also “Regulum captum Carthaginem miserunt.—Having taken Regulus prisoner, they sent him to Carthage.” Here Regulum is the regimen of miserunt. There are not wanting examples, it is true, to justify another phraseology, namely, “Regulo capto, eum Carthaginem miserunt.” This latter form of expression, however, is much less precise; for it does not so clearly signify, that the person taken was also the person sent. Thus (Liv. 2. 22.), “Comprehensos Volscos Romanam duxere.—Having seized the Volsci, they carried them to Rome.” Here there is much more precision of expression than if he had said, “Volscis comprehensis, eos Romanam duxere.”—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 60. 3d ed.

³ Puberes. Some editions omit the comma after this word, which makes a very inferior reading.

Numidas et negotiatores promiscue, uti quisque armatis obvius, interfecit.

XXVII. QUOD postquam Romae cognitum, et res in senatu agitari coepta, idem illi ministri regis interpellando, ac saepe gratia, interdum jurgiis trahendo tempus, atrocitatem facti leniebant. Ac, ni C. Memmius, ¹tribunus plebis designatus, ²vir acer, et infestus potentiae nobilitatis, populum Romanum edocuisse, ³ID AGI, UTI PER PAUCOS FACTIOSOS JUGURTHAE SCELUS CONDONARETUR, ⁴profecto omnis invidia prolatandis

¹ Tribunus plebis. Compare note 1. page 87. Conspiracy of Catiline. C. Memmius, of whom mention is made in the text, subsequently stood candidate for the consulship, and was slain in the very comitia by Saturninus, a tribune of the commons, A.U.C. 654, in the sixth consulship of C. Marius. Compare Livy, (Epit. 69.) “Idem Appuleius Saturninus tribunus plebis C. Memmum candidatum consulatus, quem maxime adversarium actionibus suis timebat, occidit: quibus rebus concitato senatu oppressus armis cum Glaucia praetore, et aliis ejusdem furoris sociis, bello quodam interfactus est.”—The same Saturninus murders Caius Memmius, who was a candidate for the consulship, fearing lest he might have, in him, a strenuous opposer of his evil actions. The senate were at length roused by such repeated acts of enormity, and Saturninus, together with Glaucias, the praetor, and some others of his mad associates, is attacked by force of arms, and slain.”—Baker. Where we should read, no doubt, with Gronovius, a servo instead of bello.

² Vir acer, “a spirited individual.”

³ Id agi. “That it was in contemplation.”

⁴ Profecto, &c. “beyond a doubt, all the odium connected with the affair would have died gradually away, in consequence of the frequent postponements of their deliberations.” In the consequent member of a conditional proposition, the past tenses are frequently put in the indicative, to give more liveliness to the representation, although in the conditional clause the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive has been used. Thus, in the present instance, dilapsa erat is used in the consequent member of the sentence, although the conditional clause contains edocuisse, which in strictness would require dilapsa foret or fuisset. Compare also the following examples of similar construction: “Pons Sublicius iter paene hostibus dedit, ni consultationibus dilapsa erat : tanta vis gratiae, atque pecuniae regis. Sed, ubi senatus delicti conscientia populum timet, ¹lege Sempronia provinciae futuris consulibus Numidia atque Italia decretae : consules declarantur P. Scipio Nasica, L. Bestia Calpurnius : Calpurnio Numidia, Scipioni Italia ²obvenit : deinde exercitus, qui in Africam portaretur, ³scribitur : stipendum, alia, quae bello usui forent, decernuntur.

XXVIII. AT Jugurtha, contra spem nuncio accepunus vir fuisset Horatius Cocles."—Liv. "Populus effigies Pisones divellebant ni jussu principis protectae forent."—Tacit. "Quem tibi hoc daturum putas? si enim ita esset, quid opus erat te gradatim istuc pervenire?"—Cic. "Si non alium longe jactaret odorem, Laurus erat."—Virg. Zumpt, L. G. p. 327. Kenrick's transl.

¹ Lege Sempronia. Originally their provinces used to be decreed to the consuls by the senate after the election, or when they had entered on their office. But by the Sempronian law, proposed by C. Sempronius Gracchus, and passed A.U.C. 631, the senate were required to decree two provinces to the future consuls before their election.—P. Scipio Nasica, the great-grandson of that Scipio Nasica who was pronounced by the senate "the most virtuous of the Romans," (vir optimus), and the son of that Nasica who headed the party of the nobility in the affray in which Tiberius Gracchus was slain. The date of his consulship with Bestia was A.U.C. 643. He died before the expiration of his office. Compare Cicero, (Brut. 34.)—L. Bestia Calpurnius. The Calpurnian house claimed as its founder, Calpus, the third son of king Numa. Compare Plutarch, (Vit. Num. 21. ed. Hutton, vol. i. p. 182.) ἀπὸ δὲ Κάλπου τοὺς Καλπουνίους. The individual mentioned in our text espoused the party of the nobility in the contest with the Gracchi, and on that account stood high in the favour of the senate. He was subsequently accused under the Mamilian law, (compare chap. 40. of this narrative), for having received a bribe from Jugurtha, and was condemned.—Cic. Brut. 34. According to the President De Brosses, the Bestia who conspired with Catiline was his grandson.

² Obvenit, "fell by lot." The consuls arranged their provinces by lot or agreement.

³ Scribitur, "is levied." The names of the soldiers enlisted were written down on tables; hence scribere, "to enlist," "to levy or raise."

to, quippe cui, Romae omnia ¹venum ire, in animo haeserat, filium, et cum eo duo familiaris, ad senatum legatos mittit: hisque, ut illis, quos Hiempseal interfecto miserat, praecepit, “omnis mortal is pecunia adgrediantur.” ²Qui postquam Roman a adventabant, senatus a Bestia consultus, PLACERETNE LEGATOS JUGURTHAE ³RECIPI MOENIBUS: iique decrevere, “nisi regnum, ipsumque deditum venissent, uti in diebus [proxumis] decem Italia decederent.” ⁴Consul Numidis ex senati decreto nunciari jubet: ita infectis rebus illi domum discedunt. Interim Calpurnius, parato exercitu, ⁵legat sibi homines nobilis, factiosos, quorum auctoritate, quae deliquisset, ⁶munita fore sperabat: in quis fuit Scaurus, cujus de natura et habitu supra memoravimus. Nam in consule nostro multae bona eque artes animi et corporis erant, quas omnis avaritia praepediebat: patiens laborum, acri ingenio, satis providens, belli haud ignarus, firmissimus contra pericula et insidias. Sed legiones per Italiam ⁷Rhe-

¹ Venum ire. In some editions venire. From a comparison of various authorities it would appear, that veneo (venum eo) was used as the passive of vendo, retaining from the latter merely vendi^{re}s, vendend^{re}s, and occasionally venditur. The subject is ably discussed by Struve, Ueber die Lateinische Declination und Conjugation, p. 84. seqq.

² Qui postquam, &c. “When these were drawing nigh to Rome.”

³ Recipi moenibus. Foreign ambassadors, whom the Roman senate did not choose to receive within the walls of the city, had an audience given them in the temple of Bellona or of Apollo, without the walls, or in the villa publica, a building erected in the Campus Martius, where they were also entertained during their stay.

⁴ Consul Numidis, &c. “The consul orders information of the decree of the senate to be given to the Numidians.”

⁵ Legat, “selects for his lieutenants.”

⁶ Munita, “screened from punishment.”

⁷ Rhegium. A city nearly in the southern extremity of Italy, now Rhegio, founded by a colony from Chalcis, under Antimnestus, according to Strabo (vol. ii. p. 227. ed. Tzsch.), Κρίσα διατηνε gium, atque inde¹ Siciliam, porro ex Sicilia in Africam, transvectae. Igitur Calpurnius initio, paratis commeatis, acriter Numidiam ingressus est, multos mortalis, et urbis aliquot pugnando capit.

XXIX. SED, ubi Jugurtha per legatos pecunia tentare, bellique, quod administrabat, asperitatem ostendere coepit, ²animus aeger avaritia facile conversus est. Ceterum socius et administer omnium consiliorum adsumitur Scaurus: qui, tametsi a principio, plerisque ³ex factione ejus corruptis, acerrume regem impugnerat; ⁴tamen, magnitudine pecuniae, a bono honesto in pravum abstractus est. Sed Jugurtha primum tantummodo belli moram redimebat, existumans, sese aliquid interim Romae pretio, aut gratia effecturum:

Ρήγιον Χαλκιδέων. κ. τ. 2.* The name of this city is thought to point to the old tradition of Sicily having been separated or broken off from Italy by some convulsion of nature. (Ῥήγιον, from ῥίγνυμι.) Compare Strabo, vol. ii. p. 229. Ωνουάσθη δὲ Ῥήγιον, εἰς ὡς φησιν Αἰοχύλος, διὰ τὸ συμβάντα πάθος τῇ χάρῃ τωντηγόντων αποφραγῆναι γάρ οὐκότε τῆς πατέρου τὴν Σικελίαν ὑπὸ σεισμῶν, ἀλλοι τε, κακεῖνος εἴρηκεν,*

Αφ' οὗ δὲ Ῥήγιον κινλήσκεται.*

¹ Siciliam. Sicily, an island in the Mediterranean, to the southwest of Italy. It is of a triangular form, and in circumference about 415 miles. Its earlier name was Sicania, which it derived from the Sicani. These were afterwards driven to the western parts of the island by the Siculi, who crossed over from Italy, and changed its name to Sicilia. It was also called Trinacria, from having τρεῖς ἔγκειαι, three celebrated promontories: Pelorum at the east, adjacent to Italy; Pachynum at the south; and Lilyboeum at the west. It was colonized by the Greeks and Carthaginians, and came into the possession of the Romans during the second Punic war.

² Animus aeger avaritia, &c. “his spirit, corrupted by avarice, underwent an easy change.”

³ Ex factione, “of his (Scaurus’s) party.”

⁴ Tamen, magnitudine pecuniae, &c. “nevertheless, he was drawn away, by the greatness of the bribe which he had received, from the path of rectitude and honour into that of corruption.”

postea vero quam participem negotii Scaurum acceprat; in maxumam spem adductus recuperandae pacis, statuit cum eis ¹de omnibus pactionibus praesens agere.
Ceterum interea, ²fidei caussa, mittitur a consule Sextius quaestor in oppidum Jugurthae ³Vagam; cuius rei species erat acceptio frumenti, quod Calpurnius palam legatis imperaverat; quoniam ⁴deditiois mora induciae agitabantur. Igitur rex, uti constituerat, in castra ve-nit; ac pauca, ⁵praesenti consilio, locutus de invidia

¹ De omnibus pactionibus, “concerning a general treaty.” Literally, “concerning all the stipulations, or articles, of a treaty.”

² Fidei caussa, “for the sake of inspiring Jugurtha with confidence.”

³ Vagam. Vaga, sometimes, but improperly, written Vacca, was situate in Africa Propria, on the river Rubricatus, and was the most celebrated mart of the whole kingdom. Compare chap. 69. D’Anville and Barbiè du Bocage recognise traces of the ancient name in the modern Vegja (or Beja or Bay-ja), in the district of Tunis.

⁴ Deditiois mora, &c. “while the business of the surrender was pending, a truce prevailed.”

⁵ Praesenti consilio, “in presence of the council of war.” Gronovius successfully contends that concilium means an assembly of the people, or an assembly of deputies from several nations, or bodies of men—as Boeoticum concilium; Achaicum concilium; and that consilium means a meeting of counsellors or chiefs. The consilium of the Roman generals, he says, were the lieutenants and the tribunes of the soldiers, (together with the chief centurion of the legion), whom they used to summon for the purpose of consultation; and the consilium of the praetors were the judges, and the assessors or assistants. In this opinion Drakenborth concurs. Stephens agrees with Gronovius in defining concilium to be “conventus populi et multitudo populorum diversorum in unum locum consulendi gratia congregata;” and he observes, that concilium properly means “a meeting of the commons only, summoned by the senators, and not of the whole Roman people.” (Compare Aul. Gell. 15. 22.) Turenbus, whose opinion also seems to coincide with that of Gronovius, says, that consilium means frequently a military council for assisting the general in deliberation. From these and other authorities it would appear, that consilium denotes an assembly of chiefs, or leadfacti, atque in ditionem ¹uti acciperetur, reliqua cum Bestia et Scauro secreta transigit: dein postero die, ²quasi per saturam exquisitis sententiis, in ditionem accipitur. Sed, uti ³pro consilio imperatum, elephanti triginta, pecus atque equi multi, cum parvo argenti pondere quaestori traduntur. Calpurnius Romam ⁴ad magistratus rogandos proficiscitur. In Numidia et exercitu nostro pax agitabatur.

XXX. POSTQUAM res in Africa gestas, quoque modo actae forent, fama divulgavit, Romae per omnis locos et conventus de facto consulis agitati: apud plebem grazing men, for the purpose of deliberation; and that concilium signifies a promiscuous assembly, or one composed of the inferior orders.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 131. 3d ed.

¹ Uti acciperetur, “that he might be received;” or, if a zeugma be supposed to operate in locutus, “having requested to be received.” This last appears more elegant.

² Quasi per saturam, &c. “the opinions of the council being taken as it were in a hasty and confused manner.” Saturam is merely an adjective, with lancem understood. The lanx satura literally signifies the dish or platter annually filled with all sorts of fruits, and offered to the gods as the first fruits of the season; and from this medley the term is figuratively used in our text to denote a confused and promiscuous collecting of the votes. Compare Diomed. 2. p. 483. “Lanx satura, referta variis multisque primitiis in sacro apud priscos diis inferebatur.”—And the scholiast on Horace, (Serm. 1. 1.), “Satura dicitur lancis genus, tractum a choro Liberi patris, qui est dator vini et laetitiae.” Hence also the sanction usually annexed to Roman laws: “Ne quis per saturam abrogato,” which Festus explains as follows: “Per legem in qua conjunctim multis de rebus una rogatione populus consulebatur.”

³ Pro consilio, “before the council.” This signification of pro is derived immediately from that of the Greek preposition πρό.

⁴ Ad magistratus rogandos, “to hold an election for magistrates.” The usual beginning of all applications to the people was, Velutis, Jubeatis, Quirites; and thus the people were said to be consulted or asked, (consuli sive rogari), and the presiding magistrate to consult or ask them, (consulere sive rogare). Hence rogare magistratus, “to create magistrates,” rogare quaesidores, “to appoint commisvis invidia: ¹Patres probarentne tantum flagitium, an decretum consulis subverterent, parum constabat. Ac maxime eos potentia Scauri, quod is auctor et socius Bestiae ferebatur, a vero, bono impediebat. At C. Memmius, cuius de libertate ingenii et odio potentiae nobilitatis supra diximus, inter dubitationem et moras senati, concionibus populum ad vindicandum hortari: monere, ne rempublicam, ne libertatem suam deserent: multa superba, crudelia facinora nobilitatis ostendere: prorsus intentus omni modo plebis animum accendebat. Sed, quoniam ea tempestate ²Memmii facundia clara pollensque fuit, decere existumavi, unam ex tam multis orationem ³perscribere; ⁴ac positioners;" and hence also rogatio, "a bill," while the matter is still pending, but lex, "a law," when it has been favourably received by the people.

¹ Patres probarentne, &c. Cortius places a comma after patres, which then becomes either the nominative absolute, or else the accusative governed by quod ad understood. The punctuation we have adopted is decidedly preferable. "It was uncertain whether the senate would approve of so gross an abandonment of duty, or would annul the act of the consul."

² Memmii. Some editions insert Romae before Memmii.—Clara pollensque, "distinguished and influential;" i. e. was of a high character itself, and exercised a strong influence on the minds of the people.

³ Perscribere, "to give entire."

⁴ Ac potissimum, &c. Understand eam orationem. The complete ellipsis will be as follows: "Ac potissimum decere existimavi eam orationem perscribere, quae;" &c.—Multa dehortantur a vobis, &c. "Did not, Romans, my zeal for the public welfare overcome every other consideration, many things would dissuade me from espousing your cause: the resources, namely, of the opposite faction, your tame endurance of injury, the absence of all law, and, above all, because there is more danger than honour attendant upon innocence." The usage of dehortantur for dehortarentur will be found explained in note 4, page 203.

tissimum, quae in concione, post redditum Bestiae, hujuscemodi verbis disseruit.

XXXI. “MULTA dehortantur a vobis, Quirites, ni studium reipublicae omnia superet; opes factionis, vestra patientia, jus nullum, ac maxume, quod innocentiae plus periculi, quam honoris, est. Nam illa quidem piget dicere, his annis xv. quam ludibrio fueritis superbiae paucorum; quam foede, quamque inulti perierint vestri defensores; ¹ut vobis animus ab ignavia atque secordia corruptus sit, qui ne nunc quidem, ²obnoxiiis inimicis, exsurgitis, atque etiam nunc timetis, quibus decet terrori esse. Sed, quamquam haec talia sunt, tamen obviam ire factionis potentiae animus subigit: certe ego libertatem, quae mihi a parente tradita est experiar: verum id frustra, an ob rem faciam, in vestra manu situm, Quirites. Neque ego hortor, quod saepe maiores vestri fecere, uti contra injurias armati eatis. Nihil vi, nihil ³secessione opus: necesse est ⁴suomet ipsi more praecipites eant. Occiso Tiberio Graccho, quem regnum parare aiebant, in plebem Romanam ⁵quaestiones habitae sunt: post C. Gracchi et M. Fulvii caedem, item multi vestri ordinis in car-

¹ Ut vobis animus, &c. “to what a degree your spirit has become enfeebled by cowardice and by sloth.” Ignavia properly denotes slowness and want of spirit in accomplishing what is already begun; pigritia, on the other hand, marks reluctance to begin any undertaking. Compare Noltenius, Lex Anti-Barb. p. 982. “Ignavia est tarditas in exequendis negotiis: Pigritia in aggrediendis.”

² Obnoxiiis inimicis. “When your enemies are in your power;” i. e. when, by the detection of their guilt, you may punish this haughty aristocracy as they deserve, and free yourselves from their tyranny.

³ Secessione. Compare note 1. page 76. Conspiracy of Catiline.

⁴ Suomet more, “in their own way;” i. e. by the natural consequences of their vices and crimes.

⁵ Quaestiones habitae sunt, “prosecutions were instituted.”

cere necati sunt: ¹utriusque cladis non lex, verum lubido eorum finem fecit. ²Sed sane fuerit regni paratio, plebi sua restituere: quidquid sine sanguine civium ulcisci nequitur, jure factum sit. Superioribus annis taciti indignabamini, aerarium expilari; reges et populos liberos paucis nobilibus vectigal pendere; penes eosdem et ³summam gloriam, et maxumas divitias esse: tamen haec talia facinora impune suscepisse, parum habuere: itaque postremo leges, majestas vestra, divina et humana omnia hostibus tradita sunt. Neque eos, qui fecere, pudet aut poenitet: sed incedunt ⁴per ora vestra magnifice, sacerdotia et consulatus, pars triumphos suos ⁵ostentantes: perinde quasi honori, non praedae habeant. Servi aere parati imperia injusta dominorum non perforunt: vos, Quirites, imperio nati, aequo animo servitutem toleratis. At qui sunt hi, qui rem publicam occupavere? homines sceleratissimi, cruentis manibus, immani avaritia, nocentissimi, idemque superbissimi; quis fides, decus, pietas, postremo honesta

¹ Utriusque cladis, &c. "it was not any law, but their own arbitrary will, that put an end to each of these massacres."

² Sed sane fuerit, &c. An ironical concession. "But let it then have been an aiming at supreme power, (on the part of the Gracchi), to attempt the restoration of their rights to the people; let whatever cannot be avenged without shedding the blood of Roman citizens, have been justly done." Nequitur in this passage is used in a passive sense. It occurs in the same sense in Lucretius, l. 1055. and Plautus, Rud. 4. 4. 20. and Fragn. Satyr. ad Fest. s. v. nequitum. So also we have nequitum est in Pacuvius and Cato, ap. Fest. l.c. The simple verb quitur is likewise found: Caecil. ap. Diomed. p. 380. together with queuntur in Accius, ibid. and quita est in Terence, Hec. 4. 1. 87. &c.

³ Summam gloriam, "the highest civil preferment." The highest offices in the state.

⁴ Per ora vestra, "before your very faces."

⁵ Ostentantes, "displaying with insolent parade." The frequentative has here its full and appropriate force.

atque inhonesta omnia quaestui sunt. Pars eorum¹ occidisse tribunos plebis, alii quaestiones injustas, plerique caudem in vos fecisse, pro munimento habent. Ita quam quisque² pessume fecit, tam maxume tutus est: metum a scelere suo ad ignaviam vestram translulere; quos omnis eadem cupere, eadem odisse, eadem metuere in unum coegerit: sed haec inter bonos amicitia est,³ inter males factio. Quod si⁴ tam libertatis curam haberetis, quam illi ad dominationem accensi sunt; profecto neque res publica, sicuti nunc, vastaretur, et⁵ beneficia vestra penes optumos, non audacissimos, forent. Majores vestri,⁶ parandi juris et majestatis constitutae gratia, bis, per secessionem, armati⁷ Aventinum

¹ Occidisse tribunos plebis. This clause here supplies the place of a noun in the accusative; so caudem in vos fecisse, a little after.

² Pessume. The adverbs pessume and maxume have here the force of comparatives. The comparative is often used for the superlative in Latin; the construction of the superlative for the comparative is much more rare. Compare Scheller L. G. vol. ii. p. 278. and Matthiae G. G. § 464. on the corresponding usage in Greek.

³ Inter malos, “among the bad, combination.”

⁴ Tam. Some editions have vos tam. The whole clause may be rendered as follows: “But if you had as strong a regard for the preservation of your own freedom, as they are inflamed with the desire of tyrannizing over you.”

⁵ Beneficia vestra, &c. “your favours would be enjoyed by the best, not by the boldest, of men.” Beneficia relates to the offices in the gift of the people. The preposition penes is derived from penus, and is used to signify the absolute possession and power over a thing, as if it were laid up at our disposal. Penes te is more than apud te; for apud te means what you may have in your keeping in any manner; whereas penes te is what is possessed by you in a particular manner, i. e. what is actually in your possession and under your controul.—Butler’s Praxis on the Latin Prepositions, p. 83.

⁶ Parandi juris, &c. “for the sake of obtaining their rights, and establishing their dignity.”

⁷ Aventinum. Compare note 1. page 76. The Aventine was the most extensive of all the hills on which Rome was built. It occupavere: vos pro libertate, quam ab illis accepistis, non summa ope nitemini? atque eo vehementius, ¹quo majus dedecus est, parta amittere, quam omnino non paravisse? Dicet aliquis, Quid igitur censes? ²Vindicandum in eos, qui hosti prodidere rempublicam: non manu, neque vi, ³quod magis fecisse, quam illis accidisse indignum; verum quaestionibus et indicio ipsius Jugurthae: qui, si dediticius est, profecto jussis vestris obediens erit: sin ea contemnit, scilicet existumabitis, qualis illa pax, aut deditio, ex qua ad Jugurtham scele- rum impunitas, ad paucos potentis maxumae divitiae, in rempublicam damna, dedecora pervenerint. Nisi forte nondum etiam vos dominationis eorum satietas tenet, et illa, quam haec tempora, magis placent, cum regna, provinciae, leges, jura, judicia, bella, paces, postremo divina et humana omnia penes paucos erant; vos autem, hoc est, populus Romanus, invicti ab hostibus, imperatores omnium gentium, satis habebatis animam retinere: nam servitutem quidem quis vestrum recusare audebat? Atque ego, tamen etsi viro flagitiosissimum existumo impune injuriam accepisse, tamen vos hominibus seleratissimis ignoscere, quoniam cives sunt, aequo animo paterer, nisi misericordia in perniciem received its name from an Alban king who was buried on it, and was the spot which Remus chose to take the omens. On this last account it was generally accounted a place of evil omen; and therefore, according to Aulus Gellius, was not included within the Pomaerium; but other and better authorities make it to have been joined to the city by Ancus Marcius. Compare Liv. l. 33. Dion. Hal. 3. 43.

¹ Quo. Some editions have quod; but the present reading is preferable as contrasted with eo which precedes.

² Vindicandum in eos, &c. Understand censeo before, and esse after, vindicandum: "My opinion is that punishment should be inflicted upon those," &c.

³ Quod magis fecisse, &c. "which would be more disgraceful for you to have done, than to have happened unto them."

¹casura esset. Nam et illis, ²quantum importunitatis habent, parum est, impune male fecisse, nisi deinde faciundi licentia eripitur: et vobis aeterna sollicitudo remanebit, cum intellegitis, aut serviendum esse, aut per manus libertatem retinendam. Nam fidei quidem, aut concordiae quae spes? dominari illi volunt, vos liberi esse; facere illi injurias, vos prohibere: postremo sociis vestris veluti hostibus, hostibus pro sociis utuntur. ³Potestne in tam divorsis mentibus pax, aut amicitia esse? Quare moneo hortorque, ne tantum scelus impunitum omittatis. Non ⁴peculatus aerarii factus est, neque per vim sociis erectae pecuniae: quae, quamquam gravia, tamen consuetudine jam pro nihilo habentur. Hosti acerrumo prodita senati auctoritas, proditum imperium vestrum: domi militiaeque respublica venalis fuit. Quae nisi quaesita erunt, ni vindicatum in noxios, quid reliquum, nisi ut illis, qui ea fecere, obedientes vivamus? nam impune quae libet facere, ⁵id est regem esse. Neque ego, Quirites, hortor, ut malitis civis vestros perperam, quam recte fecisse;

¹ Casura esset. Compare Conspiracy of Catiline, chap. 52. "Ne, ista vobis mansuetudo et misericordia in miseriam vertet." The phrase in perniciem casura esset may be rendered, "would end in your own ruin."

² Quantum importunitatis habent. Complete the construction as follows: Pro tanta importunitate quantum importunitatis habent, "Such is their overbearing insolence." Precisely analogous to this is the use of the relative in such phrases as the following: Quae tua est virtus expugnabis, "Such is your valour," &c.; i. e. ea virtute quae virtus tua est, expugnabis. So, Cujus lenitatis est Galba promisit, (Tac. Hist. 4. 37.), "Galba, with his usual lenity, promised."

³ Potestne in tam divorsis mentibus, &c. "Can there be peace or friendship between minds actuated by such opposite sentiments?"

⁴ Peculatus aerarii, "embezzlement of the public money." Compare Asconius (in Act. 1. in Verr.) "Peculator (est) qui furtum facit pecuniae publicae."

⁵ Id est regem esse. The more usual form of expression would sed ne, ignoscendo malis, bonos perditum eatis. Ad hoc, in republica multo praestat beneficii quam maleficii immemorem esse : bonus tantummodo segnior fit, ubi neglegas ; at malus improbior. ¹Ad hoc, si injuriae non sint, haud saepe auxilii egeas."

XXXII. HAEC atque alia hujuscemodi saepe dicundo, Memmius populo persuadet, uti L. Cassius, qui tum praetor erat, ad Jugurtham mitteretur, ²interposita fide publica, ³Romam duceret ; quo facilius, indicio regis, Scauri et reliquorum, quos pecuniae captae arcessabant, delicta patefierent. Dum haec Romae geruntur, qui in Numidia relict i Bestia exercitui praerant, secuti morem imperatoris, plurima et flagitiosissima facinora fecere. Fuere qui, auro corrupti, elephantos Jugurthae traderent : alii perfugas ⁴vendere : pars ex ⁵pacatis praedas agebant : tanta vis avaritia in animos eorum, veluti tabes, invaserat. At Cassius, ⁶perlata rogatione a C. Memmio, ac perculta omni nobilitate, be rex esse, but we may suppose eum to be understood before esse. The term rex is here equivalent to "tyrant."

¹ Ad hoc, si injuriae non sint, &c. The idea intended to be conveyed is this: If you punish the bad, you deter from the commission of offences; and if offences be not committed, you will seldom need the aid of the good for your protection, and will consequently be under no very strong obligation to bestow favours upon them for their services.

² Interposita fide publica, "the public faith being pledged for his personal safety."

³ Romam. Some editions have eumque expressed before Romam. It is more in accordance, however, with the style of Sallust to have it understood.

⁴ Vendere. Some editions have venderent, and of course understand qui after alii.

⁵ Pacatis. Understand regionibus.

⁶ Perlata rogatione a C. Memmio, "the bill proposed by C. Memmius being carried through;" i. e. having become a law. Compare note 4. page 208. of this narrative.

ad Jugurtham proficiscitur : ei timido, et ¹ex conscientia diffidenti rebus suis, persuadet, “ ²quo se populo Romano dedidisset, ne vim, quam misericordiam experiri mallet.” Privatim praeterea fidem suam interponit, quam ille non minoris, quam publicam ducebat : talis ea tempestate fama de Cassio.

XXXIII. Igitur Jugurtha, ³contra decus regium, ⁴cultu quam maxume miserabili, cum Cassio Romam venit : ac, tamen etsi in ipso ⁵magna vis animi erat, confirmatus ab omnibus quorum potentia aut scelere cuncta gesserat, C. Baebium tribunum plebis magna mercede parat, cuius impudentia ⁶contra jus et injurias omnis munitus foret. At C. Memmius, advocata concione ; quamquam regi infesta plebes erat, et pars in ⁷vincula duci jubebat, pars, ni socios sceleris aperiret, more majorum, de hoste supplicium sumi ; dignitati, quam irae magis consulens, sedare motus, et animos mollire, ⁸postremo confirmare, fidem publicam per sese inviolatam fore. Post, ubi silentium coepit; producto Jugurtha, ⁹verba facit, Romae Numidiaeque facinora ejus

¹ Ex conscientia, “ from a consciousness of guilt.”

² Quo. In the sense of quoniam, “ since.” Compare Cortius, ad Cat. 34.

³ Contra decus regium, “ in a manner unbecoming a king.”

⁴ Cultu quam maxime miserabili, “ with an exterior the most calculated to excite compassion.” So, among the Romans, an accused person (reus) was wont to change his dress, lay aside every kind of ornament, let his hair and beard grow, and go round in this state to solicit the favour of the people.

⁵ Magna vis animi, “ great firmness of purpose.”

⁶ Contra jus et injurias omnis, “ against the arm of justice and all personal violence.

⁷ Vincula, “ prison.”

⁸ Postremo confirmare, &c. “ finally assured them that, as far as his exertions could effect it, the plighted faith of the republic should remain inviolate.”

⁹ Verba facit, “ he addresses him.” Understand Memmius.

memorat, scelera in patrem, fratresque ostendit: “¹ quibus juvantibus, quibusque ministris egerit, quamquam intellegat populus Romanus; tamen velle manifesta magis ex illo habere: si ²vera aperiret, in fide et clementia populi Romani magnam spem illi sitam: sin reticeat, non sociis saluti fore; sese suasque spes corrupturum.”

XXXIV. DEIN, ubi Memmius dicundi finem fecit, et Jugurtha respondere jussus est, C. Baebius tribunus plebis, quem pecunia corruptum supra diximus, regem tacere jubet: ac, tamen etsi multitudo, quae in concione aderat, vehementer accensa, ³terrebat eum cla-

¹ Quibus juvantibus, &c. “that although the Roman people are well aware by whose aid and by whose instrumentality he has acted.”

² Vera. In some editions verum.

³ Terrebat eum, &c. “sought to terrify him by their outeries, by their threatening gestures, oftentimes by their impetuous movements, and by all the other means which anger is accustomed to employ, still his bold and unblushing effrontery triumphed.” A single tribune might in this way, by his veto, or intercession, thwart the proceedings of his colleagues, and oppose an effectual barrier to the wishes of the people. Those who did so, however, might afterwards be brought to trial by their colleagues. Tiberius Gracchus, when his colleague Octavius opposed the passage of the Agrarian law, resorted to the desperate expedient of publicly deposing him by the suffrages of the people.—The phrase Quae amat fieri (literally, “which anger loves should be put in operation”) is imitated from the Greek idiom φίλεις γένεσθαι. Quintilian (9. 3. 17.), in speaking of Sallust’s frequent imitations of the Greek idiom, cites this very phrase: “Ex Graeco vero translata vel Sallustii plurima, quale est, Vulgus amat fieri.” Compare Horace, Carm. 3. 16. 9.

“ Aurum per medios ire satellites Et perrumpere amat saxa.”— “ Swifter than lightning’s winged force,

All-powerful gold can speed its course;
Through watchful guards its passage make,
And joy through solid walls to break.”—Francis.

The term voltu, in the passage of Sallust to which this note refers, more, voltu, saepe impetu atque aliis omnibus, quae ira fieri amat, vicit tamen impudentia. Ita populus iudicio habitus ex concione decessit; Jugurthae Bestiaeque et ceteris, quos illa quaestio exagitabat, animi augescunt.

XXXV. EA erat tempestate Romae Numida quidam, nomine Massiva, Gulussae filius, Masinissae nepos; qui, quia, in dissensione regum, Jugurthae aduersus fuerat, dedita Cirta et Adherbale interfecto, profugus ex Africa abierat. Huic Sp. Albinus, qui proximo anno post Bestiam cum Q. Minucio Rufo consulatum gerebat, persuadet, quoniam ex stirpe Masinissae sit,¹ Jugurtham ob scelera invidia cum metu urgeat; regnum Numidia ab senatu petat. Avidus consul² belli gerundi,³ move quae quam senescere omnia malebat: ipsi provincia Numidia; Minucio⁴ Macedonia evenerat. Quae postquam Massiva agitare coepit, neque Jugurthae in amicis satis praesidii est, quod alludes not merely to the countenance, but to the entire person, and is used, perhaps in its earliest import, to denote any mode of expressing our wishes and feelings, whether by look or by gesture.

¹ Jugurtham ob scelera, &c. “and since public odium, together with private fear on his own part, pressed heavy upon Jugurtha.”

² Belli gerundi, “of carrying on some war.” Of having some war to carry on in which he might signalize himself.

³ Movere. Some editions have moveri. The present construction, however, though a harsh one, is characteristic of the style of Sallust. Movere governs omnia understood, and omnia expressed is the accusative before senescere. “The consul rather wished to throw all things into agitation, than that all should begin to grow torpid in the arms of repose.”

⁴ Macedonia. An extensive country to the north of Greece, having Epirus and Thessaly to the south and south-west. It was memorable as the native country of Philip and Alexander. Macedonia, as a Roman province, however, was more extensive than Macedonia proper, since it comprehended within its limits Thessaly and Illyricum, and reached consequently from sea to sea.

eorum alium conscientia, alium mala fama et ¹timor impediens; Bomilcari, proximo ac maxime fido sibi, imperat, “ pretio, sicuti multa confecerat, insidiatores Massivae paret, ac ²maxime occulte; sin id parum procedat, quovis modo Numidam interficiat.” Bomilcar mature regis mandata exsequitur: et, per homines talis negotii artifices, ³itinera egressusque ejus, postremo loca atque tempora cuncta explorat: deinde, ubi res postulabat, insidias tendit. Igitur unus ex eo numero qui ad caudem parati, ⁴paullo inconsultius Massivam adgreditur, illum obtruncat: sed ipse deprehensus, multis hortantibus, et imprimis Albino consule, ⁵indictum profitetur. ⁶Fit reus magis ex aequo bono-

¹ Timor. Some editions have timor animi.

² Maxime occulte, “secretly, if possible.” Compare chap. 46. of this narrative: “Uti Jugurtham maxime vivum, sin id parum procedat,” &c.

³ Itinera egressusque, &c. “ascertains his accustomed routes; his goings out; in fine, all his places of resort, and his entire mode of spending the day.” Egressus refers to his occasional departures from the city, as well as to his walks within the same. We have endeavoured to express it by a literal, though, it must be confessed, inelegant, phrase.

⁴ Paullo inconsultius, “a little too rashly.” With rather less precaution than he should have done. Paulum, paulo, paululum, paululo, before the comparative, lower the meaning; whereas aliquanto implies the difference to be considerable. Thus paulo doctior, “but little more learned;” aliquanto doctior, “a great deal more learned.”

⁵ Indictum profitetur, “makes a full disclosure.” Some render the phrase, “promises to make a disclosure;” this, however, is incorrect. Compare Tacitus (Ann. 6. 3.), “Summum supplicium decernebatur, ni professus indicium foret.—If the miscreant had not prevented his fate, by offering to make important discoveries, the senate was ready to adjudge him to instant death.”—Murphy.

⁶ Fit reus, &c. “Bomilcar, one of the retinue of him who had come to Rome on the public faith being pledged for his safety, is put to his trial, more in conformity with what was strictly just, and con-

que, quam ex jure gentium, Bomilcar, comes ejus qui Romam fide publica venerat. At Jugurtha, manifestus tanti sceleris, non prius omisit contra verum niti, quam ¹animum advortit, supra gratiam atque pecuniam suam invidiam facti esse. Igitur, quamquam ²in priore actione ex amicis quinquaginta ³vades dederat; regno magis, quam vadibus consulens, clam in Numidiam Bomilcarem dimittit, veritus, ne reliquos popularis metus invaderet parendi sibi, si de illo supplicium sumptum foret. Et ipse paucis diebus ⁴profectus est, jussus ab senatu Italia decadere. Sed, postquam Roma egressus est, fertur saepe eo tacitus respiciens postremo dixisse, ⁵URBEM VENALEM ET MATURE PERITURAM, SI EMPTOREM INVENERIT!

ducive to the public good, than in accordance with the law of nations." By the law of nations, the retinue, not only of ambassadors, but of all persons to whom the public faith had been pledged, were exempted from injury. Grotius (De Jure, B. et P. 18. 8.) proves this to have been an early law among the Romans, from one of the old forms used by the Feciales.

¹ Animum advortit. An archaism for animadvertisit.

² In priore actione, "in the first stage of the proceeding;" i. e. when first put to his trial; or when, to adopt our own phraseology, the case first came into court.

³ Vades, "as sureties." Vas and praes agree in being applicable to one who becomes bound for another, but differ in respect to the circumstances of the person for whom the obligation is incurred. Vas supposes the person for whom the security has been given, to have been guilty of a capital crime, or of some criminal offence generally: Praes denotes, on the other hand, the bail or surety given in a civil suit. Praes is derived from praestare, as the surety undertakes to perform what another may fail in. "Praes est," says Varro, "qui a magistratu interrogatur in publicum ut praestet; a quo, quum responderit, dicitur praes." De L. L. 5. 7.—Hill's Synonymes, p. 750. 4to ed.

⁴ Profectus est. In some editions eodem profectus.

⁵ Urbem venalem, &c. "Ah, venal city! and destined soon to fall, could it but find a purchaser!" The common mode of render-

XXXVI. INTERIM Albinus, renovato bello, commeatum, stipendum, alia quae militibus usui forent, ¹maturat in Africam portare; ac statim ipse profectus, uti ante comitia, quod tempus haud longe aberat, armis, aut ditione, aut quovis modo bellum conficeret. At contra Jugurtha trahere omnia, et alias, deinde alias morae caussas facere: polliceri ditionem, ac deinde metum simulare: ²instanti cedere, et paulo post, ne sui diffiderent, instare: ita belli modo, modo pacis mora, consulem ludificare. Ac fuere, qui tum Albinum haud ignarum consilii regis existumarent, neque ³ex tanta properantia tam facile tractum bellum secor-ing this passage entirely destroys its beauty: "That the city was a venal one, and destined," &c. as if urbem were the accusative before esse understood. On the contrary, the whole is meant as an emphatic exclamation on the part of Jugurtha, accompanied with a corresponding gesture. Sallust here quotes apparently the very words of Jugurtha, for they are given by Livy (Epit. 64.) in the same form, except that the interjection is prefixed: "O urbem venalem," &c.—In relation, however, to the departure of Jugurtha, Livy differs essentially from Sallust, since he makes the king himself to have been put to trial for the murder of Massiva, and to have saved himself only by secretly escaping from the city. "Jugurtha . . . propter caudem, admissam in regulum quemdam, nomine Massivam, qui regnum ejus populo Romano invisi affectabat, Romae interfecatum, quum periclitaretur, causam capitulis dicere jussus, clam profugit, et, cedens urbe, fertur dixisse: O urbem venalem, et cito perituram, si emtorem invenerit!—Jugurtha . . . murders Massiva, who sought, through the hatred which he saw the Romans bore to Jugurtha, to procure his kingdom for himself. Being ordered to stand his trial, he escapes; and is reported to have said, on going away, 'O venal city! doomed to quick perdition could but a purchaser be found!'"—Baker.

¹ Maturat. In some editions mature, which will make portare the historical infinitive.

² Instanti. Scil. Albino.

³ Ex tanta properantia, "after so much haste;" viz. on the part dia magis, quam dolo, crederent. Sed postquam, dilapso tempore, comitiorum dies adventabat, Albinus, Aulo fratre in castris ¹pro praetore relicto, Romam decessit.

XXXVII. EA tempestate Romae seditionibus tribuniciis atrociter respublica agitabatur. P. Lucullus et L. Annus, tribuni plebis, resistantibus collegis, ²continuare magistratum nitebantur : quae dissensio totius anni comitia impediebat. Ea mora in spem adductus Aulus, quem pro praetore in castris relictum supra diximus, aut conficiundi belli, aut terrore exercitus ab rege ³pecuniae capiundae, milites mense Januario ex hibernis in expeditionem evocat : magnis itineribus, hieme aspera, pervenit ad oppidum ⁴Suthul, ubi regis thesauri erant. Quod quamquam et saevitia temporis, et opportunitate loci, neque capi, neque obsideri poterat, ⁵(nam circum murum, situm in praerupti montis of Albinus, in his preparations for, and during the earlier stages of, the campaign.

¹ Pro praetore, “as acting commander-in-chief.” Some editions have the compound form propraetore.

² Continuare magistratum, “to continue their magistracy;” i. e. to continue themselves in office.

³ Pecuniae capiundae, “of extorting money.”

⁴ Suthul. A town of Numidia, of which mention is made only here and in Priscian, (5. 2. vol. i. p. 173. ed. Krehl.) The latter writer, however, gives no information whatever about its site, but merely comments on the form of the name. “In ul quoque unum reperitur masculinum Latinum, consul; duo communia praesul, exul, et barbara Suthul, Muthul.” Barbié du Bocage suspects that this town is the same with that called Sufetala (now Sbaïla) in the Itin. Antonini. The name Suthul is said to signify “the town of eagles.” Compare also note 2. page 170. of this narrative.

⁵ Nam circum murum, &c. “for a plain rendered miry by the winter rains, had spread a marsh around the walls, which were situated at the foot of a craggy mountain;” i. e. the town itself was built on the higher parts of the mountain, while the main fortifications were erected below at the base. Extremo cannot by any possible extremo, planicies limosa hiemalibus aquis paludem fecerat), tamen, aut simulandi gratia, quo regi formidinem adderet, aut cupidine caecus, ¹vineas agere, ²aggerem jacere, alia, quae incepto usui forent, prope rare.

XXXVIII. At Jugurtha, cognita ³vanitate atque imperitia legati, ⁴subdolus augere amentiam: missitare supplicantis legatos: ipse, quasi vitabundus, per saltuosa loca et tramites exercitum ductare. Denique Aulum spe pactionis perpulit, uti, relicto Suthule, in abditas regiones sese, veluti cedentem, ⁵insequeretur.

mode be here made to signify the top of the mountain, or why should Aulus have raised a mound and erected vineae? Nor can the town itself be supposed to have been situated immediately behind the walls at the foot of the mountain; since, in that event, how could the craggy sides of the mountain prove any additional source of defence to the town erected at their base, and why would they be mentioned?

¹ Vineas. Some editions read as follows: "Caecus, ob thesauros, oppidi potiundi, vineas," &c. Burnouf states that this is the lection of all his manuscripts. We have omitted the words in question, with Cortius and others, as savouring of interpolation. "Eamdem rem," observes Cortius, "iisdem fere verbis supra memoraverat."

² Aggerem. The agger, or mount, was raised from the inner line, and gradually advanced towards the besieged place, always increasing in height, till it equalled or overtopped the wall. It was composed of earth, stone, wood, and hurdles. The mount which Caesar raised against Avaricum (or Bourges) was 330 feet broad, and 80 feet high. The agger was secured by towers of different stories, from which the defenders of the ramparts were annoyed with missiles by the besiegers.

³ Vanitate, "the weakness."

⁴ Subdolus augere amentiam, "craftily strove to augment his foolish presumption."

⁵ Insequeretur. After this word, in some editions, an entire clause follows: "ita delicta occultiora fore." We have adopted the arrangement of Cortius, by which the clause in question is placed lower in the chapter, after uti desererent. Of the propriety of this collocation few can doubt. "Mirum epiphonema in hoc loco," exclaims Cortius, "nec imperitus pedagogus quispiam unquam

Interea per homines callidos die noctuque exercitum intentabat: centuriones ducesque ²turmarum, partim uti transfugerent, [corrumperet]; alii, signo dato, locum uti desererent: ita delicta occultiora fore. Quae postquam ex sententia ³instruit, intempsa nocte, de improviso multitudine Numidarum Auli castra circumvenit. Milites Romani, tumultu perculti insolito, arma capere alii, alii se abdere, pars territos confirmare; trepidare omnibus locis: vis magna hostium; coelum nocte atque nubibus obscuratum; ⁴periculum anceps: postremo fugere, an manere, tutius foret, in incerto erat. Sed ex eo numero, quos paullo ante corruptos diximus, cohors una ⁵Ligurum, cum duabus turmis ⁶Thracum, et paucis gregariis militibus, transiere ad scripsit. Cujus delicta? Jugurthaene an Auli? Cur occultiora; aut quae omnino? Mihi haec omnia turpissime transjecta videntur, et ab imperitis scribis, aut correctoribus huc potissimum adscita, quod aliquo modo cum abditis regionibus connectionem habere crederent."

¹ Tentabat, "he tampered with."

² Turmarum. A turma or troop of horse contained thirty men, and was divided into three decuriae or bodies of ten. Varro's etymology is rather forced: "Turma factum e terma: quod ter deni equites ex tribus tribubus siebant."

³ Instruit. In some editions instruxit. The present tense imparts more animation to the sentence.

⁴ Periculum anceps. "On all sides danger."

⁵ Ligurum, "of Ligurians." Liguria extended from the Maritime Alps to the river Macra, which divided it from Italia Propria. It corresponded to the modern Piedmont, Genoa, and the eastern continuation of the Apennines. The Ligurians, or Ligyes, however, had spread themselves also, according to Scylax and other authorities, along the southern shores of Gaul, as far as the Pyrenees. Compare Mannert, Geogr. der Gr. und Roemer, vol. ix. p. 244.

⁶ Thracum, "of Thracians." Thrace lay to the east and north-east of Macedonia. It now forms a part of Turkey in Europe, and is commonly known by the name of Roumelia or Romania, though Roumelia in strictness is an appellation applied by the Turks to the whole of Greece, (Roum-ili).

regem: et ¹centurio primi pili tertiae legionis, per munitionem, quam, uti defenderet, acceperat, locum hostibus introeundi dedit: eaque Numidae cuncti irrupere. Nostri foeda fuga, plerique abjectis armis, proximum collem occupavere. Nox atque praeda castrorum hostes, ²quo minus victoria uterentur, remorata sunt. Dein Jugurtha postero die cum Aulo in colloquio verba facit: “ tametsi ipsum cum exercitu fame, ferro clausum tenet, tamen se humanarum rerum memorem, si secum foedus faceret, incolumis omnis ³sub jugum missurum: praeterea, uti diebus decem

¹ Centurio primi pili, “the chief centurion.” Each Roman legion was divided into ten cohorts; each cohort into three maniples; and each maniple into two centuries. So that there were thirty maniples and sixty centuries in a legion. There were two centurions in each maniple, called by the same name, but distinguished by the title prior, “former,” and posterior, “latter,” because the one was chosen and ranked before the other. The centurion of the first century of the first maniple of the Triarii, was called Centurio primi pili, or Primus Pilus, or Primopilus, &c. He presided over all the other centurions, and had the charge of the eagle (aquila) or chief standard of the legion; whereby he obtained both profit and dignity, being ranked among the equites, and having a place in the council of war with the consul and tribunes of the soldiers. The centurion of the second century of the first maniple of the Triarii was called Primipilus posterior. So the two centurions of the second maniple of the Triarii were called Prior centurio, and Posterior centurio, secundi pili; and so on to the tenth, the two centurions of which were styled Centurio decimi pili prior, and posterior. In like manner, Primus princeps prior, and posterior; Secundus princeps prior, and posterior, in speaking of the principes or second rank; and Primus hastatus, &c. in reference to the hastati or first rank. Thus there was a large field for promotion in the Roman army; from a common soldier to a centurion; and from being the lowest centurion of the tenth maniple of the hastati (decimus hastatus posterior) to the rank of Primipilus.

² Quo minus victoria uterentur, “from making a proper use of their victory.”

³ Sub jugum. Two spears stuck in the ground, and crossed by Numidia decederet." Quae quamquam gravia et flagitii plena erant, tamen, quia mortis metu ¹mutabant, sicuti regi libuerat, pax convenit.

XXXIX. SED, ubi ea Romae comperta sunt, ²metus atque moeror civitatem invasere: pars dolere pro gloria imperii; pars insolita rerum bellicarum timere libertati: Aulo omnes infesti, ac maxume qui bello saepe praeclari fuerant, ³quod armatus dedecore potius, quam manu salutem quaesiverat. Ob ea consul Albinus ex another at the top, like a gallows, were called jugum. Under this the vanquished army passed disarmed, by way of ignominy, and in token of subjection.

¹ Mutabant. Some editions read nutabant, "they wavered," or "were irresolute." Cortius prefers mutabant, but thinks that the verb should be used in a passive signification; for which there is no necessity whatever, since ea may very well be understood with the active form, and the construction will be characteristic of the style of Sallust. The clause may therefore be rendered, "since they exchanged the fear of death for them." The meaning of the historian is this: the conditions proposed by Jugurtha were, it is true, "galling and most ignominious," (gravia et flagitii plena); but, on the other hand, the fear of death overcame every consideration of duty and honour, and the Roman soldiery, therefore, were induced by this fear, (metu, the instrument or means which effected the exchange, and consequently in the ablative), to accept the proffered terms of surrender; (i. e. they caused these terms to come over from the individual who proposed them, and take effect upon themselves: mutabant ea).

² Metus atque moeror. "No prince," observes Mr. Dunlop, "except Mithridates, gave so much employment to the army of the Romans as Jugurtha. In the course of no war in which they had ever been engaged, not even the second Carthaginian, were the people more desponding, and in none were they more elated with ultimate success."—Dunlop's History of Roman Literature, vol. ii. p. 152. Lond. ed.

³ Quod armatus, &c. "because, with arms in his hands, he had sought safety rather by a disgraceful surrender, than a valiant resistance."

delicto fratris invidiam, ¹ ac deinde periculum timens, senatum de foedere consulebat: et tamen interim exercitui supplementum scribere: ab sociis et nomine Latino auxilia arcessere: denique modis omnibus festinare. Senatus ita, uti par fuerat, decernit, SUO ATQUE POPULI INJUSSU NULLUM POTUISSE FOEDUS FIERI. Consul impeditus a tribunis plebis ne, quas paraverat copias, secum portaret, paucis diebus in Africam proficiscitur: nam omnis exercitus, uti conve- nerat, Numidia deductus, in provincia hiemabat. Post- quam eo venit; ² quamquam persecuti Jugurtham et mederi fraternae invidiae animus ardebat; cognitis milibus, quos praeter fugam, ³ soluto imperio, licentia atque lascivia corruperat, ⁴ ex copia rerum statuit, nihil sibi agitandum.

XL. INTEREA Romae C. Mamilius Limetanus, tribunus plebis, rogationem ad populum promulgat, “ uti quaereretur in eos, quorum consilio Jugurtha senati decreta ⁵ neglegisset; qui que ab eo in legationibus, ¹ Ac deinde periculum, “ and consequent danger;” i. e. a public prosecution, for having entrusted the command of the army to one so totally unfit to take charge of it.

² Quamquam persecuti, &c. “ although his bosom burned to pursue Jugurtha, and allay the odium to which his brother’s misconduct had given rise.”

³ Soluto imperio, “ all discipline being relaxed.” Not only the disgraceful retreat from Numidia, which was in truth an actual flight, but licentiousness also, and debauchery, the results of a relaxed and feeble discipline, had completely prostrated the martial spirit of the Roman soldiery.

⁴ Ex copia rerum, “ considering all the circumstances of the case.”

⁵ Neglegisset. An archaism for neglexisset. Aemilius Macer, as cited by Priscian (10. 6. vol. i. p. 496. ed. Krehl.), and by Diomedes (p. 366.), uses neglegerit by a similar archaism for neglexerit. Thus Priscian remarks, “ Intelligo, intellexi: quamvis Aemilius Macer, in sextodecimo Annalium: ‘Omnium nostrum neglegerit auctoritatem,’ pro neglexerit ait.”

aut imperiis pecunias accepissent; qui elephantos, quique perfugas tradidissent; item qui de pace, aut bello, cum hostibus pactiones fecissent.”¹ Huic rogationi, partim consci sibi, alii ex partium invidia pericula metuentes, quoniam aperte resistere non poterant, ²quoniam illa et alia talia placere sibi faterentur, occulte per amicos, ac maxime per homines nominis Latini et socios Italicos impedimenta parabant. Sed plebes, incredibile memoratu est, quam intenta fuerit, quantaque vi rogationem ³jusserit, decreverit, voluerit; magis odio nobilitatis, cui mala illa parabantur, quam cura reipublicae: tanta lubido in partibus. Igitur, ceteris metu percursis, M. Scaurus, quem legatum Bestiae supra ⁴docuimus, inter laetitiam plebis, et suorum fugam, ⁵trepida etiam tum civitate, cum ex ⁶Mamilia roga-

¹ Huic rogationi, &c. The dative is to be connected in construction with impedimenta parabant, and not with resistere, which has ei understood.

² Quin illa et alia talia, &c. “without, at the same time, confessing that these, and other misdemeanours of a similar nature, found favour in their eyes.” Their opposing the passage of the bill openly would have been construed into an admission, on their part, that they themselves would have acted in the same way with the guilty, had they been placed in similar circumstances.

³ Jusserit, decreverit, voluerit. Some editions read merely jusserit, considering the other two verbs as pleonastic. This is far from being the case. The three verbs are purposely used by the historian to denote, by their almost synonymous force, the ardour of the people in ordering, decreeing, willing the passage of the bill. The absence of the copulative too, imparts additional vigour and rapidity to the clause.

⁴ Docuimus. Some editions have memoravimus.

⁵ Trepida etiam tum civitate, “the city being even as yet not free from confusion.” The excitement produced by the triumph of the popular party and the discomfiture of their opponents remaining still unallayed.

⁶ Mamilia rogatione. In some editions Mamiliana.

tione tres ¹quaesitores rogarentur, effecerat, uti ipse in eo numero crearetur. Sed ²quaestio exercita aspere violenterque, ex rumore, et lubidine plebis : ut saepe nobilitatem, sic ea tempestate plebem ex secundis rebus insolentia ceperat.

XLI. CETERUM ³mos partium popularium et senati factionum, ac deinde omnium ⁴malarum artium, paucis ante annis Romae ortus, otio et abundantia earum rerum, quae prima mortales ducunt. Nam, ante Carthaginem deletam, populus et senatus Romanus placide modesteque inter se rempublicam tractabant : neque gloriae, neque dominationis certamen inter civis erat : ⁵metus hostilis in bonis artibus civitatem retinebat. Sed, ubi illa formido mentibus discessit ; ⁶scilicet ea,

¹ Quaesitores, " commissioners."

² Quaestio exercita, &c. " the inquiry was conducted with harshness and severity, under the guidance of mere rumour and popular caprice." In the absence of substantial proof, mere idle rumours and popular feeling were made to supply its place.

³ Mos partium popularium, &c. The words mos partium would alone suffice to convey the meaning of Sallust, and from popularium to factionum, both inclusive, might be safely omitted. This has induced some of the best commentators to consider the passage, as it now stands, extremely corrupt. The import of the words, if we retain from popularium to factionum, will be this : " The custom of having a party of the people and another in the senate," i. e. the existence of a popular and an aristocratic party.

⁴ Malarum artium, " evil practices."

⁵ Metus hostilis. For metus hostium.

⁶ Scilicet ea, &c. Gruter, Cortius, and other commentators, suspect a corruption of the text in this passage, and consider scilicet superfluous. The Bipont editor changes scilicet into illoco. No alteration, we conceive, is necessary. Scilicet is used by the historian as an affirmative particle, and we may render the clause as follows : " Those things which prosperity is accustomed to produce, licentiousness, namely, and pride, came naturally upon them." Licentiousness and pride, the usual attendants of prosperity, naturally made their appearance.

quae secundae res amant, lascivia atque superbia incessare. Ita, quod in advorsis rebus optaverant, otium, postquam adepti sunt, ¹asperius acerbiusque fuit. Namque coepere nobilitas ²dignitatem, populus libertatem in lubidinem vertere: sibi quisque ³ducere, trahere, rapere. Ita omnia in duas partis abstracta sunt; respublica, quae media fuerat, dilacerata. Ceterum nobilitas factione magis pollebat: plebis vis, ⁴soluta atque dis-

¹ Asperius acerbiusque fuit. Understand quam ipsae res adversae, "proved a harsher and more galling visitation than adversity itself had been."

² Dignitatem. An elegant zeugma operates in lubidinem, which has one meaning when connected with dignitatem, and another when joined in construction with libertatem. Thus, dignitatem in lubidinem vertere means "to convert their high rank into an instrument of tyranny;" and libertatem in lubidinem vertere "to degrade their freedom into licentiousness." Compare the words of Cortius ad loc. "Nobilitas dignitatem in lubidinem vertit, quando ea ad lubidinem abutebatur, quam egregie ostendit Cat. cap. 38. h. e. quando specie dignitatis conservanda dominationem, superbiam, crudelitatem sibi muniebat. Populus libertatem lubidinosus exercebat, dum honesto ejus nomine optima instituta allatrabat, seditiones exercebat, omnique licentia patrocinata, nobiles senatumque, qua poterat, vexabat."

³ Ducere, "dishonestly acquired." Ducere here denotes fraud, while rapere and trahere imply violence. These words, arranged as they are in the text, are employed to express the progress of corruption, commencing with dishonest and clandestine practices, and rising gradually to bold and unpunished violence.

⁴ Soluta atque dispersa in multitudine, "disunited and divided among a large number." Cortius places a comma after dispersa, and makes in multitudine equivalent to quamvis multi essent, "notwithstanding their numbers." Burnouf adopts the same interpretation. We cannot, however, perceive the propriety of such a mode of explanation. The meaning of the historian is evidently this: that the nobility, although inferior in numerical strength to their opponents, were, notwithstanding, able, by skilful management and party organization, to accomplish far more than the disunited commons, the very excess of whose numbers forbade the idea of any close political consolidation.

persa in multitudine, minus poterat : paucorum arbitrio belli domique agitabatur : penes eosdem aerarium, provinciae, magistratus, gloriae triumphique erant : populus militia atque inopia urguebatur ; praedas bellicas imperatores cum paucis diripiebant. Interea parentes, aut parvi liberi militum, ut quisque potentiori confinis erat, sedibus pellebantur. Ita cum potentia avaritia, sine modo modestiaque, invadere, polluere et vastare omnia ; nihil pensi, neque sancti habere, quoad semet ipsa praecipitavit. Nam ubi primum [¹ex nobilitate] reperti sunt, qui veram gloriam injustae potentiae anteponerent ; moveri civitas, et ²permixtio civilis, quasi discessio terrae, oriri coepit.

XLII. NAM postquam Tiberius et C. Graccus, ³quorum majores Punico atque aliis bellis multum reipublicae addiderant, vindicare plebem in libertatem, et paucorum scelera patefacere coepere ; nobilitas noxia, atque eo perculsa, modo per socios ac nomen Latinum, interdum per equites Romanos, quos spes societatis a plebe dimoverat, Gracchorum actionibus obviam ierat ; et primo Tiberium, dein paucos post annos ⁴eadem ingredientem Caium, tribunum alterum, alterum triumvirum ⁵coloniis deducendis, cum M. Fulvio

¹ Ex nobilitate. These words are thought by the best commentators to be a mere interpolation, and ought not, as is done by some, to be referred to the Gracchi, who, although of noble origin, are yet always placed by Sallust in opposition to the nobility and on the side of the commons.

² Permixtio civilis, &c. "a civil commotion, like a parting asunder of the earth." Some editions have dissentio civilis quasi permixtio, &c.

³ Quorum majores. Tiberius and Caius Gracchus were the sons of Tiberius Gracchus, and grandsons, on the side of their mother Cornelia, of the elder Scipio Africanus.

⁴ Eadem ingredientem, "entering upon the same career."

⁵ Colonii deducendis, "for planting colonies." Colonies were cities or lands which Roman citizens were sent to inhabit. They were transplanted commonly by three commissioners (triumviri);

Flacco ferro ¹necaverant. Et sane Graccis, cupidine victoriae, haud satis moderatus animus fuit. Sed ²bono vinci satius est, quam malo more injuriam vincere. Igitur ea victoria nobilitas ex lubidine sua usa, ³multos mortalis ferro aut fuga extinxit; plusque in reliquum sibi timoris, quam potentiae, addidit. Quae res plerumque magnas civitatis pessum dedit; dum alteri alteros vincere quovis modo, et victos acerbius ulcisci volunt. Sed, de studiis partium et omnibus civitatis moribus si singulatim, aut pro magnitudine, parem disserere, tempus, quam res, maturius ⁴deserat. Quamobrem ad inceptum redeo.

XLIII. Post Auli foedus, exercitusque nostri faemam fugam, Q. Metellus et M. Silanus, consules designati, [provincias] inter se ⁵paraverunt: Metelloque sometimes by five, ten, or more. The people determined in what manner the lands were to be divided, and to whom. The new colony marched to their destined place in form of an army, with colours flying. By this means a provision was made for the needy citizens, and an additional security provided against insurrection and rebellion.

¹ Necaverant, "had murdered." A strong expression, betraying the party feelings of the writer too plainly. Compare, in relation to the transactions mentioned in the text, note 2, page 182. and note 1, page 183.

² Bono vinci satius est, &c. "it is better for a good man to be overcome by his opponents," &c.

³ Multos mortalis ferro aut fuga extinxit, "destroyed many individuals by the sword, or deprived them of all their civil rights by banishment." A remarkable instance of the zeugma. The verb extinxit should properly be joined only with ferro, but it is made to connect itself, under a new meaning, also with fuga.

⁴ Deserat. In some editions deficeret.

⁵ Paraverunt. In some editions partiverant. The reason why some have preferred partiverant to paraverunt in this passage is because evenerant follows, which they refer to a drawing of lots, on the part of the consuls, for their respective provinces. Gronovius, however, has proved, from a comparison of several passages of Livy, that the verb evenire does not always carry with it the idea of chance or

Numidia evenerat, acri viro, et quamquam ¹adverso populi partium, fama tamen ²aequabili et inviolata. Is ubi primum magistratum ingressus est, alia omnia sibi ³cum collega ratus, ad bellum, quod gesturus erat, animum intendit. Igitur diffidens veteri exercitui, milites scribere, praesidia undique arcessere: arma, tela, equos, cetera instrumenta militiae parare: ad hoc commatum affatim: denique omnia, quae ⁴bello vario et multarum rerum egenti usui esse solent. Ceterum ⁵ad ea patranda senati auctoritate socii nomenque Latinum, reges ultro auxilia mittere; postremo omnis civitas summo studio admitebatur. Itaque, ex sententia omnibus rebus paratis compositisque, in Numidiam proficiscitur, magna spe civium, cum propter bonas artis, lot, but refers sometimes to a simple arrangement among the parties. On this ground Cortius and others retain paraverunt in the present passage, with the meaning of "arranged."

¹ Adverso populi partium, "an opponent of the popular party." Adverso is here taken as a noun. Some editions have adverso populi partibus, making adverso an adjective.

² Aequabili et inviolata, "uniform and unimpeachable." As if Sallust had said aequabiliter inviolata; scil. inter nobiles et plebem.

³ Cum collega. Understand esse. An ellipsis of communia seems hardly required by the idiom of the language. The whole clause may be rendered, "having considered every thing else common to himself and his colleague." Sallust does not mean that Metellus neglected the other duties of the consulship, in order to give his whole attention to the war, supposing that his colleague would attend to every thing else; but that he foresaw he could not expect much assistance from him in these warlike preparations, and therefore paid more attention to them himself, though without neglecting at the same time, his general duties as consul.

⁴ Bello vario, &c. "in a war of a complicated character, and standing in need of many things." Beauzée renders it, "dans une guerre où la diversité des événements multiplie les besoins."

⁵ Ad ea patranda, &c. "for the accomplishment of these objects, the allies, and the Latin nation in consequence of a decree of the senate, kings of their own accord, sent aid."

tum maxime, quod advorsum divitias animum invictum gerebat; et avaritia magistratum ante id tempus in Numidia nostrae opes contusae, hostiumque auctae erant.

XLIV. SED, ubi in Africam venit, exercitus ei traditur ¹Sp. Albini pro consule, iners, imbellis, neque periculi, neque laboris patiens, lingua, quam manu, promtior, praedator ex sociis, et ipse praeda hostium, ²sine imperio et modestia habitus. Ita imperatori novo plus ex malis moribus sollicitudinis, quam ex copia militum auxillii, aut spei bonae accedebat. Statuit tamen Metellus, quamquam et ³aestivorum tempus comitiorum mora imminuerat, et exspectatione eventi civium animos intentos putabat, non prius bellum adtingere, quam, majorum disciplina, milites laborare coegisset. Nam Albinus, Auli fratris exercitusque clade percussus, postquam decreverat non egredi provincia, ⁴quantum temporis aestivorum in imperio fuit, plerumque milites stativis castris habebat: nisi cum odos, aut pabuli egestas locum mutare subegerat. Sed neque more militari vigiliae ⁵deducebantur: uti cuique lubebat, ab signis aberat. ⁶Lixae permixti cum militibus

¹ Sp. Albini pro consule. Understand agentis or imperantis; "acting (or commanding) in the stead of the consul;" i. e. as proconsul. Some editions have a Sp. Albino.

² Sine imperio et modestia habitus, "kept under no discipline or restraint."

³ Aestivorum, "of the summer campaign." Aestiva, strictly speaking, is an adjective like hiberna, and has castra understood. In Tacitus (Ann. I. 16. 2.) we have the ellipsis supplied: "Castris aestivis tres simul legiones habebantur."

⁴ Quantum temporis, &c. "during as much of the summer campaign as he was in command."

⁵ Deducabantur. Dducere is here used in the sense of diducere, (compare Cort. ad loc.), and the clause may be rendered, "the watches were not distributed according to military usage."

⁶ Lixae. Festus defines the lixæ as follows: "Lixæ, qui exercitum sequuntur, quaestus gratia: dicti quod extra ordinem sint ¹die noctuque vagabantur, et palantes agros vastare, ²villas expugnare, pecoris et mancipiorum praedas certantes agere; eaque mutare cum mercatoribus vino advectio, et aliis talibus: praeterea, frumento publice datum vendere, ³panem in dies mercari:

postremo quaecumque dici aut fangi queunt ignaviae luxuriaque probra, in illo exercitu cuncta fuere, et alia amplius.

militiae, eisque liceat, quod libuerit. Alii eos a Licha appellatos dicunt, quod et ille Herculem sit secutus: quidam a liguriendo quaestum." Nonius explains the name thus: "Lixarum proprietas haec est, quod officium sustineant militibus aquae vehendae. Lixam namque aquam veteres vocaverunt; unde elixum dicimus aqua coctum." Vossius prefers deriving the term from elizare, "to cook," in allusion to their preparing the food of the soldiers." Independent of its referring to the soldiers' servants and to the sutlers, the name appears to have been occasionally also applied to buffoons. This last meaning of the word rests on a passage in Justin (38. 10.), where, under the general name of lixae, are comprehended coqui, pistores, and scenici. Justin is speaking of the army which Antiochus led against the Parthians: "Sed luxuriae non minor apparatus, quam militiae fuit: quippe octoginta millia armatorum secura sunt trecenta millia lixarum, ex quibus coquorum, pistorum, scenorumque, major numerus fuit.—But his provisions for luxury were not inferior to his military preparations; for fourscore thousand armed men were attended with 300,000 servants, of which the greater number were cooks, bakers, and stage-players."—Turnbull. Cortius makes lixae, in the passage of Sallust to which this note refers, signify all manner of disorderly persons. It may, however, be better rendered, we conceive, "the followers of the camp."

¹ Die. Some editions have diu.

² Villas, "country-seats," or "villas."

³ Panem, &c. This was in violation of the strict rules of military discipline. Besides pay, each soldier received a certain allowance of corn, commonly four pecks (modii) a month. This they were to grind, sift, and prepare for bread by their own personal exertions, and afterwards bake it themselves. The centurions received a double, and the cavalry a triple allowance. Compare Lipsius, (ad Polyb. 5. Dial. 16.)

XLV. SED in ea difficultate Metellum non minus, quam in rebus hostilibus, magnum et sapientem virum fuisse comperior; ¹tanta temperantia inter ambitionem saevitiamque moderatum. ²Namque edicto primum adjumenta ignaviae sustulisse, “ne quisquam in castris panem, aut quem alium coctum cibum venderet; ne lixae exercitum sequerentur; ne miles gregarius in castris, neve in ³agmine servum aut jumentum haberet;” ceteris ⁴arte modum statuisse: praeterea ⁵transvorsis itineribus quotidie castra movere; juxta, ac si hostes adessent, vallo atque fossa munire, vigilias crebras ponere, et ipse cum legatis ⁶circumire: item in

¹ Tanta temperantia, &c. “regulated in his deportment with so much moderation, between a desire to gain popularity on the one hand, and rigid discipline on the other;” i. e. preserving in his deportment a well-regulated medium between these two extremes.

² Namque edicto, &c. Sustulisse in this clause, and statuisse lower in the sentence, must not be mistaken for historical infinitives; they are both governed by comperior understood. Some editions read primo for primum, making it agree with edicto.

³ Agmine. Here taken for “the march” itself. The three terms, exercitus, acies, and agmen, may be thus distinguished: Exercitus answers precisely to our English word “army,” and means, as Ulpian observes, not one troop, or one cohort, but a considerable number, trained by exercise. It is the generic term, being equally applicable whether the army be at rest or in motion; whether drawn up in battle array, or promiscuous and loose. Acies is applied to an army in battle array. Agmen (ab agere; ἀγείν) refers to an army or band of men in action or in motion. Thus, “Agmina magis quam acies pugnabant; superior tamen, ut in tumultuaria pugna, Romanus erat.”—Liv. And again, “Magis agmina, quam acies, in via concurrerunt.”—Id. The more usual meaning of agmen, however, is a body of men on a march, and it sometimes denotes such a body even when unarmed.—Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 246. 3d ed.

⁴ Arte. An archaism for arcta: “he prescribed strict limits to the rest of the army.”

⁵ Transvorsis itineribus, “by marches across the country.”

⁶ Circumire, “he went the rounds.” In general, certain persons agmine in primis modo, modo in postremis, saepe in medio adesse, ne quisquam ordine egrederetur, uti cum signis frequentes incederent, miles cibum et arma portaret. Ita prohibendo a delictis magis, quam vindicando, exercitum brevi ¹confirmavit.

XLVI. INTEREA Jugurtha, ubi, quae Metellus agebat, ex nunciis accepit; simul de ²innocentia ejus certior Romae factus, diffidere suis rebus, ac tum demum veram deditioinem facere conatus est. Igitur legatos ad consulem cum ³suppliciis mittit, qui tantummodo were appointed every night to go round the watches, hence called circuatores or circatores. This seems to have been at first done by the equites and tribunes; on extraordinary occasions, as in the present instance, by the commander in person, attended by his legati. Subsequently, particular persons were chosen for that purpose by the tribunes. Compare Vegetius, 3. 8.

¹ Confirmavit, "restored to its former efficiency."

² Innocentia, "his incorruptible integrity."

³ Suppliciis, "with the emblems of submission." By supplicia, in this sense, are usually meant branches of olive. The customs, however, of various nations were different in this respect. According to the scholiast on Sophocles (Oed. Tyr. 3.), petitioners among the Greeks usually carried boughs wrapped around with fillets of wool. Στέμμα δὲ ιστί τὸ προσειλημένον ἔριον τῷ θαλλῷ. Compare the remark of Brunck (Oed. T. l. c.), "Manibus ferebant ramos oleae lana obvolutos, qui Graecis στέμματα vocantur. Sic Chryses Iliadis initio:

στέμματα ἵχων ἐν χρεσὶ ἐκπέλουν Ἀπόλλωνος, χρυσοῖς ἀνὰ στήπτειν.

Sometimes the hands were covered with these fillets, not only among the Greeks, but also among the Romans: hence in Plautus (Amph. I. I. 101.) we have the expression velatis manibus. In addition to the authorities cited above, the following may be mentioned: Virgil, Aen. 11. 100.

"Iamque oratores aderant ex urbe Latina Velati ramis oleae veniamque rogantes."

and Aen. 7. 237.

"Praeferimus manibus vittas et verba precantum."

So also Livy (129. 6.), "Decem legati Locrensum, obsiti squalore ipsi liberisque vitam peterent, alia omnia dederent populo Romano. Sed Metello jam antea experimentis cognitum erat genus Numidarum infidum, ingenio mobili, novarum rerum avidum. Itaque ¹legatos alium ab alio divorsos adgreditur; ac, paullatim ²tentando, postquam opportunos cognovit, multa pollicendo persuadet, “ uti Jugurtham maxume vivum, sin id parum procedat, necatum sibi traderent :” ceterum palam, quae ex voluntate forent, regi nunciari jubet. Deinde ipse paucis diebus, intento atque infesto exercitu, in Numidiam procedit: ubi, contra belli faciem, tuguria plena hominum, pecora cultoresque in agris: ex oppidis et ³mapalibus praefecti regis obvii procedebant, parati frumentum dare, ⁴commeatum portare, postremo omnia, et sordibus, in comitio sedentibus consulibus, velamenta supplicum, ramos oleae, ut Graecis mos est, porrigentes, ante tribunal cum flebili vociferatione, humi procubuerunt.”

¹ Legatos, &c. “ he addresses himself to each of the ambassadors apart from the rest.”

² Tentando, “ by tampering with them.”

³ Mapalibus. In the 18th chapter of this narrative, our author uses the term mapalia to express “ huts :” here, however, tuguria evidently has that meaning, and mapalia denotes “ villages.” Festus, and after him Paulus, remark, “ Mapalia casae Punicae appellantur.” So Philargyrius (Georg. 3.), “ Mapalia casae Maurorum, qui in eremo habitare dicuntur.” Compare Pliny, (H. N. 5. 3.), “ Numidae vero Nomades a permundatis pabulis, mapalia sua, hoc est, domus plaustris circumferentes.” And Mela (1. 8.) speaking of the interior of Cyrenaica, “ Proximis nullae quidem urbes stant, tamen domicilia sunt quae mapalia appellantur.” Bochart’s derivation of the term is as follows: “ Palea vel pale Syris est agriculta. Itaque mapale deductum propriè erit agricultae tugurium.” — Geogr. Sac. 2. 9.

⁴ Commeatum portare, “ to carry his provisions.” The advantage resulting to the Romans from this offer would be, the releasing of the soldiers and beasts of burden from the heavy loads they were accustomed to carry. Others render the phrase, “ to bring provisions,” which Cortius considers inferior to the first.

quae imperarentur, facere. Neque Metellus idcirco minus, sed pariter ac si hostes adessent, munito agmine incedere, late explorare omnia, illa deditiois signa ostentui credere, ¹et insidiis locum tentari. Itaque ipse cum expeditis cohortibus, item funditorum et sagittariorum delecta manu, apud primos erat: in postremo C. Marius legatus cum equitibus curabat: in utrumque latus auxiliarios equites tribunis legionum et praefectis cohortium dispertiverat, uti cum his permixti ²velites, quacumque accederent, equitatus hostium propulsarent. Nam in Jugurtha tantus dolus, tantaque peritia locorum et militiae erat, uti, absens, an praesens, pacem an bellum gerens, perniciosior esset, in incerto haberetur.

XLVII. ERAT haud longe ab eo itinere, quo Metellus pergebat, oppidum Numidarum, nomine ³Vaga, ⁴forum rerum venalium totius regni maxume celebratum; ubi et incolere, et mercari consueverant Italici

¹ Et insidiis locum tentari. We have given tentari in the text, instead of tentare as most editions read. The meaning is, "and that a place fit for an ambuscade was sought by the enemy;" tentari being here equivalent to quaeri. This is an emendation which we owe to Gronovius. Cortius, however, condemns it, and reads tentare, before which he supposes the words homines quosdam, or something equivalent, to be understood. Others make tentare the historical infinitive, and refer it to Metellus: "he examined the place to discover an ambuscade." According to both of these explanations, however, the reading tentare wants spirit. Tentari is given in the Bipont edition.

² Velites, "the light-armed troops." The velites took their name from their swiftness and agility, (a volando vel velocitate). They were first instituted in the second Punic war, according to Livy, 26. 4. They did not form a part of the legion, and had no certain post assigned them; but fought in scattered parties where occasion required, usually before the lines.

³ Vaga. Compare note 3. page 207. of this narrative.

⁴ Forum rerum venalium, "mart for buying and selling commodities."

generis multi mortales. ¹Huic Consul, simul tentandi gratia et opperiundi, si paterentur opportunitates loci praesidium imposuit; praeterea imperavit frumentum, et alia, quae bello usui ²forent: ratus id, quod res monebat, ³frequentiam negotiatorum et commeatum

¹ Huic Consul, &c. We have here followed the reading of the Bipont edition, which alone appears to afford an intelligible meaning of this much contested passage. The phrase huic praesidium imposuit is the true Latin idiom, though, in translating it into our idiom, we are compelled to give huic the meaning of an ablative. The meaning of the whole passage is as follows: “In this place the consul stationed a garrison, as well for the sake of sounding the real intentions of Jugurtha, (i. e. of ascertaining whether he really desired peace, or was only seeking to lay an ambuscade), as of watching the result of his own plans, (i. e. the assassination of Jugurtha by his own ambassadors), if the advantages the place afforded should allow this to be done; (i. e. if, upon trial, the place should prove as advantageous for these two objects as he expected). The reading adopted by Cortius is this: “Huc consul, simul tentandi grātia, si patērent opportunitates loci praesidium imposuit:” He refers the particle simul back to the preceding sentence, and makes Metellus to have been influenced in the step he took, both by the circumstance of there being many Roman traders in the city, and, at the same time, by the wish of ascertaining whether the advantages the place afforded would be open to his use. This mode of explaining the passage appears to us too harsh, and the latter part extremely obscure, if not actually unintelligible.

² Forent. Some editions add comportare after this word. It is altogether unnecessary.

³ Frequentiam negotiatorum, &c. The reading which we have adopted in our text is that of the Bipont edition, excepting the words et jam, which we have substituted for etiam. The meaning of the whole passage will be as follows: “Having imagined, as in fact the case itself suggested, that the great number of merchants who dwelt in the place, and of persons who were wont to visit it for the purposes of trade, would prove an assistance to his army, and be a means of security to the conquests he had already made;” i. e. would supply his troops with provisions, &c. and, by their presence, aid in keeping the Numidian inhabitants of the place in subjection: for by both juvaturam exercitum, et jam pacatis rebus munimento fore. Inter haec negotia Jugurtha impensius modo legatos supplices mittere, pacem orare; praeter suam liberorumque vitam, omnia Metello dedere. Quos item, uti priores, consul illectos ad prodictionem domum dimittebat: regi pacem, quam postulabat, neque abnuere, neque polliceri, et inter eas moras promissa legatorum exspectare.

XLVIII. JUGURTHA ubi Metelli dicta cum factis composit, ac se suis artibus tentari animadvoxit; quippe cui verbis pax nunciabatur, ceterum re bellum aspernum erat, urbs maxima ¹alienata, ager hostibus cognitus, animi popularium tentati; coactus rerum necessitudine, statuit armis certare. Igitur explorato hostium itinere, in spem victoriae adductus ex opportunitate loci, ²quas maxumas copias potest omnium generum parat, ac per tramites occultos exercitum Metelli antevenit. Erat in ea parte Numidiae, quam negotiatores and commeatus, Roman citizens are meant. Cortius considers juvaturum exercitum, as all the other editions, except the Bipont, have it, to be a mere interpolation; and reads commeatum etiam paratis rebus fore. He explains commeatum as we have done above; but by paratis rebus he considers the stores of provisions to be meant, which Metellus had caused to be collected there. The reading we have adopted seems far preferable. Some editions have commeatu.

¹ Alienata, "become the property of another." Fallen into the hands of the enemy.

² Quas maxumas, &c. "as numerous forces as possible." Some editions have quam, which is the more usual form of expression. The construction in the text, however, has nothing in it which is at variance with the idiom of the language: it is equivalent to parat copias quas maximas potest parare. In a similar way the ellipsis with quam, which is in fact a pronoun, may be supplied: thus, quam maximas copias parat is nothing more than parat copias ad eam rationem ad quam potest maximas parare. The same principle applies to the Greek construction of εστι, &c. with the superlative.

A dherbal in divisione possederat, flumen oriens a meridie, nomine Muthul; a quo aberat mons ferme millia passuum xx. ¹tractu pari, ²vastus ab natura et humano cultu: sed ex eo medio ³quasi collis oriebatur, in immensum pertinens, vestitus oleastro ac mirtetis, aliisque generibus arborum, quae ⁴humi arido atque arenoso gignuntur. ⁵Media autem planicies deserta, penuria aquae, praeter flumini propinqua loca: ea ⁶consita arbustis, pecore atque cultoribus frequentabantur.

XLIX. Igitur in eo colle, quem ⁷transverso itinere porrectum docuimus, Jugurtha, ⁸extenuata suorum acie, consedit: elephantis et parti copiarum pedestrum Bomilcarem praefecit, eumque edocet, quae ageret; ipse propior montem cum omni equitat⁹ pedites delectos collocat: dein singulas turmas atque manipulos circumiens monet atque obtestatur, “ uti memores pristinae virtutis et victoriae seque regnumque suum ab Romanorum avaritia defendant: cum his certamen fore, quos antea victos sub jugum miserint: ducem

¹ Tractu pari, “ running parallel with the river.”

² Vastus ab natura, &c. “ left bare by nature and the hand of man;” i. e. waste by nature, and uncultivated by human industry.

³ Quasi collis, “ a sort of hill.”

⁴ Humi arido, &c. “ in an arid and sandy soil.” Understand solo to govern humus, in the genitive. Compare Statius (Theb. 7. 755.), “ Sternuntur terrae,” and Apuleius (1. 9.), “ Ille terrae concidit;” in each of which an ellipsis of solo or in solo must be supplied. Lucretius (5. 1288.), gives the full expression, “ Aere solum terrae trac tabant;” and (ib. 1294.) “ Et ferro coopere solum proscindere terrae.”

⁵ Media planicies, “ the intervening plain;” i. e. the plain between the mountain and river.

⁶ Consita arbustis, “ overgrown with underwood.”

⁷ Transverso itinere, “ in a cross direction to the mountain;” i. e. at right angles to the mountain.

⁸ Extenuata suorum acie, “ having drawn out his forces into a thin line.”

⁹ Pedites delectos. Some editions have et petitibus delectis.

illis, non animum mutatum: quae ab imperatore ¹decuerint, omnia suis provisa: ²locum superiorem, uti prudentes cum imperitis, ne pauciores cum pluribus, aut rudes cum bello melioribus manum consererent:
proinde parati intentique essent, signo dato, Romanos invadere: illum diem aut omnis labores et victorias confirmaturum, aut maxumarum aerumnarum initium fore." Ad hoc viritim, ³ut quemque, ob militare facinus, pecunia aut honore extulerat, commonefacere beneficii sui, et eum ipsum aliis ostentare: postremo, pro cujusque ingenio, pollicendo, minitando, obtestando, alium alio modo excitare; cum interim Metellus, ignarus hostium, monte degrediens cum exercitu ⁴conspicatur:
primo dubius, quidnam insolita facies ostenderet, (nam inter virgulta ⁵equi Numidaeque conserderant, neque

¹ Decuerint. Understand provideri.

² Locum superiorem, &c. Jugurtha enumerates four particulars, in which, like a good general, he had provided that his own troops should have the advantage: 1st, Locum superiorem: 2d, Uti prudentes cum imperitis (manum consererent); a better knowledge of the country than that possessed by the enemy: 3d, Ne pauciores cum pluribus; no inferiority of numbers: 4th, Aut rudes cum bello melioribus; no want of discipline.—Prudentes, as has just been observed, denotes persons "well acquainted with the country."

³ Ut quemque, &c. A zeugma operates in extulerat, by which it assumes a separate meaning with both pecunia and honore. "As he had gifted any one, on account of some military exploit, with a present of money, or distinguished him by promotion in the ranks of the army." The zeugma; however, may be avoided if extulerat be rendered "he had distinguished." But this is less elegant.

⁴ Conspicatur. We give the reading of the Bipont edition, with an ellipsis of hostes in the accusative. Conspicatur (sc. hostes) "espies the enemy." Cortius prefers conspicitur, "is seen," which does not, we conceive, preserve the connexion with what follows as clearly as the other reading.

⁵ Equi Numidaeque, "the Numidians, both horse and foot." Thus equi virique signify both horsemen and infantry.

plane occultati humilitate arborum, et tamen ¹incerti, quidnam esset; cum natura loci, tum dolo, ipsi atque signa militaria obscurati) dein, brevi cognitis insidiis, paullisper agmen ²constitit: ibi ³commutatis ordinibus, ¹ Incerti. Referring to the Numidians. The adjective certus is a derivative from cerno, and res incerta is nothing more than res non bene et distincte visa. The primitive meaning, therefore, of incertus is a passive one, and it must be so taken in the present instance. Incerti is here the same as de quibus non constabat. Perhaps the origin of this construction is to be sought in the idiom of the Greek language. Thus incerti quidnam esset becomes ἀδηλοι τίποτ' οὐ εἰν.

² Constituit. Some editions have constitutit. The verb consisto, however, is in fact an active transitive verb, though the active meaning is generally more or less obscured. In this passage it has its accusative expressed, agmen constituit, "he halted his army." In most instances, however, it has a pronoun understood: thus constituit, "he stopped," understand sese.

³ Commutatis ordinibus, "having altered the arrangement of his troops." Jugurtha, it will be recollect, had drawn up his forces on the hill which extended in the direction of the river, and at right angles to the mountain. Metellus was descending this mountain in order to reach the river, and consequently had Jugurtha's ambuscade on his right flank. Thus far the Roman army would appear, from chapter 46. to have been marching in a single column, each legion composing that column being divided, in the usual manner, into three ranks of hastati, principes, and triarii. The moment Metellus perceives his danger, he converts his flank into a front, by wheeling the legions out of column into line on the right. This movement brings all the hastati of the several legions into one line, all the principes into a second line, and all the triarii into a third. The army is then drawn up in three lines (triplicibus subsidiis), with its front facing the enemy. But how is it to reach the plain? Evidently by a flank march on the left, and in this flank march the three ranks become so many files. Each soldier, therefore, when the word is given to continue the march down the mountain, faces to the left and moves on in file. If the enemy attacks them on their march, they face again to the front and oppose them. Compare, in farther explanation of this movement, Polybius (Lips. de Milit. Rom. lib. 5. dial.

in dextero latere quod proximum hostis erat,¹ triplicibus subsidiis aciem instruxit: ²inter manipulos funditores et sagittarios dispergit: equitatum omnem in cornibus locat: ac pauca pro tempore milites hortatus, aciem, sicuti instruxerat, ³transvorsis principiis, in plenum ducit.

L. SED, ubi Numidas quietos, neque colle degredi animaduertit, veritus, ex anni tempore et inopia aquae, ne siti conficeretur exercitus, Rutilium legatum cum expeditis cohortibus et parte equitum praemisit ad flumen, ut locum castris antecaperet; existumans, hostis crebro impetu et ⁴transvorsis praeliis iter suum remoratuos, et, quoniam armis diffiderent, ⁵lassitudinem et sitim militum tentatuos. Dein ipse pro re atque loco, sicuti monte descenderat, paullatim procedere: Marium ⁶post principia habere: ipse cum sinistræ alae equitibus esse, qui in agmine ⁷principes facti

12.) Ἐπειδὴν προσπίπτει τι τῶν δεινῶν, ποτὲ μὲν παρ' ἀσπίδα κλίναν-τες, ποτὲ δὲ ἐπὶ δίχυ. ο. τ. 2.

¹ Triplicibus subsidiis, “in three lines.” The term subsidia, which properly denotes a body of reserve, is here applied to the several lines with reference to the mutual support which they afford to each other.

² Inter manipulos. “In the vacant spaces between the maniples.”

³ Transvorsis principiis, “having turned the front into a flank.”

Compare note 3. page 244.

⁴ Transvorsis praeliis, “by attacks on his flanks.”

⁵ Lassitudinem, &c. “would try the effects of weariness and thirst on his (Metellus’s) men.”

⁶ Post principia. Some doubt exists as to the meaning of principia in this passage. The probability is, that it denotes the first line or hastati, who, although the army was now prosecuting a flank movement, would still become the front when they had faced round to the right. The station of Marius therefore was between the hastati and principes. The expression post principia may therefore be rendered “behind the first line.”

⁷ Principes, “the leading division.”

erant. At Jugurtha, ubi extre^{mum} agmen Metelli primos suos praetergressum videt, praesidio ²quasi duum millium peditum montem occupat, qua Metellus descenderat; ne forte cedentibus advorsariis receptui, ac post munimento foret: dein, repente signo dato, hostis invadit. Numidae alii ³postremos caedere; pars a sinistra ac dextera tentare: infensi adesse atque instare: omnibus locis Romanorum ordines conturbare; quorum etiam qui firmioribus animis obvii hostibus fuerant, ludificati incerto praelio, ⁴ipso modo eminus sauciabantur, neque contra feriundi, aut manum conserendi copia erat. Antea jam docti ab Jugurtha equites, ubicumque Romanorum turba insequi cooperat, non confertim, neque in unum sese recipiebant, sed alius alio quam maxume divorsi. Ita numero priores, si ab persequendo hostis deterrire nequivabant, disjectos ab tergo, aut lateribus circumveniebant: sin opportunior fugae collis, quam campi fuerant, ⁵ea vero consueti Numidarum equi facile inter virgulta evadere; nostros asperitas et insolentia loci retinebant.

LI. CETERUM facies totius negotii varia, incerta, ⁶foeda atque miserabilis: dispersi a suis pars cedere, ¹ Primos suos, “those of his men who were stationed nearest the mountain;” i. e. the left wing of the Numidian army.

² Quasi, “about.” Used for fere, as in Terence (Heaut. 1. 1. 93.), “Mercedem quasi talenta ad quindecim coegi.—I got together about fifteen talents.”—Patrick.

³ Postremos. By postremi here are meant the soldiers of the right wing, who are called the rear in reference to the direction of the Roman march by files.

⁴ Ipsi modo, &c. “were themselves alone wounded from a distance;” i. e. they could not wound the enemy in return.

⁵ Ea vero, &c. Understand fuga: “in prosecuting that flight, the horses of the Numidians, accustomed, as may well be supposed, to the task, easily made their escape amid the underwood.”

⁶ Foeda atque miserabilis, “gloomy and affecting.”

alii insequi: neque signa, neque ordines observare: ubi quemque periculum ceperat, ibi resistere ac propulsare: arma, tela, equi, viri, hostes, cives permixti: nihil consilio, neque imperio agi: fors omnia regere. Itaque multum ¹die processerat, cum etiam tum even-tus in incerto erat. Denique omnibus labore et aestu languidis, Metellus ubi videt Numidas minus instare, paullatim milites in unum conducit, ordines restituit, et cohortis legionarias quatuor advorsum pedes hos-tium collocat: eorum magna pars superioribus locis fessa conserderat. Simul orare, hortari milites, “ne deficerent, neu paterentur hostis fugientes vincere: neque illis castra esse, neque munimentum ullum, quo ²cedentes tenderent: in armis omnia sita.” Sed ne Jugurtha quidem interea quietus: circumire, hortari, renovare praelium, et ipse cum delectis tentare omnia: subvenire suis, hostibus dubiis instare, ³quos firmos cognoverat, eminus pugnando retinere.

LII. Eo modo inter se duo imperatores, sumni viri, certabant; ipsi pares, ceterum opibus disparibus. Nam Metello virtus militum erat, locus advorsus: Jugurthae alia omnia, praeter milites, opportuna. Denique Romani, ubi intellegunt, neque sibi ⁴perfugium esse, neque ab hoste copiam pugnandi fieri, et jam die vesper erat; ⁵adverso colle, sicuti praeceptum fuerat, evadunt.

¹ Die. The old genitive.

² Cedentes, “in case they should give way.”

³ Quos firmos, &c. “he kept back, by attacking from afar, those whom he found firm in their resistance.”

⁴ Perfugium. In some editions profugium.

⁵ Adverso colle, “up the hill.” Secundo colle, “down the hill.” The literal meaning of the first of these phrases is, “the hill being against or adverse;” i. e. the declivity or slope of the hill which one has to surmount. In the phrase secundo colle, the term secundo retains its primitive meaning of following, from sequor, of which it is properly a verbal: thus, secundo colle, literally “the hill following;”

Amisso loco, Numidae fusi fugatique: pauci interiere; plerosque velocitas et regio hostibus ignara tutata sunt. Interea Bomilcar, quem elephantis et parti copiarum pedestrium praefectum ab Jugurtha supra diximus, ubi eum Rutilius praetergressus est, paullatim suos in aequum locum deducit: ac, dum legatus ad flumen, quo praemissus erat, festinans pergit, quietus, uti res postulabat, aciem exornat: neque remittit, quid ¹ubique hostis ageret, explorare. Postquam Rutilium conse disse jam, et ²animo vacuum accepit, simulque ³ex Jugurthae praelio clamorem augeri; veritus, ne legatus, cognita re, laborantibus suis auxilio foret, aciem, quam diffidens virtuti militum ⁴arte statuerat, quo hostium itineri obficeret, latius porrigit; eoque modo ad Rutilii castra procedit.

LIII. ROMANI ex improviso pulvèris vim magnam animadvortunt, nam ⁵prospectum ager arbustis consistus prohibebat. Et primò rati humum aridam vento agitari: post, ubi aequabilem manere, et, ⁶sicuti acies movebatur, magis magisque adpropinquare vident, cognita re, properantes arma capiunt, ac pro castris, sicuti imperabatur, consistunt. Deinde, ubi proprius ventum, utrumque magno clamore ⁷concurrunt. Numidae tan-

i. e. the descent of the hill following after, as it were; and urging us on. So, secundus ventus, a wind which follows after the vessel, “a favourable wind;” Secundo flumine, “down the river;” i. e. the current following after and driving an object onwards: but adverso flumine, “up the river;” i. e. the current being against one.

¹ Ubique. For et ubi. “What the enemy were doing and where.”

² Animo vacuum, “was without any expectation of an attack.”

³ Ex Jugurthae praelio, “from the quarter where Jugurtha was engaged.”

⁴ Arte. An archaism for arcile: “in close array.”

⁵ Prospectum, “a distant view.”

⁶ Sicuti acies movebatur, “as if an army were moving along.”

⁷ Concurrunt. Some editions have concurritur taken impersonally.

tummodo remorati, dum in elephantis auxilium putant; postquam impeditos ramis arborum, atque ita disjectos circumveniri vident, fugam faciunt: ac plerique, abjectis armis, collis, aut noctis, quae jam aderat, auxilio integri abeunt. Elephanti quatuor capti, reliqui omnes, numero quadraginta, interfecti. At Romani, quamquam itinere atque opere castrorum et praelio ¹fessi lassique erant; tamen, quod Metellus amplius opinione morabatur, instructi intentique obviam procedunt. Nam dolus Numidarum ²nihil languidi, neque remissi

¹ Fessi lassique erant. Cortius reads fessi laetique: we have given the preference, however, to the lection exhibited in the Bipont and other editions. Neither reading, it must be confessed, has much to recommend it. In the one which we have adopted there is an evident approach to pleonasm, while in that of Cortius the meaning does not harmonize with the context: for, if the Romans had been overjoyed at their success (laeti), they must naturally have felt a very strong desire to meet Metellus, and communicate the intelligence of their victory, or else lend aid to the army under his command. Besides, what has quamquam to do with the sentence, if laeti be adopted? Its presence is evidently hostile to the use of this epithet. “Although overjoyed at their success, still they march out to meet Metellus!” This can never be correct. Burnouf supposes laeti to be equivalent to securi, and remarks, in addition, “at vero eos permovit longior Metelli mora, ne quieti et laetitiae indulgerent.” This explanation contradicts itself. The Romans, it seems, are free from all apprehension (securi), and, at the same time, strongly influenced by it; for the absence of their commander-in-chief fills them with alarm! The reading, then, which we have adopted in our text, must stand until a more careful collating of manuscripts, or some felicitous conjecture, supplies us with a less objectionable one. The Bipont editor explains fessi by “satis habuere laborum,” and lassi by “corporis viribus fere defecerant.” In accordance with this, the passage may be rendered as follows: “But the Romans, although they had encountered severe toil on the march, in the fortifying of their camp, and during the battle, and although their strength was nearly exhausted,” &c.

² Nihil languidi, &c. “admitted of no languor nor remissness on the part of the Romans.”

paticebatur. Ac primo, obscura nocte, postquam haud procul inter se erant, strepitu, velut hostes ¹adventarent, alteri apud alteros formidinem simul, et tumultum facere: et paene imprudentia admissum ²facinus miserabile, ni utrimque praemissi equites rem exploravissent. Igitur, pro metu, repente gaudium exortum, milites alius alium laeti appellant, acta edocent atque audiunt: sua quisque fortia facta ad coelum ferre. Quippe res humanae ita sese habent: in victoria vel ignavis gloriari licet: ³advorsae res etiam bonos detrac-tant.

LIV. METELLUS in isdem castris quadruplex moratus, ⁴saucios cum cura reficit, meritos ⁵in praeliis more militiae donat, universos in concione laudat, atque agit gratias; hortatur, ad cetera, quae levia sunt, parem animum gerant: pro victoria satis jam pugnatum, reliquos labores pro praeda fore. Tamen interim transfugas et alios opportunos, Jugurtha ubi gentium, aut quid agaret, cum paucisne esset, an exercitum haberet, ut sese victus gereret exploratum misit. At ille sese in loca saltuosa et natura munita repercat; ibique cogebat exercitum ⁶numero hominum ampliorem, sed hebetem infirmumque, agri ac pecoris magis, quam belli cultorem. Id ea gratia eveniebat, quod, praeter regios

¹ Adventarent. Most editions have adventare.

² Facinus miserabile, "a lamentable accident."

³ Advorsae res, &c. "a defeat humbles even the spirit of the brave."

⁴ Saucios cum cura, &c. "carefully attends to the recovery of his wounded soldiers."

⁵ In praeliis, "in the two engagements; i. e. the one which he had fought with Jugurtha, and the other between Rutilius and Bomilcar.

⁶ Numero hominum ampliorem, &c. "superior to the last in point of numbers, but undisciplined and weak; acquainted with husbandry and pasturage rather than with war;" i. e. composed of husbandmen and herdsmen rather than of soldiers.

equites, nemo omnium Numidarum ex fuga regem sequitur; quo cujusque animus fert, eo discedunt: neque id ¹flagitium militiae ducitur: ²ita se mores habent. Igitur Metellus ubi videt regis etiam tum animum ³ferocem; bellum renovari, quod, nisi ex illius lubidine, ⁴geri non posset; praeterea iniquum certamen sibi cum hostibus, minore detrimento illos vinci, quam suos vincere; statuit ⁵non praeliis, neque acie, sed alio more bellum gerundum. Itaque in Numidia loca opulentissuma pergit, agros vastat, multa castella et oppida, ⁶temere munita, aut sine praesidio, capit incenditque, puberes interfici jubet: alia omnia militum ⁷praeda esse. Ea formidine multi mortales Romanis dediti obsides; frumentum et alia, quae usui forent, adfatum praebita; ubicumque res postulabat, praesidium impositum. Quae negotia multo magis, quam praelium male pugnatum [ab suis], regem terrebant: quippe, ⁸cui spes omnis in fuga sita, sequi cogebatur; et qui ⁹sua loca defendere nequiverat, in alienis bellum

¹ Flagitium militiae, “a disgraceful abandonment of their duty as soldiers.”

² Ita se mores habent, “such is their national usage.” This custom of abandoning their general after a defeat is always characteristic of a semi-barbarous nation, and was of constant occurrence among the uncivilized communities of ancient times.

³ Ferocem, “unsubdued.”

⁴ Geri non posset. Cortius omits non, and strives to show that nisi is here equivalent to non nisi.

⁵ Non praeliis, neque acie, “not by encounters, nor in a pitched battle.”

⁶ Temere munita, “slightly fortified.”

⁷ Praeda esse. Some editions have praedam as an accusative before esse and depending on jubet. In our reading esse is the historical infinitive.

⁸ Cui. Some editions have cujus, which is less elegant.

⁹ Sua loca, “places of his own choosing;” i. e. advantageous to himself.

gerere. Tamen ¹ex copia, quod optimum videbatur, consilium capit: exercitum ²plerumque in isdem locis opperiri jubet; ipse cum delectis equitibus Metellum sequitur; nocturnis et ³aviis itineribus ⁴ignoratus Romanos palantis repente adgreditur: eorum plerique inermes cadunt, multi capiuntur; nemo omnium intactus profugit: et Numidae prius, quam ex castris subveniretur, sicuti jussi erant, in proximos collis discedunt.

LV. INTERIM Romae gaudium ingens ortum, cognitis Metelli rebus: ⁵ut seque et exercitum more majorum gereret; in adverso loco, victor tamen virtute fuisset; hostium agro potiretur; Jugurtham magnificum ex Auli secordia, spem salutis in solitudine, aut fuga, coegerisset habere. Itaque senatus OB EA FELICITER ACTA DIS IMMORTALIBUS ⁶SUPPLICIA DECERNERE: civitas, trepida anteac et sollicita de belli eventu, laeta agere: fama de Metello praeclara esse. Igitur

¹ Ex copia, “considering all circumstances.” Upon a full review of the case.

² Plerumque. Agreeing with exercitum. This adjective is rarely used in the singular. In early Latinity plerus,—a,—um, were often employed without any syllabic adjection; and hence the use, at a somewhat later period, of plerusque, &c. in the singular number. Compare Ruddiman, Inst. L. G. vol. i. p. 152. in notis, ed. Stallbaum.

³ Aviis, “removed from the beaten track.”

⁴ Ignoratus, “unobserved.”

⁵ Ut seque, &c. The interchange of tenses in this passage gives an air of great animation to the style: “how he was regulating his own and the deportment of his army by the usages of former days; though in an adverse situation, had nevertheless proved victorious by his valour; was becoming master of the enemy’s country; had compelled Jugurtha, rendered arrogant,” &c.

⁶ Supplicia, “a thanksgiving.” When a general had obtained an important victory, a thanksgiving was decreed by the senate to be made in the various temples. What was called a Lectisternium then took place, when couches were spread for the gods, as if about to feast, and their statues were taken down from their pedestals, and eo intentior ad victoriam niti, omnibus modis festinare; cavere tamen, necubi hosti opportunus fieret: meminisse, post gloriam invidiam sequi. Ita quo clarior erat, eo magis animi anxius: neque, post insidias Jugurthae,¹ effuso exercitu praedari: ubi frumento, aut pabulo opus erat, cohortes cum omni equitatu² praesidium agitabant: exercitus³ partim ipse, reliquos Marius ducebat. Sed igni magis, quam praeda, ager vastabatur. Duobus locis, haud longe⁴ inter se, castra faciebant: ubi vi opus erat, cuncti aderant; ceterum, quo fuga atque formido latius crescerent, divorsi agebant. Eo tempore Jugurtha per collis sequi: tempus, aut locum⁵ pugnae quaerere: qua venturum hostem audierat, pabulum et aquarum fontis, quorum penuria erat, corrumpere: modo se Metello, interdum Mario ostendere: postremos in agmine tentare, ac statim in collis regredi; rursus aliis, post aliis minitari; neque praelium facere, neque otium pati; tantummodo hostem ab incepto retinere.

LVI. ROMANUS imperator, ubi se dolis fatigari videt, neque ab hoste copiam pugnandi fieri, urbem magnam, et in ea parte, qua sita erat,⁶ arcem regni, nomine⁷ Zamam statuit obpugnare; ratus id, quod negotium placed upon these couches around the altars, which were loaded with the richest dishes.

¹ Effuso exercitu, “with his army scattered over the country.”

² Praesidium agitabant, “formed a convoy.”

³ Partim. The old accusative for partem, more commonly taken as an adverb.

⁴ Inter se. Understand distantes. The ellipsis may also be supplied by distantibus, (scil. locis), or distantia, (scil. castra), but distantes is preferable.

⁵ Pugnae. We may either understand opportunum, or else, what is preferable, consider this an instance of the dative after a substantive. Compare Scheller, L. G. vol. ii. p. 1. Walker's transl.

⁶ Arcem regni, “a stronghold of the kingdom.”

⁷ Zamam. Zama, a city of Numidia, five days' journey west of poscebat, Jugurtham laborantibus suis auxilio venturum, ubique praelium fore. At ille, quae parabantur, a perfugis eductus, magnis itineribus Metellum antevenit; oppidanos hortatur, moenia defendant, additis auxilio perfugis, quod genus ex copiis regis, quia fallere nequibant, firmissimum. Praeterea pollicetur, in tempore semet cum exercitu adfore. Ita compositis rebus, in loca quam maxume occulta discedit, ac post paullo cognoscit, Marium ex itinere frumentatum cum paucis cohortibus ²Siccam missum; quod oppidum primum omnium post malam pugnam ab rege defecerat.

Carthage, according to Polybius, (15. 5.) Near this place, Scipio, subsequently surnamed Africanus Major, obtained a decisive victory over the Carthaginian forces under the command of Hannibal. Strabo and Hirtius speak of it as the royal residence of Juba. It was levelled to the ground by the Romans after the death of Juba, but rebuilt in the reign of the emperor Hadrian, and by his orders. No traces of it remain at the present day. Pliny (H. N. 21. 2.) mentions a fountain at Zama which emitted musical sounds; whence Bochart and De Brosses conjecture that the name of the city meant, in Punic, "the musical fountain."

¹ Fallere. Among the Romans deserters were punished in the severest manner. Hence Jugurtha had no fear of their abandoning his standard and rejoining that of their countrymen. Valerius Maximus (2. 7.) speaks of deserters having been deprived of their hands by Quintus Fabius Maximus; of others, who were either crucified or beheaded by the elder Africanus; of others, who were exposed to wild beasts by the younger Africanus; and of others, whom Paulus Aemilius ordered to be trampled under foot by elephants. Hence it follows that the punishment of deserters was left to the pleasure of the commander.

² Siccam. Sicca, a town of Numidia, on the banks of the Bagradas, some distance from the coast. It contained a celebrated temple of Venus (Val. Max. 2. 6.), and hence is styled by many writers Sicca Venerea. Bochart and De Brosses derive the name of Sicca from the Punic Succoth Benoth, "tabernacula puellarum," and make Benoth, "puella," the origin of the name Venus among the Romans. D'Anville thinks that Sicca coincides with the modern Kef.

Eo cum ¹dilectis equitibus noctu pergit, et jam egradientibus Romanis in porta pugnam facit: simul magna voce Siccenses hortatur, “ uti cohortis ab tergo circumveniant: fortunam praecipiti facinoris casum dare: si id fecerint, postea sese in regno, illos in libertate sine metu aetatem acturos.” Ac, ni Marius signa inferre atque evadere oppido properavisset, profecto cuncti, aut magna pars Siccensium ²fidem mutavissent: tanta mobilitate sese Numidae agunt. Sed milites Jugurthini paullisper ab rege sustentati, postquam majore vi hostes urgunt, paucis amissis, profugi discedunt.

LVII. MARIUS ad Zamam pervenit: id oppidum in campo situm, magis ³opere, quam natura munitum erat; nullius idoneae rei egens, armis virisque opulentum. Igitur Metellus, pro tempore atque loco paratis rebus, cuncta moenia exercitu circumvenit: legatis imperat, ubi quisque curaret: deinde, signo dato, undique simul clamor ingens oritur: neque ea res Numidas terret; ⁴infensi intentique sine tumultu manent: praelium incipitur. Romani, pro ingenio quisque, pars eminus glande aut lapidibus pugnare; ⁵alii succedere, ac murum modo subfodere, modo scalis adgredi: cupere praelium in manibus facere. Contra ea oppidanii in ¹ Dilectis. Some editions have delectis; but dilectis, as has already been observed in a previous part of this volume, denotes more care in the selection, and signifies, properly, chosen from many.

² Fidem mutavissent, “ would have changed sides.”

³ Opere, quam natura, “ by art than by nature.”

⁴ Infensi intentique, “ in hostile array and on the alert.”

⁵ Alii succedere. Before these words some editions have evadere alii, which Cortius very properly rejects. The assailants were only of two classes: those who fought from a distance, (eminus), and those who advanced to the ramparts, (succedere), and attempted at one time to undermine, at another to scale the walls. The means of defence put in operation against these were of two kinds: large stones for those who had approached to close quarters, and javelins, &c. for those who prosecuted the attack from a distance.

proxumos saxa volvere : sudes, pila, ¹praeterea pice et sulphure taedam mixtam, ardentia mittere. Sed nec illos, qui procul manserant, timor animi satis muniverat : nam plerosque jacula tormentis, aut manu emissâ vulnerabant ; parique periculo, sed fama impari, boni atque ignavi erant.

LVIII. DUM apud Zamam sic certatur, Jugurtha ex improviso castra hostium cum magna manu invadit ; remissis, qui in praesidio erant, et omnia magis, quam praelium exspectantibus, portam irrumpit. At nostri, repentina metu perculti, sibi quisque pro moribus consulunt : alii fugere, alii arma capere : magna pars vulnerati, aut occisi. Ceterum ex omni multitudine non amplius quadraginta, memores nominis Romani, grege facto, locum cepere, paullo, quam alii, editiorem : neque inde maxima vi depelli quiverunt : sed tela eminus missa remittere, ²pauci in pluribus minus frustrati : sin Numidae proprius accessissent, ibi vero virtutem ostendere, et eos maxima vi caedere, fundere atque fugare. Interim Metellus, cum acerrume rem gereret, clamorem hostilem ab tergo accepit : dein, converso equo, animadvertisit, fugam ¹ad se vorsum fieri; quae res indicabat ²popularis esse. Igitur equitatum omnem ad castra propere mittit, ac statim C. Marium cum cohortibus sociorum; eumque, lacrumanus, per amicitiam perque rempublicam obsecrat, ne quam contumeliam remanere in exercitu victore, neve hostis inultos abire sinat: ille brevi mandata efficit. At Jugurtha munimento castrorum impeditus, cum alii super vallum praecipitarentur, alii in ³angustiis ipsi sibi properantes obficerent, multis amissis, in loca munita sese recepit. Metellus, infecto negotio, postquam nox aderat, in castra cum exercitu revertitur.

¹ Praeterea pice, &c. Cortius reads as follows : “ sudes, pila, praeterea picem sulphure et taeda mixtam ardentia mittere.” The expression “ picem sulphure et taeda mixtam” is hardly Latin, and receives very little, if any, support from the examples which he adduces in its favour. Our reading is that of Gruter, and has been adopted in the Bipont and many other editions. Mixtam is for illitam, “ besmeared,” or “ covered over;” and ardentia is put in the neuter gender as referring to sudes, pila, and taedam, things without life. The pila were javelins with combustible materials attached to them near the head.

² Pauci in pluribus, &c. “ a handful amid a host, they were less mistaken in their aim :” i. e. though few in number, they still did great execution among the crowded ranks of the enemy ; since, in casting their weapons among them, it was almost impossible for the Romans to do this without effect.

LIX. Igitur postero die, prius, quam ad obpugnandum egredieretur, equitatum omnem in ea parte, qua regis adventus erat, pro castris ⁴agitare jubet: portas et proxuma loca tribunis dispertit: deinde ipse pergit ad oppidum, atque, ut superiore die, murum adgreditur. Interim Jugurtha ex occulto repente nostros invadit: qui in ⁵proxumo locati fuerant, paullisper territi perturbantur; reliqui cito subveniunt. Neque diutius Numidae resistere quivissent, ni pedites cum equitibus permixti magnam cladem in congressu ⁶facerent: quibus illi freti, non, ut equestri paelio solet, sequi, dein cedere; sed ⁷advorsis equis concurrere,

¹ Ad se vorsum. For advorsum se.

² Popularis esse, "that they were his own men."

³ Angustiis, "in the narrow passages of the gates."

⁴ Agitare, "to patrol."

⁵ Proximo, "nearest the enemy." Understand in loco hostibus.

⁶ Facerent. Some editions have fecissent; but as the imperfect of the subjunctive partakes of an aorist meaning, it may very well, both here and elsewhere, represent the pluperfect. Compare Zumpt, L. G. p. 318. 2d ed. On the usage of the aorist for the pluperfect, consult Matthiae, G. G. sect. 498. Obs.; and Buttmann, G. G. p. 314. Obs.

⁷ Advorsis equis, &c. "advanced straight onwards, disordered and broke the line."

implicare ac perturbare aciem; ita expeditis peditibus suis, hostis paene ¹victos dare.

LX. Eodem tempore apud Zamam magna vi certabatur. Ubi quisque legatus, aut tribunus curabat, eo accerrime niti; neque aliis in alio magis, quam in sese spem habere: pariter oppidani agere; ²obpugnare, aut parare omnibus locis: avidius alteri alteros sauciare, quam semet tegere: clamor permixtus hortatione, laetitia, gemitu; item strepitus armorum ad coelum ferri: tela utrimque volare. Sed illi, qui moenia defensabant, ubi hostes paululum modo pugnam remiserant, intenti praelium equestre prospectabant: eos, uti quaeque Jugurthae res erant, laetos modo, modo pavidos animadvorteres; ac, sicuti audiri a suis, aut cerni possent, monere alii, alii hortari, aut manu significare, aut ³niti corporibus, et hoc, illuc, quasi vitabundi, aut jacientes tela, ⁴agitare. Quod ubi Mario cognitum est, (nam is in ea parte curabat), consulto lenius agere, ac diffidentiam rei simulare: pati Numidas sine tumultu regis praelium visere. Ita illis ⁵studio suorum adstrictis, re-

¹ Victos dare. After the Numidian cavalry had broken the Roman line, they gave the enemy, now almost conquered, into the hands of their light-armed infantry, who fought intermingled with the horse. Cortius explains the phrase differently, and makes it equivalent to per expeditos suos pedites, hostes paene vicebant, "they came near conquering the enemy by means of their light-armed foot alone." He adduces many analogous passages to prove that victos dare is here put for vincere. We give the preference, however, with Burnouf and others, to the first explanation.

² Obpugnare, aut parare. The former of these two verbs refers to the Romans, the latter to the Numidians: "they prosecuted the attack, or resisted the assailants." After parare understand defensionem.

³ Niti corporibus, "made contortions with their bodies."

⁴ Agitare, "kept moving themselves."

⁵ Studio suorum adstrictis, "engrossed with anxious concern for their countrymen."

pente magna vi murum adgreditur: et jam scalis ¹aggressi milites prope summa ceperant, cum oppidani concurrunt, lapides, ignem, alia praeterea tela ingeunt. Nostri primo resistere: deinde, ubi ²unae atque alterae scalae comminutae, qui supersteterant adficti sunt; ceteri, ³quoquo modo potuere, pauci integri, magna pars confecti volneribus abeunt. Denique utrimque praelium nox diremit.

LXI. METELLUS, postquam videt frustra incepsum, neque oppidum capi, neque Jugurtham, nisi ex insidiis, aut ⁴suo loco pugnam facere, et jam aestatem exactam esse, ab Zama discedit; et in his urbibus, quae ad se defecerant, satisque munitae loco, aut moenibus erant, praesidia imponit. ⁵Ceterum exercitum in provinciam ⁶qua proxima est Numidiae hiemandi gratia collocat. Neque id tempus, ex aliorum more, quieti, ¹ Aggressi, “having assailed it.” Cortius reads egressi, and refers the term to the soldiers having left the ladders and clinging to the battlements.

² Unae. This numeral is used in the plural with nouns which have no singular, or are used in a different sense in that number; or else, whose singular is of rare occurrence. Thus, una moenia, una castra, unae literae, &c. In the present instance the singular number of scala is rarely, if ever, met with, and hence the plural form is employed. Charisius, Diomedes, and other grammarians, maintain that the singular of this word is never used. Compare Quintilian, (1. 5. 16.), “Scala tamen et scopula, contraque hordea et mulsu, licet literarum mutationem, detractionem, adjectionem non habeant, non alio vitiosa sunt quam quod pluralia singulariter, et singularia plura-liter efferuntur.” Celsus, however, (8. 15.), uses the singular of scala: thus, “Sic brachium deligatum super scalae gallinariae gradum trajicitur;” and also Caius, (Dig. lib. 46. tit. 2. leg. 56.), “Qui scalam commodaverit ad ascendendum.”

³ Quoquo modo. In some editions quo quisque modo.

⁴ Suo loco. Equivalent to loco sibi opportuno, “a place of his own selecting.”

⁵ Ceterum exercitum, “the rest of his army.”

⁶ Qua. Understand parte. If we read quae, as most editions aut luxuriae concedit: sed, quoniam armis bellum parum procedebat, insidias regi per amicos tendere, et eorum perfidia pro armis uti parat. Igitur Bomilcarem, qui Romae cum Jugurtha fuerat, et inde, vadibus datis, clam Massivae de nece judicium fugerat, quod ei,¹ per maxumam amicitiam, maxima copia fallendi erat, multis pollicitationibus adgreditur; ac primo efficit, ut ad se colloquendi gratia occultus veniat: dein fide data, “ si Jugurtham vivum aut necatum tradidisset, fore, ut illi senatus impunitatem et sua omnia concederet,” facile Numidae persuadet, cum ingenio infido, tum metuenti, ne, si pax cum Romanis fieret, ipse per conditiones ad supplicium traderetur.

LXII. Is, ubi primum opportunum, Jugurtham anxiū ac miserantem fortunas suas accedit: monet atque lacrumans obtestatur, “ uti aliquando sibi liberisque et genti Numidarum, optume merenti, provideat: omnibus praeliis sese victos, agrum vastatum, multos mortalis captos aut occisos, regni opes comminutas esse: satis saepe jam et virtutem militum, et fortunam tentatam: caveret, ne, illo cunctante, Numidae sibi consulant.” His atque talibus aliis ad deditiōnē regis animum impellit. Mittuntur ad imperatōrem legati: “² Jugurtham imperata facturum, ac ³sine ulla pactione sese regnumque suum in illius fidem tradere.” Metellus propere cunctos senatorii ordinis ex hibernis arcessiri jubet: eorum atque aliorum, quos idoneos ducebant, consilium habet. Ita more majorum, ex condo, we shall have merely an unmeaning gloss, quae proxima est Numidiae.

¹ Per maxumam amicitiam, “ on account of his very intimate friendship with the monarch.” Compare Butler, Praxis on the Latin Prepositions, p. 87.

² Jugurtham. Understand qui dicerent. Some editions have qui Jugurtham imperata facturum dicerent.

³ Sine ulla pactione, “ unconditionally.”

sili decreto, per legatos Jugurtha imperat argenti pondo ducenta millia, elephantes omnis, equorum et armorum aliquantum. Quae postquam sine mora facta sunt, jubet omnes perfugas vinctos adduci : eorum magna pars, ut jussum erat, adducti ; pauci, cum primum deditio coepit, ad regem Bocchum in Maureta-niam abierant. Igitur Jugurtha, ubi armis virisque et pecunia spoliatus, cum ipse ad ¹imperandum ²Tisidium vocaretur, rursus coepit flectere animum suum, et ex mala conscientia digna timere. Denique multis diebus per dubitationem consumptis ; cum modo taedio rerum adversarum omnia bello potiora duceret, interdum se-cum ipse reputaret, quam gravis casus in servitium ex regno foret ; multis magnisque praesidiis nequidquam perditis, de integro bellum sumit. Romae senatus de provinciis consultus Numidiam Metello decreverat.

LXIII. PER idem tempus Uticae forte ³C. Mario, per hostias dis supplicanti, " magna atque mirabilia portendi" haruspex dixerat : " proinde quae animo

¹ Imperandum. The gerund is here used, according to the grammarians, in a passive sense—" for the purpose of being ordered ;" i. e. to receive orders. Cortius cites a passage from Cicero (Ep. 9. 25.) to confirm this interpretation : " Nunc ades ad imperandum vel ad parendum potius, sic enim antiqui loquebantur.—Hold yourself in readiness in the meantime to receive orders, or rather to obey them ; for so our forefathers spoke." An active meaning, however, though not a very elegant one, may be given to the gerund in the present passage of Sallust ; viz. " for the purpose of Metellus's ordering him." Compare note 6. page 160.

² Tisidium. Glareanus thinks Tisidium to be the same with what Ptolemy calls Thisica, between the city of Thabraca and the river Bagradas. Barbiè du Bocage, however, is inclined to make it identical with Tysdrus, in the district of Emporiae. The village of El-jem now occupies a part of the site of this latter city.

³ C. Mario. Marius was a complete slave to superstition. Plutarch and Frontinus both make mention of a Syrian woman named Martha, whom he carried about with him, and who, as he pretended, and very likely believed, was possessed of the gift of prophecy.

¹agitabat, fretus dis ageret; fortunam quam saepissime experiretur; cuncta prospera eventura." At illum jam antea consulatus ingens cupidus exagitabat: ad quem capiendum, praeter vetustatem familiae, alia omnia abunde erant; industria, probitas, militiae magna scientia, ²animus belli ingens, domi modicus, lubidinis et divitiarum vixit, tantummodo gloriae avidus. Sed ³his natus, et omnem pueritiam ⁴Arpini altus, ubi primum aetas militiae patiens fuit, ⁵stipendiis faciundis, non Graeca facundia, neque ⁶urbanis munditiis sese exercuit: ita inter artis bonas integrum ingenium brevi adolevit. Ergo ubi primum tribunatum militarem a populo petit, plerisque faciem ejus ignorantibus, facile ⁷notus per omnis tribus declaratur. Deinde ab eo magistratu alium post alium sibi peperit; semperque in potestatis eo modo agitabat, uti ampliore, quam gerebat, dignus haberetur. Tamen is, ⁸ad id locorum

¹ Agitabat, "he was meditating."

² Animus belli ingens, "a high martial spirit."

³ His natus. Understand virtutibus after his. Most other editions read Sed is, natus et altus, &c. The former lection, however, appears decidedly preferable, as marking the contrast between the early and later periods of Marius's life.

⁴ Arpini. Arpinum, now Arpino, a town of Latium, which originally belonged to the Volsci, and which the Romans wrested from the Samnites 307 B.C. It was the birth-place also of Cicero. Arpino is now a poor village.

⁵ Stipendiis faciundis, "in actual service." Literally, "in making campaigns."

⁶ Urbanis munditiis, "in the polite accomplishments of a city life."

⁷ Notus. At first no one knew who the candidate was; but when his name, Caius Marius, was heard, he was easily recognised by the people as a brave and gallant soldier. Facile notus may therefore be rendered, "being easily recognised by name."

⁸ Ad id locorum, "up to that time." Locus is here used for tempus. Compare chapter 72. of this narrative: post id locorum; i. e. postea. So Terence uses interea loci for interea, and Plautus, interibi.

talis vir, (nam postea ambitione praeceps datus est), ¹consulatum appetere non audebat. Etiam tum alias magistratus plebes, consulatum nobilitas inter se per manus tradebat. Novus nemo tam clarus, neque tam egregiis factis erat, quin ²his indignus illo honore et quasi pollutus haberetur.

LXIV. Igitur, ubi Marius haruspicis dicta eodem intendere videt, quo cupido animi hortabatur, ab Me-tello petundi gratia missionem rogat: cui quamquam virtus gloria, atque alia optanda bonis superabant, tamen inerat ³contemtor animus et superbìa, commune nobilitatis malum. Itaque primum commotus insolita re mirari ejus consilium, et quasi per amicitiam monere, “ne ⁴tam prava inciperet, neu super fortunam animum gereret: non omnia omnibus cupiunda esse: debere illi res suas satis placere; postremo caveret id petere a populo Romano, quod illi jure negaretur.” Postquam haec atque talia dixit, neque animus Marii flectitur, respondit, “⁵ubi primum potuisset per negotia publica, facturum sese, quae peteret.” Ac postea saepius eadem postulanti, fertur dixisse, “ne festinaret abire:
satis mature illum cum filio suo consulatum petiturum.”
Is eo tempore contubernio patris ibidem militabat, ⁶annos natus circetur xx. Quae res Marium cum pro-

¹ Consulatum appetere. Cortius reads petere merely, and considers consulatum understood.

² His. Cortius reads is. With our reading, either nobilibus may be understood, or his may be rendered, with reference to it, “by these.”

³ Contemtor animus, “a disdainful spirit.”

⁴ Tam prava, “so erroneous a line of conduct.”

⁵ Ubi primum, &c. “as soon as the public business would permit.”

⁶ Annos natus, &c. As the strictly legal age for obtaining the consulship was 43 years, Marius, according to the ironical advice of Metellus, would have to wait 23 years longer; and as we may suppose Marius to have been, at the time here alluded to, at least 43

honore, quem adfectabat, tum contra Metellum vehementer accenderat. Ita cupidine atque ira, pessumis consultoribus, ¹grassari; neque facto ullo, neque dicto abstinere, quod modo ²ambitiosum foret: milites, quibus in hibernis praeverat, laxiore imperio, quam antea, habere: apud negotiatores, quorum magna multitudo Uticae erat, ³criminose simul, et magnifice de bello loqui: “⁴dimidia pars exercitus sibi permitteretur, paucis diebus Jugurtham in catenis habiturum: ab imperatore consulto trahi, quod homo ⁵inanis et ⁶regiae superbiae imperio nimis gauderet.” Quae omnia illis eo firmiora videbantur, quod diuturnitate belli res familiaris corruperant, et ⁷animo cupienti nihil satis festinatur.

LXV. ERAT praeterea in exercitu nostro Numida quidam nomine Gauda, Mastanabalis filius, Masinissae nepos, quem Micipsa testamento ⁸secundum haeredem scripserat, ⁹morbis confectus, et ob eam caussam mente paullum imminuta. Cui Metellus petenti, more regum years, (since he entertained thoughts of then standing for the consulship), he would have to delay his suit until he was 66 years old. Compare Plutarch's account of this same circumstance, at the conclusion of note 4. page 270. of this narrative.

¹ Grassari, “he advanced boldly on to his object.”

² Ambitiosum, “calculated to gain popularity.”

³ Criminose, &c. “both in a style of accusation as regarded Metellus, and boastingly with respect to himself.”

⁴ Dimidia, &c. Understand si.

⁵ Inanis, “vain.”

⁶ Regiae superbiae, “with all the pride of a king.”

⁷ Animo cupienti, “to an ardent spirit.”

⁸ Secundum haeredem. By haeres secundus, among the Romans, was meant the individual to whom the inheritance descended, if the heir or heirs who were first appointed did not choose to accept, or died under the age of puberty.

⁹ Morbis confectus, &c. “wasted by disease, and consequently a little shattered in his mental powers.”

uti ¹sellam juxta poneret, item postea custodiae caussa turmam equitum Romanorum, utrumque negaverat; honorem, quod eorum modo foret, quos populus Romanus reges adpellavisset; praesidium, quod contumeliosum in eos foret, si equites Romani satellites Numidae traderentur. Hunc Marius ²anxium adgreditur atque hortatur, uti contumeliarum ³imperatoris cum suo auxilio poenas petat: hominem ob morbos animo parum valido ⁴secunda oratione extollit: “illum regem, ingentem virum, Masinissae nepotem esse: si Jugurtha captus, aut occisus, imperium Numidiae sine mora habiturum: ⁵id adeo mature posse evenire, si ipse consul ad id bellum missus foret.” Itaque et illum, et ⁶equites Romanos, milites et negotiatores, alios ipse, plerosque spes pacis impellit, uti Romam ad suos necessarios aspere in Metellum de bello scribant, Marium imperatorem poscant. Sic illi a multis mor-

¹ Sellam. The general had a chair of state, on which he sat when he presided in a council of war, or in judgment, or gave audience to ambassadors. His lieutenants, or legati, and other persons of distinction, took places around him; and if a king happened to be in the army, he sat next to the general on his right hand. The sella curulis, used not only on these occasions but by all the higher class of Roman magistrates, was a stool or seat without a back, with four crooked feet fixed to the extremities of cross pieces of wood, joined by a common axis, somewhat in the form of the letter X, and covered with leather; so that it might be conveniently folded together for the purpose of carriage, and set down wherever the magistrate chose to use it. It was frequently adorned with ivory, and hence called Curule ebur.

² Anxium, “ vexed at the refusal.”

³ Imperatoris. Some editions have in imperatorem.

⁴ Secunda oratione, “ in a flattering speech.”

⁵ Id adeo, “ that this indeed.”

⁶ Equiles Romanos. The farmers of the revenue, who collected the public taxes in this quarter, and also those persons of equestrian rank who traded in these parts.

talibus ¹ honestissima suffragatione consulatus petebatur : simul ea tempestate ² plebes, nobilitate fusa per legem Mamiliam, novos extollebat. Ita Mario cuncta procedere.

LXVI. INTERIM Jugurtha postquam, omissa deditione, bellum incipit, cum magna cura parare omnia, festinare, cogere exercitum : civitates, quae ab se defecerant, formidine, aut ³ ostentando praemia adfectare : communire suos locos ; arma, tela, alia, quae spe pacis amiserat, ⁴ reficere, aut ⁵ commercari : servitia Romanorum adlicere, et eos ipsos, qui in praesidiis erant, pecunia tentare : prorsus nihil intactum, neque quietum pati : ⁶ cuncta agitare. Igitur Vagenses, quo Metellus initio, Jugurtha pacificate, praesidium imposuerat, fatigati regis ⁷ suppliciis, neque antea voluntate alienati, principes civitatis inter se conjurant : nam volgus, uti plerumque solet, et maxime Numidarum, ingenio mobili, seditiosum atque ⁸ discordiosum erat, cupidum novarum rerum, quieti et otio advorsum. Dein, compositis inter se rebus, diem tertium constituunt, quod is ⁹ festus celebratusque per omnem Africam, ¹⁰ ludum

¹ Honestissima suffragatione, " by a very respectable interest."

² Plebes. A noun of the fifth declension, plebes,—ei. Compare Cic. de Leg. 3. 3. Lucan. 3. 58. ; 7. 760. ; 9. 254. Sil. Ital. 8. 271. ; 9. 636. &c.

³ Ostentando, " by offering."

⁴ Reficere, " he made anew."

⁵ Commercari, " he bought up on all sides."

⁶ Cuncta agitare, " he put every engine in motion."

⁷ Suppliciis, " by the entreaties."

⁸ Discordiosum, " contentious." This is supposed by some to be a word peculiar to Sallust; it occurs, however, in Sidonius, Ep. 6. 2. extr. and in Cyprian, Ep. 42. 2.

⁹ Festus. Days among the Romans were distinguished into three general divisions: the "Dies Festi," "Dies Profesti," and "Dies Intercisi." The Dies Festi, or "holy days," were consecrated to religious purposes; the Dies Profesti were given to the common et lasciviam magis, quam formidinem ostentabat. Sed, ubi tempus fuit, centuriones tribunosque militares, et ipsum praefectum oppidi, T. Turpilium Silanum, alias alium domos suas invitant: eos omnis, praeter Turpibusiness of life; and the Dies Intercisi were "half holidays," divided between sacred and ordinary occupations. The Dies Festi were set apart for the celebration of these four solemnities: "Sacra-ficia," "Epulae," "Ludi," and "Feriae." The three first were sacrifices, banquets, and games, in honour of the gods. Feriae were either public or private. The public were of four kinds: "Stativae," "Conceptivae," "Imperativae," and "Nundinae." The Feriae Stativae were stated festivals appointed by the Calendar: Conceptivae were named by the magistrates or priests, and were annually observed: Imperativae were appointed by the consuls, or chief magistrates, on any extraordinary occasion: Nundinae, because kept every ninth day, (quasi Novendinae), correspond to the modern fairs or great market-days, when the people from the country brought their commodities into the city, and exposed them to sale. Though they thus were at first in the number of the Feriae, they were afterwards, for the accommodation of the country people, declared to be Dies Fasti, on which law-suits were determined. The Feriae Privatae were holidays observed by particular persons, or families, as birth-days and the like: The Profesti were "Fasti," "Comitiales," "Comperendini," "Stati," and "Praeliares." The Dies Fasti were so called, because on them it was lawful (jus) for the praetor to sit in judgment, and to say "Do, dico, addico," "I give laws, declare rights, adjudge redress." For it is to be observed, that it was the business of the praetor, Dare actionem et judices, "To give the writ, and to name the judges, or jury." Dicere jus, "To dispense justice, and Addicere bona, "To adjudge compensation or redress," by assigning, for example, the goods of the debtor to the creditor. All other days were called Nefasti, or "Non-court days." Comitiales were for holding the comitia or public assemblies: Comperendini, for giving bail: Stati, for deciding causes between a Roman and a foreigner: Praeliares, for attacking an enemy; it being deemed unlawful to do this during the continuance of some particular feasts.—Crombie's Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 56. 3d ed.

¹⁰ Ludum et lasciviam, &c. "presented an aspect of sport and merriment rather than of what was calculated to alarm."

lium, inter epulas obruncant: postea milites palantis, inermos, quippe in tali die ac sine imperio, adgrediuntur. Idem plebes facit, pars edocti ab nobilitate, alii studio talium rerum incitati, quis, acta consiliumque ignorantibus, tumultus ipse et res novae satis placebant.

LXVII. ROMANI milites, improviso metu, incerti ignarique quid potissimum facerent, ¹trepidare ad arcem oppidi, ubi signa et scuta erant: praesidium hostium, portae ante clausae fugam prohibebant; ad hoc mulieres puerique ²pro tectis aedificiorum saxa, et alia, quae locus praebebat, certatim mittere. Ita neque caveri ³anceps malum, neque a fortissimum ⁴infirmis sumo generi resisti posse: juxta boni malique, strenui et imbelles inulti obruncati. ⁵In ea tanta asperitate, saevissimum Numidis et oppido undique clauso, Turpilius unus ex omnibus Italicis profugit intactus: id misericordiane hospitis, an pactione, an casu ita evenierit, parum comperimus; nisi, quia illi in tanto malo turpis vita fama integra potior, improbus ⁶intestabilisque videtur.

LXVIII. METELLUS, postquam de rebus Vagae

¹ Trepidare ad arcem oppidi, “ran in confusion to the citadel.”

² Pro tectis, “in front of the roofs;” i. e. on the eaves of the houses.

³ Anceps malum, “the evil which threatened on all sides.”

⁴ Infirmissimo generi, “the feeblest portion of the human race;” i. e. women and children.

⁵ In ea tanta asperitate. “In this so distressing a situation of affairs.”

⁶ Intestabilis, “detestable,” or “infamous.” The word properly signifies one who can neither make a will, be a witness, nor receive a testamentary bequest. Sallust, in his account of the conduct of Turpilius, does not agree with Plutarch, who makes the accusation to have been a false one, and Turpilius to have been condemned through the agency of Marius. Compare note 4, page 270.

actis comperit, paullisper moestus ¹e conspectu abit; deinde, ubi ²ira et aegritudo permixta, cum maxuma cura ultum ire injurias festinat. Legionem, cum qua hiemabat, et, quam plurimos potest, Numidas equites pariter cum occasu solis ³expeditos educit: et postera die circiter ⁴horam tertiam pervenit in quamdam planitiem, locis paullo superioribus circumventam. Ibi milites fessos itineris magnitudine, et jam ⁵abnuentis omnia, docet, “ oppidum Vagam non amplius mille passuum abesse: decere illos reliquum laborem aequo animo pati, dum pro civibus suis, viris fortissimis atque miserrumis, poenas caperent;” praeterea ⁶praedam benigne ostentat. Sic animis eorum arrectis, equites in primo ⁷late, pedites quam artissime ire, signa occulare jubet.

¹ E conspectu abit, “ withdraws from public view.”

² Ira et aegritudo, “ resentment and grief.”

³ Expeditos, “ disengaged of baggage.”

⁴ Horam tertiam. The Romans divided the natural day, from sunrise to sunset, into twelve hours, which were of course shorter in winter and longer in summer. At the equinoxes, their third hour would exactly coincide with our ninth. The night was divided into four watches, (vigilia prima, secunda, &c.), each consisting of three hours, which were likewise of a different length at different times of the year. Thus hora sexta noctis, “ mid-night;” septima, “ one o’clock in the morning,” &c.

⁵ Abnuentis omnia, “ completely averse to any farther exertion.” The meaning is, not that the troops now openly refused obedience to orders, but that by their looks and gestures they plainly expressed their unwillingness to proceed. This is extremely well expressed by abnuentis.

⁶ Praedam benigne ostentat, “ he generously offers them the booty of the place.”

⁷ Late. The common text has latere, a manifest corruption; for if this be meant as an ablative from latus, what can be the significance of ire in primo latere? If, on the contrary, it be intended for the infinitive of lateo, it militates against the sense, as the object of LXIX. VAGENSES ubi animum advortere, ad se vorsum exercitum pergere, primo, uti erat res, Metellum rati, portas clausere; deinde, ubi neque agros vastari, et eos, qui primi aderant, Numidas equites vident, rursum Jugurtham arbitrati, cum magno gaudio obvii procedunt. Equites peditesque, repente signo dato, alii volgum ¹effusum oppido caedere; alii ad portas festinare; pars turris capere: ira atque praedae spes amplius, quam lassitudo posse. Ita Vagenses biduum modo ²ex perfidia laetati: civitas magna et opulens ³poenae cuncta, aut praedae fuit. Turpilius quem, praefectum oppidi, unum ex omnibus profugisse supra ostendimus, jussus a Metello caussam dicere, postquam sese parum expurgat, condemnatus, verberatusque, ⁴capite poenas solvit: ⁵nam is civis ex Latio erat.

Metellus was that the horse should be seen, the foot concealed from view.

¹ Effusum, "that had come out in crowds."

² Ex perfidia, "since their treachery."

³ Poenae cuncta, &c. "was entirely given up to punishment or to plunder."

⁴ Capite poenas solvit. According to Plutarch, Turpilius and his family had long been retainers to that of Metellus, and he attended him in this war in the character of master of the artificers. Marius, who was one of the council of war that tried him, was not only himself severe against him, but stirred up most of the other judges; so that it was carried against the opinion of Metellus, and it was much against his will that he passed upon him sentence of death. A short time afterwards, according to Plutarch, the accusation appeared a false one, and all the other officers sympathized with Metellus, who was overwhelmed with sorrow; while Marius with joy declared that the thing was all his own doing, and was not ashamed to acknowledge in all companies that he had lodged an avenging fury in the breast of Metellus, which would not fail to punish him for having put to death the hereditary friend of his family. Plutarch states, that after this they became more open enemies, and that the conversation between Metellus and Marius, of which Sallust makes mention in the 64th chapter of this narrative, took place subsequently to this

LXX. PER idem tempus Bomilcar, cuius impulsu Jugurtha deditio[n]em, quam metu deseruit, incep[er]at, suspectus regi, et ipse eum suspiciens, novas res cu[pe]re; ad perniciem ejus dolum quaerere; diu noctuque ⁶fatigare animum: denique omnia tentando, socium sibi adjungit Nabda[s]am, hominem nobilem, magnis opibus, ⁷carum acceptumque popularibus suis; qui plerumque seorsum ab rege exercitum ductare, et omnis res exsequi solitus erat, quae Jugurthae fesso, aut majoribus adstricto ⁸superaverant: ex quo illi gloria opesque inventae. Igitur utriusque consilio dies insidiis statuit: cetera, uti res posceret, ex tempore parari placuit. Nabda[s]a ad exercitum profectus, event. According to the biographer, one day when Marius was standing by, Metellus said by way of insult, “ You are thinking, then, my good friend, of leaving us, and going home to solicit the consulship: would you not be contented to stay, and be consul with this son of mine.” The son of Metellus, adds Plutarch, was then very young.—Plut. Vir. Mar. c. 8. ed. Hutton, vol. iii. p. 68.

⁵ Nam is civis ex Latio erat. It was enacted by the Porcian law, that no one should bind, scourge, or kill a Roman citizen; and, by the Sempronian law, that sentence should not be passed upon the life of a Roman citizen without the order of the people. It still remains a disputed point whether the operation of these laws was suspended or not in the Roman camp. The present passage of Sallust goes to prove, that the laws in question were not superseded by the military power of the consul, but remained in full force, since the words of our author fairly imply that Turpilius would not have lost his life had he been a citizen of Rome. In the days of Polybius, however, before the period of which Sallust treats, it would appear that the punishment of delinquents in the camp was not impeded by the laws mentioned above. The subject is discussed by Lipsius (De Mil. Rom. 5. dial. 18.), though without being brought to any definite conclusion.

⁶ Fatigare animum, “ he wearied his invention.”

⁷ Carum acceptumque. Some editions read “ magnis opibus clarum, acceptumque,” &c.

⁸ Superaverant, “ had remained over;” i.e. had remained undone.

quem ¹inter hiberna Romanorum jussus habebat, ne ager, inultis hostibus, vastaretur. Is postquam, magnitudine facinoris percusus, ad tempus non venit, ²metusque rem impedibat; Bomilcar simul cupidus incepta patrandi, et timore socii anxius, ne, omissa ³vetere consilio, novum quaereret, litteras ad eum per homines fidelis mittit, ⁴mollitiem secordiamque viri accusare: testari deos, per quos juravisset: ⁵praemia Metelli in pestem ne converteret: Jugurthae exitium adesse, ceterum suane, an virtute Metelli periret, ⁶id modo agitari: proinde reputaret cum animo suo, praemia, an cruciatum, mallet."

LXXI. SED, cum hae litterae adlatae, forte Nabdal-sa, exercito corpore fessus, in lecto quiescebat; ubi, cognitis Bomilcaris verbis, primo cura, deinde, uti ⁷aegrum animum solet, somnus cepit. Erat ei Numida quidam, negotiorum curator, fidus acceptusque, et omnium consiliorum, nisi novissimi, particeps. Qui postquam adlatas litteras audivit, ex consuetudine ratus

¹ Inter hiberna. In chapter 61. we are informed that Metellus had fixed the winter-quarters of his army in that part of the Roman province which was nearest to Numidia, and that he had besides stationed garrisons in several cities of Numidia; hence the propriety of the phrase inter hiberna.

² Metusque rem impedibat. Some consider these words superfluous after what immediately precedes: magnitudine facinoris percusus ad tempus non venit. Sallust, however, wishes to explain the term percusus. Nabdalsa was struck by the daring nature of the attempt; hence fear seized upon him: and this fear, which prevented him from coming at the appointed time, defeated the enterprise.

³ Vetere consilio, "his former design."

⁴ Mollitiem, "the want of energy." Some editions have in quis preceding this word.

⁵ Praemia. Preceded in some editions by monere.

⁶ Id modo agitari, "that alone was the question."

⁷ Aegrum animum, "a mind ill at ease."

¹opera et ingenio suo opus esse, in tabernaculum introivit: dormiente illo epistolam, super caput in pulvino temere positam, sumit ac perlegit; dein propere, cognitis insidiis, ad regem pergit. Nabdalsa, post paulo experctus, ubi neque epistolam reperit, et rem omnem, ²uti acta, cognovit, primo ³indicem persecui conatus; postquam id frustra fuit, Jugurtham placandi gratia accedit: “⁴quaes ipse paravisset, perfidia clientis sui praeventa:” lacrumans obtestatur “per amicitiam, perque sua antea fideliter acta, ne super tali scelere suspectum sese haberet.”

LXXII. Ad ea rex aliter, atque animo gerebat, placide respondit. Bomilcare aliisque multis, quos socios insidiarum cognoverat, interfectis, iram ⁵oppresserat; ne qua ex eo negotio seditio oriretur. Neque post id locorum Jugurthae dies aut nox ulla ⁶quieta ⁷fuere: neque loco, neque mortali cuiquam, aut tempori satis credere: civis, hostis juxta metuere: ⁸circumspectare omnia, et omni strepitu pavescere: alio atque alio loco, saepe contra decus regium noctu requiescere: inter-

¹ Opera et ingenio suo, “of his assistance and abilities.”

² Uti acta. Some editions have after acta the words ex perfugis cognovit.

³ Indicem, “the informer.”

⁴ Quae ipse paravisset, &c. “that what he himself had intended to do, had been anticipated by the treachery of his dependant.”

⁵ Oppresserat, “he had suppressed.”

⁶ Quieta, “given to uninterrupted repose.”

⁷ Fuere. Some editions have fuit, and, strictly speaking, the singular is here the proper form. Similar deviations, however, sometimes occur in the best writers. Thus Cicero, Or. 2. 4. 16. “ne Sulpicius . . . aut Cotta plus quam ego apud te valere videantur.” Compare Heusinger ad Cic. de Off. 1. 41. and Longinus, 14. ed. Weiske: πᾶς ἦν Πλάτων ἢ Δημοσθένης Θεόποτας, ἢ εἰς ιστορία Θουκυδίδης.

⁸ Circumspectare, “he narrowly inspected.”

dum somno excitus; arreptis armis tumultum facere : ita formidine quasi recordia, exagitari.

LXXXIII. Igitur Metellus, ubi de casu Bomilcaris et indicio patefacto ex perfugis cognovit, rursus, tamquam ad integrum bellum, cuncta parat festinatque. Marium, ¹fatigantem de profectioне, simul et invitum, et offensum sibi, parum idoneum ratus, domum dimitit. Et Romae plebes, litteris, quae de ²Metello ac Mario missae erant, cognitis, ³volenti animo de ambo-

¹ Fatigantem de profectioне, “ importuning him for leave to set out.”

² Metello ac Mario. Compare chapter 65. towards the close.

³ Volenti animo. Cortius and others are inclined to consider volenti animo as the dative by a Greek construction, and depending on quae erant understood. It is far preferable, however, to regard volenti animo as an ablative. When the passage can be thus explained on the simplest principles of construction, it seems altogether unnecessary to have recourse to a harsh and almost ungrammatical mode of explanation, which the advocates for the dative, in this instance, have not hesitated to do. Nor does volenti animo, even supposing it were the dative, and that quae erant were understood, bear any close resemblance to the Greek idiom to which Cortius and others would refer it. The rule for that peculiar idiom in Greek is as follows: “ The verbs εἴρανται and γίγνεσθαι are often accompanied by a participle of the verb ‘to wish,’ &c. in the dative; in which case the participle only, as the leading idea, is translated by the finite verb.” (Compare Matthiae, G. G. sect. 391. e.) Thus Od. γ, 228. οὐκ ἀντιμούρει ἐλπαράνω τα γένοτα: “ I had not expected this.” Herod. 9. 46. ἵτει δὲ ὅτι ἡδομένουσιν ἡμῖν οἱ λόγοι γεγνήσοται: “ Since we were pleased with your discourse.” Thucyd. 6. 46. τῷ Νικίᾳ προδόχημένω μὲν τὰ περὶ τῶν Ἐγεσταίων: “ Nicias expected the events in Segesta.” An imitation of this in Latin occurs in Tacitus, Agric. vii. 18. “ Quibus bellum volentibus erat;” and in chapters 84. and 100. of the present narrative. Now these Latin examples, to say nothing of the Greek, are entirely different from the one at present under consideration: this last, in order to come under the above rule, and have volenti in the dative, must be entirely modelled anew, and stand thus: “ Plebi, litteris quae de Metello ac Mario missae erant cognitis, volenti erant quae de ambabus fuerant accepta.” The ex-

bus acceperant. Imperatori nobilitas, quae antea decori, invidiae esse : at illi alteri generis humilitas favorem addiderat : ceterum in utroque magis ²studia partium, quam bona, aut mala sua, moderata. Praeterea, seditiosi magistratus volgum exagitare, Metellum omnibus concionibus capitis arcessere Marii virtutem in majus celebrare. Denique plebes sic accensa, uti opifices agrestesque omnes, ³quorum res fidesque in manibus sitae erant, relictis operibus, ⁴frequentarent Marium, et sua necessaria post illius honorem ducent. Ita, perculsa nobilitate, ⁵post multas tempestates novo homini consulatus mandatur : et postea populus, a tribuno plebis, Manilio Mancino, rogatus, QUEM VELLET CUM JUGURTHA BELLUM GERERE? frequens Marium jussit. Senatus paullo ante Metello ⁶decreverat : ea res frustra fuit.

pression volenti animo, then, must be regarded as the ablative, and the whole clause rendered as follows: "The commons, having learned the contents of the letters which had been sent respecting Metellus and Marius, had received the information contained in them respecting both with a feeling of satisfaction," or "with willing minds."

¹ Illi. Used as the definite article.

² Studia partium, "party spirit."

³ Quorum res fidesque, &c. "whose property and credit depended on their labour."

⁴ Frequentarent Marium, "attended Marius in crowds."

⁵ Post multas tempestates, "after a long series of years." Compare Catiline, chap. 53. "multis tempestatisbus." Cicero, another novus homo, obtained the consulship a long period after Marius. Compare his own words (2 Agrar. 1.), "Me perlongo intervallo prope memoriae temporumque nostrorum primum hominum novum consulem fecistis," &c. Some very erroneously refer tempestates in this passage to civil dissensions, contrary to the usage of Sallust.

⁶ Decreverat. Understand Numidiam, which in some editions is expressed. The determination of the consular provinces properly belonged to the senate. Sometimes the people, as in the present instance, reversed what the senate had decreed respecting the provinces. So the attempt of Marius, by means of the tribune Sulpicius, LXXIV. Eodem tempore Jugurtha, amisis amicis; quorum plerosque ipse necaverat, ceteri formidine, pars ad Romanos, alii ad regem Bocchum profugerant; cum neque bellum geri sine administris posset, et novorum fidem in tanta perfidia veterum experiri periculosum duceret, ¹varius incertusque agitabat: neque illi res, neque consilium, aut quisquam hominum satis placebat: itinera praefectosque in dies mutare: modo aduersum hostes, interdum in solitudines pergere: saepe in fuga, ac post paullo spem in armis habere: dubitare, virtuti popularium, an fide minus crederet: ita, quo-cumque intenderat, res advorsae erant. Sed, inter eas moras, repente sese Metellus cum exercitu ostendit. Numidae ab Jugurtha ²pro tempore parati instructique: dein praelium incipitur. Qua in parte rex ³adfuit, ibi aliquamdiu certatum: ceteri omnes [ejus milites] primo concursu pulsi fugatique. Romani signorum et armorum aliquanto numero, hostium paucorum potiti: nam ferme Numidas in omnibus praeliis pedes magis quam arma ⁴tuta sunt.

LXXV. EA fuga Jugurtha ⁵impensius modo rebus suis diffidens, cum perfugis et parte equitatus in solito get the command of the war against Mithridates transferred from Sylla to himself by the suffrage of the people, gave occasion to the first civil war at Rome.

¹ Varius incertusque agitabat. Understand sese; “ was distract-ed by a variety of schemes, and uncertain which to put in operation.”

² Pro tempore, “ as well as the occasion would admit.”

³ Adfuit. Understand pugnae, which in some editions is expressed.

⁴ Tuta sunt. For tuita sunt, from tueor. The primitive form was tuor, tuitus sum, tui. Compare Catullus, 20. 5. Stat. Achill. 1. 131. ap. Prisc. 8. 17. Plaut. Asin. 2. 3. 23. Id. Pers. 2. 2. 26. Terent. Heaut. 2. 4. 23. Acc. ap. Non. 2. 522. Turpil. ibid. 7. 20. Plaut. Asin. 1. 1. 111. and 3. 1. 20. Lucret. 4. 39. and 5. 319. &c.

⁵ Impensius modo, &c. “ now more than ever distrusting the success of his affairs.”

tudines, dein ¹Thalam pervenit, in oppidum magnum et opulentum, ubi plerique thesauri, ²filiorumque ejus multus pueritiae cultus erat. Quae postquam Metello comperta, quamquam inter Thalam flumenque proximum, spatio millium quinquaginta, loca arida atque vasta esse cognoverat, tamen, spe patrandi belli, [si ejus oppidi potitus foret], omnis asperitates supervadere, ac naturam etiam vincere adgreditur. Igitur omnia jumenta sarcinis levari jubet, nisi frumento diērum decem: ceterum utres modo, et alia aquae idonea portari. Praeterea conquirit ex agris, quam plurimum potest, domiti pecoris; eoque imponit ³vasa cujusque modi, pleraque lignea, collecta ex tuguriis Numidarum. Ad hoc, finitumis imperat, qui se post regis fugam Metello dederant, quam plurimum quisque aquae portarent; diem locumque, ⁴ubi praesto fuerint, praedicit.

¹ Thalam. Supposed by some to be the same with Telepte, now Ferre-anach; though this seems doubtful. Tacitus speaks of it (Ann. 3. 21.) as affording a place of refuge to the Romans, who retired into the desert, when Tacfarinas, a Numidian chief, had raised a rebellion. Compare Shaw, Travels in Barbary, vol. i. pt. 2. chap. 5.

² Filiorumque ejus, &c. "and where many things had been provided for the educating and rearing of his offspring." Filiorum appears to be here used both for sons and daughters. Compare Quintilian (9. 3.), "Jungit autem et diversos sexus, ut cum matrem feminamque filios dicimus." So also Cortius (ad loc.), "Filiorum credo etiam ad filias Jugurthae spectat. vide infra, cap. 80. quos supra, cap. 47. usitato liberorum nomine exprimit. A potiore enim sexu denominationem sumunt, et filios, fratres, soceros, patres, avos, reges dicunt, qui sunt ex utroque sexu."

³ Vasa. In the singular, vas, vasis; in the plural, vasa, vasorum. The old nominative vasum occurs in Plaut. Truc. 1. 1. 33. Charis. p. 119. Cledon. p. 1902.

⁴ Ubi praesto fuerint, praedicit. Cortius considers this a mere interpolation, with the exception of dicit, so that ubi praesto fuerint prae, according to him, is from a later hand than that of the historian. There is every reason to believe that the critic is right in Ipse ex flumine, quam proxumam oppido aquam supra diximus, jumenta onerat: eo modo instructus ad Thalam proficiscitur. Deinde, ubi ad id loci ventum, quo Numidis paeceperat, et castra posita munitaque sunt, tanta repente coelo missa vis aquae dicitur, ut ea modo exercitui satis superque foret. Praeterea commeatus spe amplior: quia Numidae, sicuti plerique in nova ditione, ¹officia intenderant. Ceterum milites ²religione pluvia magis usi: eaque res multum animis eorum addidit; nam rati sese dis immortalibus curae esse. Deinde postero die, contra opinionem Jugurthae, ad Thalam pervenient. Oppidani, qui se ³locorum asperitate munitos crediderant, magna atque insolita re perculti, nihil segnus bellum parare: idem nostri facere.

LXXVI. SED rex nihil jam ⁴infectum Metello credens, quippe qui omnia, ⁵arma, ⁶tela, locos, tempora, denique naturam ipsam, ⁶ceteris imperitantem, industria vicerat, cum liberis et magna parte pecuniae ex oppido noctu profugit: neque postea in ullo loco amplius una die, aut una nocte moratus, simulabat sese negotii gratia properare; ceterum proditionem timebat, quam vitare posse celeritate putabat: nam talia this judgment; for, in the first place, the addition of ubi praesto fuerint, in the present instance, is inconsistent with the general usage of Sallust, and, in the next, the application of ubi to both time and place is awkward and inelegant. Still we have allowed the common reading to remain: ubi must be rendered "when and where."

¹ Officia intenderant, "had overdone their duty;" had done more than they were ordered.

² Religione, "from a superstitious feeling."

³ Locorum asperitate, "by the wildness of the country."

⁴ Infectum, "impracticable."

⁵ Arma, tela, must be translated generally, "things calculated for defence, for offence."

⁶ Ceteris imperitantem, "giving laws to the rest of men."

consilia ¹per otium, et ex opportunitate capi. At Metellus, ubi oppidanos praelio intentos, simul oppidum et operibus, et loco munitum videt, vallo fossaque moenia circumvenit. Deinde locis ²ex copia maxume idoneis vineas agere, aggerem jacere, ³et super aggerem impositis turribus opus et administros tutari. Contra haec oppidani festinare, parare: prorsus ab utrisque nihil reliquum fieri. Denique Romani, multo ante labore praeliisque fatigati, post dies quadraginta, quam eo ventum erat, ⁴oppido modo potiti: praeda omnis ab perfugis ⁵corrupta. Ii postquam murum ⁶arietibus feriri, resque suas afflictas vident, aurum atque argentum, et alia, quae prima ducuntur, domum regiam comportant: ibi vino et epulis onerati, illaque, et domum, et semet igni corrumpunt; et quas victi ab hostibus poenas metuerant ⁷eas ipsi volentes pependere.

¹ Per otium, &c. "in time of leisure, and in consequence of opportunity."

² Ex copia, "out of the whole number."

³ Et super aggerem. We have retained the reading of Cortius, which appears much superior to that of the Bipont edition. The latter has as follows: insuper aggere, turribus, opus et administros tutari.

⁴ Oppido modo potiti, "made themselves masters of the town alone."

⁵ Corrupta, "destroyed."

⁶ Arietibus. The most formidable machine made use of by the Romans for the taking of cities was the aries, or "battering ram;" a long beam, like the mast of a ship, and armed at one end with iron in the form of a ram's head; whence it had its name. It was suspended by the middle with ropes or chains fastened to a beam that lay across two posts, and hanging thus equally balanced, it was by a hundred men, more or less, (who were frequently changed), violently thrust forward, drawn back, again pushed forward, till by repeated strokes it had shaken and broken down the wall with its iron head. The ram was covered with sheds or mantlets, called vineae, which have already been described.

⁷ Eas ipsi, &c. "these they suffered voluntarily from their own hands."

LXXVII. SED pariter cum capta Thala legati ex oppido Lepti ad Metellum venerant, orantes, “ uti praesidium praefectumque eo mitteret : Hamilcarem quemdam, hominem nobilem, factiosum, novis rebus studere ; advorsum quem neque imperia magistratum, neque leges valerent : ni id festinaret, in summo periculo ¹suam salutem, illorum socios fore.” Nam Lepitani jam inde a principio belli Jugurthini ad Bestiam consulem, et postea Romam miserant, amicitiam societatemque rogatum. Deinde, ubi ea impetrata, semper boni fidelesque mansere, et cuncta a Bestia, Albino, Metelloque imperata ²nave fecerant. Itaque ab imperatore facile, quae petebant, adepti. ³Eo missae cohortes Ligurum quatuor, et C. Annius praefectus.

LXXVIII. Id oppidum ab ⁴Sidoniis conditum, quos

¹ Suam salutem, &c. Illorum in this passage refers to the Romans, and it is the same as if Sallust had said, suam, qui illorum socii essent, salutem. The passage may hence be rendered, “ that their safety, who were the allies of the Romans, would be in the greatest danger.”

² Navi fecerant, “ they had executed with promptness.” The more usual form, and, we may add, the earlier one, would seem to have been gnavus, not navus. The term appears to be derived from the Greek γναῖος, by contraction γνᾶς, and with the insertion of the digamma, dropping at the same time the ι, we have γνᾶΦος, or, by subscribing the ι, γνῆΦος.

³ Eo missae. Cortius and others read emissae eo.

⁴ Sidonius. Sidon was a famous commercial city, the capital of Phoenicia, about 24 miles north of Tyre, which was one of its colonies. According to Josephus, (Antiq. Jud. I. 6. vol. i. p. 23. ed. Havercamp.), the place had its name from Sidonius, one of the sons of Chanaan, who founded it. Σιδώνος, ὁς καὶ πόλις ἱπέννυεν ἔκτοις ἐν τῇ Φοινίκῃ, Σιδών δὲ φέρεται Ελλήνων καλέσται. So also St Jerome, (Tradit. Heb. in Genes. vol. iii. p. 206. d.), “ De Chanaan primus natus est Sidon, a quo urbs in Phoenice Sidon vocatur.” Justin, on the other hand, refers the name to a Phoenician term signifying fish: “ Condita ibi urbe, quam a piscium ubertate Sidona appellaverunt.” (Hist. Philipp. 18. 4. 3. ed. Gronov.) With this accepimus, profugos ob discordias civilis, navibus in eos locos venisse: ceterum ¹situm inter duas ²Syrtis, quibus nomen ³ex re inditum. Nam duo sunt sinus prope in ⁴extrema Africa, impares magnitudine, pari natura: quorum ⁵proxima terrae praealta sunt; cetera, ⁶uti fors tulit, alta; alia in tempestate vadosa. Nam ubi mare magnum esse, et saevire ventis coepit, limum arenamque et saxa ingentia fluctus trahunt: ita facies locorum cum ventis simul mutatur. Ejus civitatis latter etymology Bochart agrees, (Geogr. Sac. cap. 35.), “Verum esse puto quod Sidonem scribit Trogus, a piscium ubertate sic appellari. Nam Said id est piscatio, hodieque Sidon dicitur, ut Galilaeae oppidum Bethsaida, quasi domum pescationis dixeris. Nec Sidoni minus congruit, quam Hebrei nos docent esse ad mare piscolissimum. Itaque cum Gen. 10. 15. legitur Sidon fuisse Chanaanis primogenitus, per Sidonem intellige Sidoniorum patrem, vel Sidonis conditorem: quocunque fuerit nomine.” Sidon is mentioned as being “very great” in the time of Joshua. When it was become extremely powerful by its wealth and commerce, it possessed the first rank among the other cities of Syria. The Sidonians were eminent for their industry, their knowledge of commerce, and their manufactures. In the issue, however, Tyre gained the ascendancy. Pliny (H. N. 5. 15.) calls Sidon “artifex vitri, Thebarumque Boeotiarum parens.” Sidon still subsists under the name of Sayde, a poor and ill-built town, having some commerce, however, with the adjacent regions.

¹ Silum. Of course the larger Leptis is here meant. Compare note 1, page 191, and note 1, page 192.

² Syrtis. Compare note 7, page 191.

³ Ex re, “from the reality,” or “from the real circumstances of the case.” The derivation, to which Sallust here alludes, is from the Greek τρέψω, trahe; because the sand and stones were drawn backward and forward by the violence of the wind and tide. This etymology is very probably false. Compare note 7, page 191.

⁴ Extrema Africa. The extremity of Africa toward the East, according to the ancient division of it, by which Egypt was excluded.

⁵ Proxuma. Understand loca.

⁶ Uti fors tulit, “as chance has brought about.”

lingua modo conversa connubio Numidarum: ¹leges, cultusque pleraque Sidonica; quae eo facilius retinebant, quod procul ab imperio regis aetatem agebant. Inter illos et ²frequentem Numidiam multi vastique loci erant.

LXXIX. SED, quoniam in has regiones per Leptitanorum negotia venimus, non indignum videtur, egregium atque mirabile facinus duorum Carthaginensium memorare: eam rem locus admonuit. Qua tempestate Carthaginenses pleraque Africae imperitabant, Cyrenenses quoque magni atque opulenti fuere. ³Ager in medio arenosus, una specie: neque flumen, neque mons erat, qui finis eorum discerneret; quae res eos in magno diuturno bello inter se habuit. Postquam utrumque ⁴legiones, item classes fusae fugataeque, et alteri alteros aliquantum adriverant; veriti, ne mox victos victoresque defessos alias adgrederetur, ⁵per inducias sponzionem faciunt, “uti certo die legati domo proficiscerentur; quo in loco inter se obvii fuissent, is communis utriusque populi finis haberetur.” Igitur Carthagine duo fratres missi, ⁶quibus nomen Philaenis erat,

¹ Leges, &c. “their laws, and the principal features in their mode of life, were Sidonian.” Cultus is here the genitive, dependant upon pleraque. Some editions have legum cultusque.

² Frequentem Numidiam, “the thickly settled part of Numidia.” After frequentem understand oppidis et cultoribus. — Multi vastique loci, “a large tract of desert country.”

³ Ager in medio arenosus, &c. “a sandy country intervened, of one uniform appearance;” i. e. a naked open plain.

⁴ Legiones, “armies.” Sallust here speaks “Romano more,” and applies to other nations terms which can only suit his own.

⁵ Per inducias, “during a truce.”

⁶ Quibus nomen, &c. “whose name was Philaeni.” An elegant construction, the dative Philaeni being attracted to the dative of the person. The plain syntax would be quibus nomen Philaeni erat. Compare Livy, 3. 17. “Consules leges decemvirales, quibus tabulis duodecim est nomen, in aes incisas in publico proposuerunt.”

maturavere iter pergere: Cyrenenses tardius iere. Id secordiane, an casu acciderit, parum cognovi. Ceterum solet in illis locis tempestas haud secus, atque in mari retinere. Nam ubi, per loca aequalia et ¹nuda gignentium, ventus coortus arenam humo excitavit, ea, magna vi agitata, ora oculosque implere solet; ita prospectu impedito, ²morari iter. Postquam Cyrenenses aliquanto posteriores se vident, et ³ob rem corruptam domi poenas metuunt; criminari, Carthaginenses ante tempus domo digressos, conturbare rem: denique omnia malle, quam victi abire. Sed cum ⁴Poeni aliam conditionem, tantummodo aequam, peterent, ⁵Graeci ⁶optionem Carthaginem faciunt, “⁷vel illi, quos finis populo suo peterent, ibi vivi obruerentur; vel eadem conditione sese, quem in locum vellent, processuros.” Philaeni, conditione probata, seque vitamque reipublicae condonavere: ita vivi obruti. Carthaginenses in eo loco Philaenis fratribus aras consecravere; aliquie illis domi honores instituti. Nunc ad rem redeo.

LXXX. JUGURTHA postquam, amissa Thala, nihil satis firmum contra Metellum putat, per magnas solitudines cum paucis profectus, pervenit ad Gaetulos, genus hominum ferum incultumque, et eo tempore ignarum nominis Romani. Eorum multitudinem in

¹ Nuda gignentium, “bare of vegetable productions.”

² Morari. Understand solet, iter being the accusative dependant on morari.

³ Ob rem corruptam, “for their mismanagement.”

⁴ Poeni. Compare note 4, page 192.

⁵ Graeci. The Cyreneans, who were a Greek colony. Compare note 5, page 191.

⁶ Optionem Carthaginem faciunt, “give the Carthaginians their choice.”

⁷ Vel illi. Understand ut, which in some editions is expressed.

unum cogit: ac paullatim consuefacit ¹ordines habere, signa sequi, imperium observare, item alia militaria facere. Praeterea regis Bocchi proximos magnis muneribus, et majoribus promissis ²ad studium sui perducit; quis adjutoribus regem adgressus, impellit, uti aduersum Romanos bellum suscipiat. ³Id ea gratia facilius proniusque fuit, quod Bocchus initio hujusce belli legatos Romam miserat, foedus et amicitiam petum; quam rem opportunissimum incepto bello pauci impediverant, caeci avaritia, quis omnia honesta atque inhonesta vendere mos erat. Etiam antea Jugurtha filia ⁴Bocchi nupserat. Verum ea ⁵necessitudo apud Numidas Maurosque levis dicitur: quod singuli, pro opibus quisque, quam plurimas uxores, denas alii, alii plures habent; sed reges ⁶eo amplius. Ita ⁷animus multitudine distrahitur; ⁸nulla pro socia obtinet: pariter omnes viles sunt.

¹ Ordines habere, “to keep their ranks.”

² Ad studium sui, “to favour his views.”

³ Id ea gratia, &c. “That was the more easy to be effected, and more agreeable to the inclinations of Bocchus, on this account, because,” &c. It is the same as if Sallust had said, “facilius factu propter Bocchi pronam ad bellum suscipiendum voluntatem.”

⁴ Bocchi. Many of the old editions read Bocco, making Bocchus to have been Jugurtha’s son-in-law. The Abbé Brotier, relying upon this reading and some of Sylla’s medals, proposes to substitute, in Plutarch’s life of Marius, where mention is made of the Moorish king, the term son-in-law (γαμβέρος) for father-in-law (πενθέρος). But M. Vauvilliers more judiciously contends, from six manuscripts of Sallust, and in conformity with Florus (3. 1.), for the term father-in-law. In this Larcher concurs. Cortius, the Bipont editor, and all the late editions, read Bocchi.

⁵ Necessitudo, “connexion.”

⁶ Eo amplius. Understand eas habent.

⁷ Animus multitudine, &c. “affection is weakened by the large number that have claims upon the heart.”

⁸ Nulla pro socia obtinet, “no one of them enjoys the rank of LXXXI. Igitur in locum ambobus placitum exercitus convenient: ibi, fide data et accepta, Jugurtha Bocchi animum oratione accedit: "Romanos injustos, profunda avaritia, communis omnium hostis esse: eamdem illos caussam belli cum Boccho habere, quam secum et cum aliis gentibus, lubidinem imperitandi: quis ¹omnia regna advorsa sint: ²tum sese, paullo ante Carthaginienses, item regem Persen, post, uti quisque opulentissimus videatur, ita Romanis hostem fore." His atque aliis talibus dictis, ad Cirtam oppidum iter constituant; quod ibi Metellus praedam captivosque et impedimenta locaverat. Ita Jugurtha ratus, aut, capta urbe, ³operae pretium fore; aut, si Romanus auxilio suis venisset, praelio sese certatuos. Nam callidus id modo festinabat, ⁴Bocchi pacem imminuere; ne moras agitando, aliud, quam bellum, mallet.

LXXXII. IMPERATOR postquam de regum societate cognovit, non temere, neque, uti saepe jam victo Jugurtha consueverat, omnibus locis pugnandi copiam facit: ceterum haud procul ab Cirta, castris munitis, reges operitur; melius ratus, ⁵cognitis Mauris, quoconsort." Equivalent to "Sociae locum et dignitatem nulla tenet." Some editions have "nullam pro socia obtinet," a reading altogether erroneous. Obtinet, in the text, is put for valet, or est.

¹ Omnia regna, &c. "all monarchies were objects of hostile regard."

² Tum sese, &c. "that, at present, he himself was; that a short time previous, the Carthaginians, and also king Perses, had been; that, for the time to come, as each one appeared very powerful, so he would be regarded as an enemy to the Romans." Perses was king of Macedonia, vanquished and led in triumph by Paulus Aemilius.

³ Operae pretium fore. Understand sibi; "that these would be to him a reward for his trouble."

⁴ Bocchi pacem imminuere, "to lessen Bocchus's chance of peace."

⁵ Cognitis Mauris, &c. "to make battle on advantageous terms, niam is novus hostis accesserat, ex commodo pugnam facere. Interim Roma per litteras certior fit, provinciam Numidiam Mario datam: nam consulem factum, jam antea acceperat. Quis rebus supra ¹bonum atque honestum percusus, neque lacrumas tenere, neque moderari linguam: ²vir egregius in aliis artibus, nimis molliter aegritudinem pati. Quam rem alii ³in superbiam vortebant: alii ⁴bonum ingenium contumelia accensum esse: ⁵multi, quod jam parta victoria ex manibus eriperetur: nobis satis cognitum, illum magis honore Marii, quam injuria sua excruciatum, neque tam anxie laturum fuisse, si ademta provincia alii quam Mario traderetur.

LXXXIII. Igitur eo dolore impeditus, et quia stultiae videbatur alienam rem periculo suo curare, legatos ad Bocchum mittit, postulatum, “ne sine caussa hostis populo Romano fieret: habere eum ⁶magnam copiam societatis amicitiaeque conjungendae, quae potior bello esset: quamquam opibus confideret, non debere incerta pro certis mutare: ⁷omne bellum sumi facile, ceterum aegerrume desinere: non in ejusdem potestate initium ejus et finem esse: incipere cuvis, etiam ignavo licere; deponi cum victores velint: proinde sibi regnoque consuleret, neu florentis res suas after having reconnoitred the Mauri;” i. e. after having ascertained what kind of foe the Mauri were.

¹ Bonum atque honestum, “what was right and becoming.”

² Vir egregius, &c. “though a man illustrious for other high qualities, he bore mental affliction with too little firmness.”

³ In superbiam vortebant, “attributed to pride.”

⁴ Bonum ingenium, “an honourable spirit.” Understand dicebant after alii.

⁵ Multi. Understand hanc esse doloris causam arbitrabantur, or something equivalent.

⁶ Magnam copiam, “a great opportunity.”

⁷ Omne bellum, &c. “that every war was easy to be undertaken, but ended with the greatest difficulty.”

cum Jugurtha¹ perditis misceret." Ad ea rex satis placide verba facit: "sese pacem cupere, sed Jugurtha² fortunarum misereri; ³ si eadem illi copia fieret, omnia conventura." Rursus imperator⁴ contra postulata Bocchi nuncios mittit: "ille probare, partim abnuere. Eo modo saepe ab utroque missis remissisque nunciis, tempus procedere, et, ex Metelli voluntate, bellum⁵ intactum trahi.

LXXXIV. AT Marius, ut supra diximus, ⁶cupientissuma plebe consul factus, postquam ei provinciam Numidiam populus⁷ jussit, antea jam infestus nobilitati, tum vero⁸ multus atque ferox instare: singulos modo, modo universos laedere: dictitare, "sese consulatum ex victis illis spolia cepisse;" alia praeterea⁹ magnifica pro se, et illis dolentia. Interim, quae bello opus erant,¹⁰ prima habere: postulare legionibus supplementum, auxilia a populis et regibus sociisque arcessere: prae-

¹ Perditis, "the ruined ones." Understand rebus.

² Si eadem illi copia fieret, "if the same opportunity were afforded him." If the same offer were made him.

³ Contra, "in answer to."

⁴ Ille. Referring to Bocchus. Understand partim with abnuere.

⁵ Intactum trahi, "was protracted without any thing of importance being done." Languished in inaction.

⁶ Cupientissuma plebe, "in full accordance with the wishes of the people." Literally, "by the very eagerly desiring commons."

⁷ Jussit. The accusative provinciam depends on jussit. The question has frequently been started by grammarians, whether the verb jubeo can govern an accusative. Crombie very successfully maintains the affirmative in his excellent work, Gymnasium, vol. i. p. 102. seqq. 3d ed.

⁸ Multus atque ferox, "was frequent and violent in his attacks upon that order."

⁹ Magnifica pro se, &c. "full of boasting as regarded himself, and galling at the same time to them."

¹⁰ Prima habere, "he considered of primary importance."

terea ex Latio fortissimum quemque, ¹ plerosque militiae, paucos fama cognitos accire, et ² ambiendo cogere homines emeritis stipendiis [secum proficisci]. Neque illi senatus, quamquam aduersus erat, de ullo negotio abnuere audebat; ceterum supplementum etiam laetus decreverat: ³ quia neque plebi militia volenti putabatur, et Marius aut belli usum, aut studia volgi amissurus. Sed ea res frustra sperata; tanta lubido cum Mario eundi plerosque invaserat. Sese quisque praeda locupletem, victorem domum redditurum, alia hujuscemodi ⁴ animis trahebant: et eos non paullum oratione sua Marius arreverat. Nam, postquam, omnibus quae postulaverat decretis, milites scribere volt, hortandi causa simul, et nobilitatem, uti consueverat, ⁵ exagitandi, concionem populi advocavit. Deinde hoc modo disseveruit.

LXXXV. “⁶ Scio ego, Quirites, plerosque non isdem artibus imperium a vobis petere, et, postquam adepti sunt, gerere: primo industrios, supplicis, modicos esse; dehinc per ignaviam et superbiam aetatem

¹ Plerosque militiae, &c. “most of them known to him in war; a few by report.” We have here an instance of double construction not unusual in Sallust. Militiae (scil. in tempore) is equivalent here to apud exercitum.

² Ambiendo, “by going around in a friendly manner.”

³ Quia neque plebi, &c. We have here a genuine imitation of the Greek idiom alluded to in note 3. page 274.: “Because military service was thought to be disagreeable to the common people, and Marius on the point of losing either the new levies, on which he had calculated for the successful prosecution of the war, or else the affections of the multitude.”

⁴ Animis trahebant, “they fancied in their minds.”

⁵ Exagitandi, “of inveighing against.”

⁶ Scio ego, Quirites, &c. “I am well aware, Romans, that most persons do not seek an office from you, and discharge its duties, after they have obtained it, in the same character.”

agere: sed mihi ¹contra ea videtur. ²Nam, quo universa res publica pluris est, quam consulatus aut praetura, eo majore cura ³illam administrari, quam haec peti debere. ⁴Neque me fallit, quantum cum maximo beneficio vestro negotii sustineam. Bellum parare simul, et aerario parcere: cogere ad militiam, quos nolis offendere; domi forisque omnia curare; et ea agere inter invidos, occursantis, factiosos, ⁵opinione, Quirites, asperius est. Ad hoc, alii si delinquere, vetus nobilitas, majorum facta fortia, cognatorum et adfinium opes, multae clientelae, omnia haec praesidio adsunt: mihi spes omnes in memet sitae, quas necesse est et virtute, et innocentia tutari: ⁶nam alia infirma sunt. Et illud intellego, Quirites, ⁷omnium ora in me conversa esse: aequos bonosque favere: ⁸quippe benefacta mea reipublicae procedunt; nobilitatem locum invadendi quaerere. Quo mihi acrius admittendum est, ⁹ut neque vos

¹ Contra ea, “the opposite to this.” — Videtur, “appears the true course.”

² Nam, quo, &c. Understand videtur. “For it appears to me, (i. e. I am persuaded), that, by how much more important the commonwealth is,” &c.

³ Illam. Omitted by Cortius.

⁴ Neque me fallit, &c. “Nor does it escape my observation, how heavy a task I am called upon to sustain, in consequence of the signal favour which you have shewn me;” i. e. how laborious, at the present juncture, are the duties of that station to which, in your kindness, you have elected me.

⁵ Opinione, Quirites, asperius est, “is more difficult, my countrymen, than is generally supposed.”

⁶ Nam alia infirma sunt, “for my other supports are weak.” After alia understand adminicula mea.

⁷ Omnium ora, &c. “that the eyes of all are turned upon me.”

⁸ Quippe benefacta mea, &c. “since the correct discharge of duty on my part, proves of service to my country.”

⁹ Ut neque vos, &c. “that you may not be insnared, and that they may be disappointed.” A thing est frustra when it is without advantage: a person est frustra when disappointed in his or her hopes.

capiamini, et illi frustra sint. ¹Ita ad hoc aetatis a pueritia fui, ut omnis labores, pericula consueta habeamus. Quae ²ante vestra beneficia gratuito faciebam, ea uti, accepta mercede, deseram, non est consilium, Quirites. Illis difficile est in potestatibus temperare, qui per ambitionem sese probos simulavere : mihi, qui omnem aetatem in optimis artibus egi, ³benefacere jam ex consuetudine in naturam vertit. Bellum me gerere cum Jugurtha jussistis ; quam rem nobilitas aegerrume tulit. Quaeso, reputate cum animis vestris, num id mutare melius sit, si quem ex illo globo nobilitatis ad hoc, aut aliud tale negotium mittatis, hominem ⁴veteris prosapiae ac multarum imaginum, et nullius stipendii : scilicet ut in tanta re, ignarus omnium, trepidet, festinet, sumat aliquem ex populo monitorem officii. Ita plerumque evenit, ut, quem vos imperare jussistis, is imperatorem alium quaerat. Ac ego scio, Quirites, qui postquam consules facti sunt, acta majorum, et Graecorum militaria praecepta legere coeprint ; ⁵homines praeponsteri. ⁶Nam gerere, quam fieri,

¹ Ita ad hoc aetatis, &c. “ I have so lived from boyhood to my present age, as to have become familiarized to all toils, all dangers.”

² Ante vestra beneficia, “ before I received any favours at your hands.”

³ Benefacere, “ to do what duty demands.” Or it may be rendered as a substantive, “ the correct discharge of duty.”

⁴ Veteris prosapiae, &c. “ of ancient lineage, and a long line of ancestors, but a total stranger, at the same time, to military service.” In explanation of the phrase multarum imaginum, compare note 4. page 158.

⁵ Homines praeponsteri, “ preposterous beings.” Praeposterus from prae and posterus; i. e. Qui prima in posteriori loco ponunt. The term homines is here used to denote strong contempt. Compare note 2. page 1.

⁶ Nam gerere, quam fieri, &c. After gerere understand consulatum, and after fieri, consulēm. The whole clause may be rendered as follows: “ For the discharge of the duties of the consulship, tempore posterius, re atque usu prius est. Comparete nunc, Quirites, cum illorum superbia me hominem novum. Quae illi audire et legere solent, eorum partim vidi, alia egomet gessi: quae illi litteris, ego militando didici. Nunc vos existumate, facta an dicta pluris sint. Contemnunt novitatem meam; ego illorum ignaviam: mihi fortuna, illis probra objectantur; quamquam ego naturam unam et communem omnium existumo, sed fortissimum quemque ¹generosissimum. Ac, si jam ex patribus Albini, aut Bestiae quaeri posset, mene, an illos ex se gigni maluerint, quid ²responsuros creditis, nisi, sese liberos quam optimos voluisse? Quod si though posterior, in point of time, to the being elected consul, is in reality prior to it, as regards the truth itself and the advantages resulting to the state." The idea intended to be conveyed is this: In strictness of language, no one can be said to hold a station, the consulship, for example, until he is appointed to it by the suffrages of the people. And yet, if we take into consideration the faithful discharge of official duties, and the advantages thence resulting to the state, we must admit that qualifications and experience are prior in the scale of importance to the mere formal appointment to office. In a word, they alone are true consuls, who are qualified to discharge correctly the duties of the consulship, when they present themselves before the people as candidates for that high station; and the administration of such men only will prove beneficial to the state.

¹ Generosissimum, "the noblest."

² Responsuros, &c. "what, believe you, would they answer, but that they wished the best to be their descendants?" Patribus, in the first part of the sentence, is equivalent to majores, "ancestors," not parentes. Compare the account given by Plutarch, (Vit. Mar. 9. ed. Hulten. vol. iii. p. 70.) 'Επινείμετο τῶν παρόντων, εἰ μὴ καὶ τοὺς ικείναν διονται προγόνους αὐτῷ μᾶλλον ἢν εὑσσοῖσι παραπληγίους ἐκχόνους ἀπολιπεῖν, ἀπεὶ δὲ μηδὲ αὐτοὺς δι' εὐγένειαν, ἀλλ' ἀπ' ἀρετῆς καὶ καλῶν ἔργων ἴνδιξεν γενομένους. "He would then ask the people, Whether they did not think that the ancestors of those men would have wished rather to leave a posterity like him, since they themselves had not risen to glory by their high birth, but by their virtue and their heroic achievements?"—Langhorne.

jure me despiciunt, faciant idem majoribus suis, quibus, uti mihi, ex virtute nobilitas coepit. Invident honori meo; ergo invideant et labori, innocentiae, periculis etiam meis, quoniam per haec illum cepi. Verum homines corrupti superbia ita aetatem agunt, quasi vestros honores contemnunt; ita hos petunt, quasi honeste vixerint. ¹Ne, illi falsi sunt, qui divorsissimas res pariter exspectant, ignaviae voluptatem, et praemia virtutis. Atque etiam cum apud vos, aut in senatu verba faciunt, pleraque oratione majores suos extollunt: eorum fortia facta memorando clariores sese putant; quod ²contra est. Nam quanto vita illorum praeclearior, tanto horum secordia flagitosior. Et profecto ita se res habet: majorum gloria ³postoris lumen est, neque bona neque mala in occulto patitur. Hujusce rei ego inopiam patior, Quirites; verum id, quod multo praeclarior est, meamet facta mihi dicere licet. Nunc videte, quam iniqui sint. Quod ex aliena virtute sibi adrogant, id mihi ex mea non concedunt: scilicet, quia imagines non habeo, et quia mihi nova nobilitas est; quam certe peperisse melius est, quam acceptam corrupisse. Evidem ego non ignoro, si jam responderem velint, abunde illis facundam et compositam orationem fore. ⁴Sed in maximo vestro beneficio, cum

¹ Ne, illi falsi sunt, “widely indeed do they err.” Ne, an archaism for nae, “truly,” “certainly,” &c. from the Greek ναί.

² Contra est. Cortius omits est. Contra is here equivalent to contrarium, and quod contra est may be rendered, “the reverse is the truth.” Literally, “which is contrary to the truth.”

³ Postoris lumen est, “diffuses a light around their posterity.” Lux, properly speaking, is the light itself; lumen, the body which imparts the light.

⁴ Sed in maximo vestro beneficio, &c. “But since, amid the ample favours which you have conferred upon me, they every-where attack me and you with revilings, I did not feel inclined to remain silent, lest any one might construe my forbearance into a consciousness of guilt.”

omnibus locis me vosque maledictis lacerent, non placuit reticere, ne quis modestiam in conscientiam duceret. Nam me quidem, ¹ex animi sententia, nulla oratio laedere potest : ²quippe vera necesse est bene praedicit ; falsam vita moresque mei superant. Sed, quoniam vestra consilia accusantur, qui mihi summum honorem, et maximum negotium imposuistis, etiam atque etiam reputate, num id poenitendum sit. Non possum fidei caussa imagines, neque triumphos, aut consulatus majorum meorum ostentare ; at, si res postulet, ³hastas, vexillum, phaleras, alia militaria dona ; praeterea, cicatrices ad vorso corpore. Hae sunt meae imagines, haec nobilitas, non haereditate ⁴relicta, ut illa illis, sed quae ego plurimis laboribus et periculis quaesivi. ⁵Non sunt composita verba mea ; parum id facio ; ipsa se virtus satis ostendit : ⁶illis artificio opus est, uti turpia facta oratione tegant. ⁷Neque litteras Graecas didici :

¹ Ex animi sententia, "as I am well persuaded."

² Quippe vera, &c. "since a true one must necessarily speak well of me: my life and character refute one that is false."

³ Hastas, vexillum, &c. These were among the rewards of bravery bestowed by the Roman commanders on such as had distinguished themselves. The hasta was a spear without any iron on it, and hence was called hasta pura. The vexillum was a streamer on the end of a lance or spear, of different colours, with or without embroidery. The phalerae were trappings or ornaments for horses, and also for men, worn commonly on the breast.

⁴ Relicta—illa—quae. These are plurals, referring to imagines et nobilitas. In translating, say "things, not left to me by inheritance," &c.

⁵ Non sunt composita, &c. "My language (they say) is devoid of elegance; for that I care little."

⁶ Illis artificio, &c. "they have need of studied expressions, that they may conceal their disgraceful deeds beneath a specious covering of words." Understand sermonis after artificio.

⁷ Neque litteras Graecas didici, &c. "Nor have I learned the language of Greece. I felt little inclination to learn it, since it has proved of no advantage to those who are its teachers, in making parum placebat eas discere, quippe quae ad virtutem doctoribus nihil profuerunt. At illa multo optima reipublicae doctus sum; hostem ferire, ¹praesidia agitare: nihil metuere, nisi turpem famam; hiemem et aestatem juxta pati; humi requiescere; eodem tempore inopiam et laborem tolerare. His ego praeceptis milites hortabor: ²neque illos arte colam, me opulenter; neque gloriam meam laborem illorum faciam. ³Hoc est utile, hoc civile imperium. Namque, cum them braver men." Alluding to the subjugation of Greece by the Romans. "Marius," observes Plutarch, "neither learned to read Greek, nor would ever make use of that language upon any serious occasion: thinking it ridiculous to bestow time on learning a language of which the teachers were slaves. And when, after his second triumph, at the dedication of a temple, he exhibited shows to the people in the Grecian manner, he barely entered the theatre and sat down, and then immediately departed." Plutarch justly ascribes to this neglect of the softening qualities of literary pursuits, the excesses which stained the character of Marius. "Οὐτεροῦ οὖν Ξενοκράτει τῷ φιλοσόφῳ σπιθαποτέρῳ δοκοῦντι τὸ ὑδος εἶναι, πολλάνις εἰώθει λέγειν ὁ Πλάτων. ⁴Ωμηλάριος Ξενόκρατες, Σύνταις Χάρισιν" οὗτος εἴ τις ἔπεισε Μάριον θεῖν ταῖς Ἑλληνικαῖς Μούσαις καὶ Χάρισιν, οὐκ ἀν εὐπεπτωτάταις σπεραπγίαις καὶ πολιτικίαις ἀμορφωτάτην ἐπίθυμον πορνίδα, ὥπλη θυμῷ καὶ φιλαρχίας ἀνώρο, καὶ πλεονεξίῶν ἀπαγνογόντων, οὐδέ δρόστατον καὶ ἀγρέ-τατον γῆρας ἤσκιλας. Plut. Vit. Mar. c. 2. ed. Hutton, vol. iii.

p. 62. "As Plato, therefore, used to say to Xenocrates the philosopher, who had a morose and unpolished manner, 'Good Xenocrates, sacrifice to the Graces;' so, if any one could have persuaded Marius to sacrifice to the Grecian muses and graces, he would never have brought his noble achievements both in war and peace to so shocking a conclusion; neither would he ever have been hurried by passion, unseasonable ambition, and insatiable avarice, to split upon the rocks of a savage and a cruel old age."—Langhorne.

¹ Praesidia agitare, "to guard." "Praesidium agitare," observes Cortius, "nihil aliud est quam praesidio esse vel frumentantibus, vel impedimentis, vel urbi oppugnatae."

² Neque illos arte colam, &c. "nor will I treat them with severity of discipline, myself with indulgence."

³ Hoc est utile, &c. "This is an exercise of authority productive

¹tute per molliitem agas, exercitum supplicio cogere, id est, dominum, non imperatorem esse. Haec atque talia majores vestri faciendo seque remque publicam celebrare: quis nobilitas freta, ipsa dissimilis moribus, nos illorum aemulos contemnit; et omnis honores non ex merito, sed quasi debitos a vobis repetit. Ceterum homines superbissimi procul errant. Majores eorum omnia quae licebat, illis reliquere, divitias, imagines, memoriam sui praeclaram: virtutem non reliquere; neque poterant: ea sola neque datur dono, neque accipitur. Sordidum me et in cultis moribus aiunt, ²quia parum scite convivium exorno, neque of benefit to the state; this, such as one citizen should put in practice towards another." In explanation of the peculiar meaning of civile in this passage, compare Livy (6. 40.), "Sermo est minime civilis;" and Crevier's note. "Sermo est qui minime deceat cives, memores se cum civibus agere, qui pari jure libertatis fruantur, in quos minime liceat imperioso genere sermonis uti."

¹ Tute. The pronoun. "When you yourself live in luxurious indulgence, to compel your army to the performance of their duty by severity of punishment, this is to be a tyrant, not a commander." With esse understand te, so that dominum and imperatorem may be accusatives after the verb.

² Quia parum scite, &c. "because I furnish out an entertainment with little elegance, and keep no buffoon nor cook of higher price than my steward: charges which I am perfectly willing to admit." The term histrio, which here denotes a buffoon kept for the amusement of the company, is a general appellation, among other Roman writers, for an actor. Livy makes the word of Etrurian origin: "Quia hister Tusco verbo ludio vocabatur, nomen histrionibus inditum."—Liv. 7. 2. "The native performers were called Histriones, from the Tuscan word Hister, signifying a player."—Baker. Festus is undoubtedly wrong in supposing that they were so called because they came originally from Histria: "Histriones dicti quod primum ex Histria venerint." In relation to the inroads of luxury among the Romans, compare Livy (39. 6.), "Luxuria enim peregrinae origo ab exercitu Asiatico (Manlii Vulsonis, A.U.C. 568.) invecta in urbem est. Ii primum lectos aeratos, vestem stragulan pretiosam, histrionem ullum, neque pluris pretii coquum, quam villicum, habeo; quae mihi lubet confiteri. Nam ex parente meo, et ex ¹sancitis viris ita accepi, ²munditias mulieribus, viris labore convenire, omnibusque bonis oportere plus gloriae, quam divitiarum: arma, non suppellectilem decori esse. Quin ergo, quod juvat, quod carum aestuant, id semper faciant; ³ament, potent; ubi adolescentiam habuere, ibi senectutem agant, in conviviis, dediti ventri et turpissimae parti corporis; sudorem, pulvrem et alia talia relinquant nobis, quibus illa epulis jucundiora sunt. Verum non est ita. Nam, ubi se omnibus flagitiis dedecoravere turpissimi plagulas et alia textilia, et quae tum magnificae supellectilis habebantur, monopodia et abacos, Romanum adverxerunt. Tum psaltriae sambucistriaeque, et convivalia ludionum oblectamenta addita epulis. Epulae quoque ipsae et cura et sumptu majore apparari coepitae. Tum coquus, vilissimum antiquis mancipium, et aestimatione et usu in pretio esse; et quod ministerium fuerat, ars haberit copta. Vix enim illa, quae tum conspiciebantur, semina erant futurae luxuriae. —For by this army returning from Asia was the origin of foreign luxury imported into the city. These men first brought to Rome gilded couches, rich tapestry, with hangings and other works of the loom; and, what were then deemed magnificent furniture, single-footed tables and buffets. At entertainments, likewise, were introduced players on the harp and timbrel, with buffoons for the diversion of the guests. Their meats also began to be prepared with greater care and cost; while the cook, whom the ancients considered as the meanest of their slaves both in estimation and use, became highly valuable. Nevertheless, these instances of extravagance, as they were then deemed, were no more than the seeds of that luxury which was afterwards to spring up." —Baker.

¹ Sanctis viris, "men of the purest characters." "Sanctus dicitur vir," observes Burnouf, "in omni virtutum genere perfectus et absolutus."

² Munditias, "effeminate indulgences."

³ Ament, potent, "let them indulge in licentious gratifications, in the pleasures of the table." Compare note 1. page 27. Conspiracy of Catiline.

viri, bonorum praemia erectum eunt. Ita injustissime luxuria et ignavia, pessumae artes, illis, qui coluere eas, nihil obficiunt; reipublicae innoxiae cladi sunt. Nunc, quoniam illis, quantum mores mei, non illorum flagitia poscebant, respondi, pauca de republica loquar. Primum omnium, de Numidia bonum habetote animum, Quirites. Nam, quae ad hoc tempus Jugurtham tutam sunt, omnia removistis, ¹avaritiam, imperitiam, superbiam. Deinde exercitus ibi est, locorum sciens; sed mehercule magis strenuus, quam felix. Nam magna pars avaritia, aut temeritate ducum adtrita est. Quam obrem vos, quibus ²militaris aetas, admittimini mecum, et capessite rempublicam: neque quemquam ex calamitate aliorum, aut imperatorum superbiam metus ceperit. Egomet in agmine, in praelio consultor idem, et socius periculi vobiscum adero; meque vosque in omnibus rebus ³juxta geram. Et profecto, dis juvantibus, omnia matura sunt, victoria, praeda, laus: quae si dubia aut procul essent, tamen omnis bonos reipublicae subvenire decebat. Etenim ignavia nemo immortalis factus: neque quisquam parens liberis, uti aeterni forent, optavit; magis, uti boni honestique vitam exigerent. Plura dicem, Quirites, si timidis virtutem verba adderent; nam strenuis abunde dictum puto."

LXXXVI. HUJUSCEMODI oratione habita, Marius postquam plebis animos arrectos videt, propere commeatu, stipendio, armis, aliis utilibus navis onerat: cum his A. Manlium legatum proficisci jubet. Ipse interea milites scribere, non more majorum, neque ³ex clas-

¹ Avaritiam, imperitiam, superbiam. By these three words three commanders are designated. Avaritia refers to Bestia, imperitia to Albinus, and superbia to Metellus.

² Militaris aetas. The age for military service was, as has already been stated, from 17 to 46 and upwards.

³ Ex classibus. By the institution of Servius Tullius, the Roman people were divided into six classes, according to the valuation of sibus, sed uti cujusque lubido erat, ¹ capite censos plerosque. Id factum alii inopia ² bonorum, alii per ambitionem consulis memorabant; quod ab eo genere celebratus ³ auctusque erat; et homini potentiam quaerenti egentissimus quisque opportunissimus, cui neque sua curae, quippe quae nulla sunt, et omnia ⁴ cum pretio honesta videntur. Igitur Marius cum majore aliquanto numero, quam decretum erat, in Africam prefectus, diebus paucis Uticam advehitur. Exercitus ei traditur a P. Rutilio legato; nam Metellus conspectum Marii fugerat, ne videret ea, quae audita animus tolerare nequiverat.

LXXXVII. SED consul, expletis legionibus cohortibusque auxiliariis, in agrum fertilem et praeda onustum proficiscitur: omnia ibi capta militibus donat: dein castella et oppida natura et viris parum munita adgradit: praelia multa, ⁵ ceterum alia levia aliis locis facere. Interim novi milites sine metu pugnae adesse:

their property. The richest were placed in the first class, from which there was a regular progression, as respected wealth and dignity, down to the lowest or sixth class. The members of this class formed the great bulk of poorer citizens, and were denominated capite censi, because having no fortune, but being "rated by the head." At first, none of the lowest class were enlisted as soldiers, except in dangerous emergencies. The alteration introduced by Marius may be regarded as one of the chief causes of the ruin of the republic.

¹ Capite censos plerosque, "principally from the poorest citizens." Compare preceding note.

² Bonorum, "of the better class." Boni is here equivalent to ditiores.

³ Auctus. Understand honore; "elevated to office."

⁴ Cum pretio, "if attended with profit to themselves."

⁵ Ceterum alia levia, &c. Cortius conjectures that Sallust wrote, "proelia multa, ceterum levia, alia aliis locis facere." This certainly would present a better meaning than the present text. The policy of Marius was to fight many, but slight, battles, that his new levies might become inured, at less risk, to the attacks of the enemy.

videre fugientis capi, occidi; fortissimum quemque tutissimum; armis libertatem, patriam parentesque et alia omnia tegi; gloriam atque divitias quaeri. Sic brevi spatio novi veteresque coaluere, et virtus omnium aequalis facta. At reges, ubi de adventu Marii cognoverunt, ¹divorsi in locos difficilis abeunt. Ita Jugurthae placuerat, speranti, mox effusos hostis invadi [posse]; Romanos, sicuti plerosque, remoto metu, laxius licentiusque futuros.

LXXXVIII. METELLUS interea Romam profectus, contra spem suam, ²laetissumis animis excipitur; plebi patribusque, postquam invidia decesserat, juxta carus. Sed Marius impigre prudenterque suorum et hostium res pariter adtendere: cognoscere quid boni utrisque, aut contra esset: explorare itinera regum, consilia et insidias antevenire: nihil apud se remissum, neque

¹ Divorsi, “ separating.”

² Laetissumis animis excipitur, “ is received with the most joyful feelings.” Metellus was afterwards honoured with a triumph, and the surname of Numidicus. His subsequent history may be briefly told. Saturninus, a tribune of the commons, had proposed an Agrarian law, in which there was a clause expressly providing “ that the senate should come and swear, in full assembly, to confirm whatever the people should decree, and not oppose them in any thing.” Metellus, notwithstanding the solicitations of his friends, and the severe penalties annexed to a non-compliance, refused to take the oath. Saturninus then caused a decree to be made that the consuls should declare Metellus a person interdicted the use of fire and water; or, in other words, pass sentence of exile against him. All this was brought about by the instigation of Marius, who was then in his sixth consulship. Metellus retired to Rhodes, where he was received with the highest distinction. Not long after he was recalled by public edict, a measure which Marius endeavoured, but without success, to oppose. Plutarch, in his life of Marius, speaks of a life of Metellus which he had written, (if indeed the expression τοῖς περὶ ἐπινέου γραφομένοις is to be so rendered here, and does not refer to a biography by some other writer). This life has not come down to us.—Plut. Vit. Mar. c. 29. ed. Hutton. vol. iii. p. 105.

apud illos tutum pati: Itaque et Gaetulos, et Jugurtham, ex sociis nostris praedam agentes, saepe adgressus itinere fuderat, ipsumque regem haud procul ab oppido Cirta ¹armis exuerat. Quae postquam gloria modo, neque ²belli patrandi cognovit, statuit urbis, quae viris aut loco ³pro hostibus, et advorsum se opportunissimae erant, singulas circumvenire: ita Jugurtham aut praesidiis nudatum, si ea pateretur, aut praelio certaturum. Nam Bocchus nuncios ad eum saepe miserat, " velle populi Romani amicitiam, ne quid ab se hostile timeret." Id simulaveritne, quo improvisus ⁴gravior accideret, an mobilitate ingenii pacem atque bellum mutare solitus, parum exploratum.

LXXXIX. SED consul, uti statuerat, oppida castellaque munita adire: partim vi, alia metu, aut praemia ostentando avortere ab hostibus. Ac primo mediocria gerebat, existumans, Jugurtham ob suos tutandos in manus venturum. Sed, ubi procul abesse, et aliis negotiis intentum accepit, ⁵majora et aspera adgredi tempus visum. Erat inter ingentis solitudines oppidum magnum atque valens, nomine Capsa, cuius conditor ⁶Hercules Libys memorabatur. Ejus cives apud Ju-

¹ Armis exuerat, " had stripped of his arms;" i. e. had compelled to fly with the loss of his arms.

² Belli patrandi, " calculated to bring the war to a close." Compare note 6. page 17. Conspiracy of Catiline.

³ Pro hostibus, &c. " favourable to the enemy, and most disadvantageous to himself."

⁴ Gravior. Cortius reads gravius. For the meaning of accideret, compare note 2. page 326.

⁵ Majora et aspera. The common editions insert magis before aspera. Cortius, however, clearly proves, by examples adduced, that the word majora involves also the comparative of the adjective which follows, and which stands, therefore, in the positive form.

⁶ Hercules Libys. Cicero (N. D. 3. 16.) makes mention of six different individuals who bore the name of Hercules. He is silent, however, respecting a Libyan Hercules, unless the one whom he gurtham ¹immunes, levi imperio, et ob ea fidelissimi habebantur: muniti aduersum hostis non moenibus modo, et armis atque viris, multo magis locorum asperitate. Nam, praeter oppido propinqua, alia omnia vasta, inculta, egentia aquae, infesta serpentibus: quarum vis, sicuti omnium ferarum, inopia cibi acrior: ad hoc natura serpentium, ipsa perniciosa, siti magis, quam alia re, accenditur. Ejus potiundi Marium maxima cupido invaserat, cum propter usum belli, tum quia res aspera videbatur; et Metellus oppidum Thalam magna gloria ceperat, haud dissimiliter situm munitumque; nisi quod apud Thalam haud longe a moenibus aliquot fontes erant, Capsenses una modo, atque ea intra oppidum, ²jugi aqua, ³cetera pluvia utebantur. Id ibique, mentions second in order, as born of the Nile, and surnamed Aegyp-tius, be the same. In truth, however, the history of Hercules is a mere fable. Hercules is the sun, and his twelve labours have a direct reference to the twelve signs of the Zodiac. (Compare Dupuis, Origine de tous les Cultes, vol. i. p. 1—10. and vol. ii. p. 150. seqq. ed. 1822; and also Constant, De la Religion, vol. ii. p. 414.) Creuzer has discovered some very striking points of resemblance between Hercules, Diemschid, and Mithras. Compare Creuzer's Symbolik, trad. par Guigniaut, p. 203. with the note of the translator, and vol. ii. p. 252—255, 274—277. of the German work.

¹ Immunes, “free from all taxes.”—Levi imperio, “under a mild government.”

² Jugi aqua, “unfailing spring of water.”

³ Cetera. Understand aqua: “what they used besides was rain-water.”—Quae procul a mari, &c. Cortius reads qui and agebant, comparing the use of the masculine form qui, after Africa, to the construction pars qui, &c. so common in Sallust. Our reading is that of the Bipont edition, and appears decidedly preferable. As Africa, in this passage, denotes the inhabitants of the country, there is little, if any, harshness in reading quae . . . agebat, scil. se; more especially in such a writer as Sallust. The use of agebat, however, may be defended on much better grounds; for we have a similar usage of the verb agitat in Sallust himself. The passage occurs in the third book of the Fragments, towards the conclusion of Pompey’s et in omni Africa, quae procul a mari incultius agebat, eo facilius tolerabatur, quia Numidae plerumque lacte et ferina carne vescebantur, neque ¹salem, neque alia irritamenta gulæ quaerebant; cibus illis advorsum famem atque sitim, non lubidini, neque luxuriae erat.

XC. Igitur consul, omnibus exploratis, credo, dis fretus; nam contra tantas difficultates consilio satis providere non poterat; quippe etiam frumenti inopia tentabatur, quod Numidae pabulo pecoris, magis, quam ²arvo student, et quocumque natum fuerat, jussu regis in loca munita contulerant, ager autem aridus et frugum vacuos ea tempestate, nam aestatis extremum erat; tamen ³pro rei copia satis providenter exornat: pecus omne, quod superioribus diebus praedae fuerat, equitibus auxiliariis agendum adtribuit: A. Manlium legatum cum cohortibus expeditis ad oppidum ⁴Laris, ubi stipendium et commeatum locaverat, ire jubet; ⁵se praedabundum post paucos dies eodem venturum. Sic incepto suo occulto, pergit ad flumen Tanam.

XCI. CETERUM IN ITINERE QUOTIDIE PECUS EXERCITUI

letter to the senate, and is as follows: “ Gallia Superiore anno Metelli exercitum stipendio frumentoque aluit: et nunc malis fructibus ipsa vix agitat.”

¹ Salem. Sal is found in the singular also as a neuter. The plural sales is masculine, and signifies witticisms, &c. Compare the remarks of Crombie on the meaning of this term. Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 39. seqq. 3d ed.

² Arvo, “ agriculture.”

³ Pro rei copia, “ considering all circumstances.”

⁴ Laris. It has been disputed whether this be the genitive singular or accusative plural. Cortius is in favour of the latter, and it would seem correctly. The Itinerary of Antoninus has Laribus, and a Laribus occurs in St Augustine.

⁵ Se praedabundum, &c. The same in effect as “ se nunc, priusquam sequatur, praedaturum; tum vero, praeda facta, eodem venturum.” Understand dicit.

per centurias, item turmas, aequaliter distribuerat, et ex coriis utres ut fierent curabat: simul et inopiam frumenti lenire, et, ignaris omnibus, parare, quae mox usui forent. Denique sexto die, cum ad flumen ventum est, maxuma vis utrium effecta. Ibi castris levi munimento positis, milites cibum capere, atque, uti simul cum occasu solis ¹egredierentur, paratos esse jubet; omnibus sarcinis abjectis, aqua modo seque et jumenta onerare. Dein, postquam tempus visum, castris egreditur, noctemque totam itinere facto, consedit: idem proxuma facit: dein tertia, multo ante lucis adventum, pervenit in locum tumulosum, ab Capsa non amplius duum millium intervallo; ibique, quam occultissime potest, cum omnibus copiis opperitur. Sed, ubi dies coepit, et Numidae, nihil hostile metuentes, multi oppido egressi; repente omnem equitatum, et cum his velocissimos pedites cursu tendere ad Capsam, et portas obsidere jubet: deinde ipse intentus propere sequi, neque milites praedari sinere. Quae postquam oppidani cognovere; ²res trepidae, metus ingens, malum improvisum, ad hoc pars civium extra moenia in hostium potestate, coëgere, uti deditioinem facerent. Ceterum oppidum incensum: Numidae puberes interfici; alii omnes venum dati: praeda militibus divisa. Id facinus contra jus belli, non avaritia, neque scelere consulis admissum; sed quia locus Jugurthae opportunus, nobis aditu difficilis, genus hominum mobile, infidus, neque beneficio, neque metu ³coërcitum.

XCII. POSTQUAM tantam rem Marius, sine ullo suorum incommodo patravit; magnus et clarus antea, major et clarior haberi coepit. ⁴Omnia non bene consulta

¹ Egredierentur. Understand castris.

² Res trepidae, "the confusion into which they were thrown."

³ Coërcitum, "capable of being kept in subjection."

⁴ Omnia non bene, &c. Cortius omits from modo to data, both inclusive. We have preferred the Bipont text.

modo, verum etiam casu data, in virtutem trahebantur : milites, modesto imperio habiti simul, et locupletes, ad coelum ferre : Numidae magis, quam mortalem timere : postremo omnes socii atque hostes credere illi aut mentem divinam, aut deorum nutu cuncta portendi. Sed consul, ubi ea res bene evenit, ad alia oppida pergit : pauca, repugnantibus Numidis, capit ; plura deserta, propter Capsensium miserias, igni corrumpit : luctu atque caede omnia complentur. Denique, multis locis potitus, ac plerisque exercitu incruento, ad aliam rem adgreditur, non eadem asperitate, qua Capsensium, certerum haud secus difficilem. Namque haud longe a flumine Mulucha, quod Jugurthae Bocchique regnum disjungebat, erat, ¹inter ceteram planitiem mons saxeus, mediocri castello satis patens, in immensum editus, uno perangusto aditu relicto : nam ²omnis natura, velut opere atque consulto, preecepit. Quem locum Marius, quod ibi regis thesauri erant, summa vi capere intendit. Sed ea res forte, quam consilio, melius gesta. Nam castello virorum atque armorum satis, magna vis frumenti et fons aquae ; aggeribus turribusque et aliis machinationibus locus ³importunus : iter castellanorum angustum admodum, utrimque praecisum. Vineae cum ingenti periculo frustra agitantur : nam, cum eae paullum processerant, igni, aut lapidibus corrumpebantur ; milites neque pro opere consistere, propter iniquitatem loci, neque inter vineas sine periculo ⁴administrare :

¹ Inter ceteram planitiem, “in the middle of a plain.” There was only a single mountain ; the rest was a plain.

² Omnis. Some editions have omnia, with quod ad or secundum, according to the common grammars, understood. By this reading natura will still be in the ablative.

³ Importunus, “unfit for.” Compare Silius Italicus (3. 540.), “Importuna locorum ;” i. e. non apta itineri, “unfit for travelling.”

⁴ Administrare, “to labour.”

optimus quisque cadere, aut sauciari; ceteris metus augeri.

XCIII. AT Marius, multis diebus et laboribus consumtis, anxius trahere cum animo, omittiretne inceptum quoniam frustra erat, an fortunam opperiretur, qua saepe prospere usus. Quae cum multos dies, noctes ¹aestuans agitaret, forte quidam Ligus, ex cohortibus auxiliariis miles gregarius, castris aquatum egressus, haud procul ab latere castelli, quod ²avorsum praeliantibus erat, animum advortit inter saxa repentis cochleas: quarum cum unam atque alteram, dein plures peteret, studio legundi paullatim prope ad summum montis egressus est. Ubi, postquam ³solitudinem intel-lexit, ⁴more humani ingenii, cupidus ignara visundi invadit. Et forte in eo loco grandis ilex coaluerat inter saxa, ⁵paullulum modo prona, dein flexa atque aucta in altitudinem, quo cuncta gignentium natura fert: cuius ramis modo, modo eminentibus saxis nitus Ligus, ⁶cas-telli planitem perscribit: quod cuncti Numidae intenti praeliantibus aderant. Exploratis omnibus, quae mox usui fore ducebat, ⁷eadem regreditur, non temere, uti escenderat, sed tentans omnia et circumspectiens. Itaque Marium propere adit, acta edocet, hortatur, ab ea parte, qua ipse escenderat, castellum tentet: pollicetur sese

¹ Aestuans, “in the greatest perplexity.”

² Avorsum praeliantibus, “on the opposite side to that where the two parties were contending.”

³ Solitudinem intellexit, “he perceived that he was completely alone.” He saw no traces of any human being.

⁴ More humani ingenii. Some editions read “more humanae cupidinis ignara visundi animum vertit,” of which Cortius remarks, that it is “contra omnes omnino MSS. et veteres editiones.”

⁵ Paullulum modo prona, “bending a little downwards at first.”

⁶ Castelli planitem perscribit, “he reconnoitres the platform of the fortress.”

⁷ Eadem. Understand via. In some editions eodem, (scil. modo).

itineris periculique ducem. Marius cum Ligure, promissa cognitum, ex praesentibus misit: quorum uti cujusque ingenium erat, ita rem difficilem aut facilem nunciavere. Consulis animus tamen ¹paullum arrectus. Itaque ex copia tubicinum et cornicinum, numero quinque quam velocissimos delegit, et cum his, praesidio qui forent, quatuor centuriones: omnis Liguri parere jubet, et ei negotio proximum diem constituit.

XCIV. SED, ubi ex praecepto tempus visum, paratis compositisque omnibus, ad locum pergit. Ceterum illi qui centuris praerant, praedicti ab ²duce, arma ornatumque mutaverant, capite atque pedibus nudis, uti ³prospectus nisusque per saxa facilius foret: super terga gladii et scuta: verum ea Numidica ex coriis, ⁴ponderis gratia simul, et offensa quo levius streperent. Igitur praegrediens Ligus saxa, et si quae vetustate radices eminebant, laqueis vinciebat, quibus adlevati facilius escenderent: interdum timidos insolentia itineris levare manu: ubi paullo asperior adscensus, singulos prae se inermos mittere; deinde ipse cum illorum armis sequi; quae ⁵dubia nisu videbantur, ⁶potissimum tentare, ac

¹ Paullum arrectus, “somewhat aroused.” The distinction between parum and paullum should be noted by the student. Parum, “little,” is opposed to “much;” paullum, “a little,” is opposed to “not none,” or “some.” Thus parum pecuniae, “little money;” but paullum pecuniae, “a little money.” It is to be observed, however, that paullum is often used in the sense of parum, but the latter is never employed for the former. Crombie’s Gymnasium, vol. ii. p. 434. 3d ed.

² Duce, “their guide,” the Ligurian.

³ Prospectus, “the view in front,” or “before them.”

⁴ Ponderis gratia, “on account of their lightness.” Understand levioris.

⁵ Dubia nisu, “dangerous to be attempted.” Nisu is the old name.

⁶ Potissimum tentare, “he tried first of all.” In some editions potissimum, which is the more usual form.

saepius eadem adscendens descendensque, dein statim ¹digrédiens, ceteris audaciam addere. Igitur, diu mul-tumque fatigati, tandem in castellum pervenient, desertum ab ea parte; quod omnes, sicuti aliis diebus, advor-sum hostis aderant. Marius, ubi ex nunciis, quae Ligus egerat cognovit, quamquam toto die intentos praelio Numidas habuerat, tum vero cohortatus milites, et ipse extra vineas egressus,² testudine acta succedere, et simul hostem tormentis sagittariisque et funditoribus eminus terrere. At Numidae, saepe antea vineis Romanorum subvorsis, item incensis, non castelli moenibus sese tutabantur, sed pro muro dies noctesque agitare; maledicere Romanis, ac Mario recordiam objectare; militibus nostris Jugurthae servitium minari; secundis rebus feroce esse. Interim omnibus Romanis hostibusque praelio intentis, magna utrimque vi, pro gloria atque imperio his, illis pro salute certantibus, repente a tergo signa canere: ac primo mulieres et pueri, qui visum processerant, fugere; deinde, uti quisque muro proximus erat; postremo cuncti, armati inermesque. Quod ubi accidit, eo acrius Romani instare, fundere, ac plerosque tantummodo sauciare, dein super occisorum corpora vadere, avidi gloriae certantes mu-rum petere; neque quemquam omnium praeda morari.
Sic forte correcta Marii temeritas, gloriam ex culpa invenit.

XCV. CETERUM, dum ea res geritur, L. Sulla quaes-

¹ Digrediens, “stepping aside.”

² Testudine acta succedere, “having formed the testudo, advanced to the walls.” The soldiers formed the testudo by joining their shields over their heads and on their sides, so as to resemble the shell of a tortoise, (testudo). This was done as a defence against the missiles of the enemy. Josephus (De Bell. Jud. 3. 7. 28. ed. Haver-camp. vol. ii. p. 240.) makes mention of his having caused boiling oil to be poured upon a testudo of Roman soldiers, when attacking the walls of Jotapata. The expedient proved a most successful one.

tor cum magno equitatu in castra venit; ¹quos uti ex Latio et a sociis cogeret, Romae relictus erat. Sed, quoniam tanti viri res admonuit, idoneum visum est, de natura cultuque ejus paucis dicere: neque enim alio loco de Sullae rebus dicturi sumus; et L. ²Sisenna, optume et diligentissime omnium qui eas res dixerunt persecutus, parum mihi libero ore locutus videtur. Igitur Sulla gentis patriciae, familia prope jam extincta

¹ Quos. Referring, by synesis, to equitatus. Some editions have quod.

² Sisenna. "L. Cornelius Sisenna was an historian of the Cornelian family, and descended from that Sisenna who was praetor A.U.C. 570. In his youth he practised as an orator, and is characterized by Cicero as a man of learning and wit, but of no great industry or knowledge in business. In more advanced life he was Praetor of Achaea, and a friend of Atticus. Vossius says his history commenced after the taking of Rome by the Gauls, and ended with the wars of Marius and Sylla. Now, it is possible that he may have given some sketch of Roman affairs from the burning of the city by the Gauls; but it is evident he had touched slightly on these early portions of the history, for though his work consisted of twenty, or, according to others, of twenty-two books, it appears from a fragment of the second, which is still preserved, that he had there advanced in his narrative as far as the Social War, which broke out in the year 663. The greater part, therefore, was probably devoted to the history of the civil wars of Marius: and indeed Velleius Paterculus calls his work Opus Belli Civilis Sullani. The great defect of his history consisted, it is said, in its not being written with sufficient political freedom, at least concerning the character and conduct of Sylla, which is regretted by Sallust, in a passage bearing ample testimony to the merits of Sisenna in other particulars. Cicero, while he admits his superiority over his predecessors, adds, that he was far from perfection, and complains that there was something puerile in his Annals, as if he had studied none of the Greek historians but Clitarchus. (Cic. de Leg. 1. 2.) The fragments which remain of his history are more numerous than those of any old Latin annalist, being about 150; but they are also shorter and more unconnected. Indeed, there are scarcely two sentences anywhere joined together."

Dunlop's Roman Literature, vol. ii. p. 133.

majorum ignavia, litteris Graecis atque Latinis juxta atque doctissime eruditus, animo ingenti, cupidus voluptatum, sed gloriae cupidior : ¹otio luxurioso ; tamen ab negotiis numquam voluptas remorata, ²nisi quod de uxore potuit honestius consuli : facundus, callidus, et ³amicitia facilis ; ⁴ad simulanda negotia altitudo ingenii incredibilis : multarum rerum, ac maxume pecuniae largitor. Atque felicissimo omnium ⁵ante civilem vic-

¹ Otio luxurioso, “ of debauched habits, when unoccupied with business.” He kept company, according to Plutarch, with mimics, jesters, &c. and went with them to every excess of licentiousness and riot ; and, though at other times a man of business, he would change instantaneously whenever he had company, and begin a carousal.

² Nisi quod, &c. “ except that he might have had more regard for his own character in matrimonial affairs.” Sylla, according to Plutarch, was five times married ; but, during all these unions, still indulged in libidinous attachments. On dedicating the tenth of his substance to Hercules, he gave a magnificent entertainment to the people. In the midst of this feasting, which lasted many days, his fourth wife, Metella, sickened and died. As the priests forbade him to approach her, and to have his house defiled with mourning, (an artifice, probably, of his own), he sent her a bill of divorce, and ordered her to be carried to another house while the breath was still in her body. A few months afterwards he espoused Valeria, the sister of Hortensius the orator, who had managed to attract his attention in the theatre, by her personal beauty and artful behaviour. Yet, according to Plutarch, though she was a female of great accomplishments and respectability, he still continued his intercourse with actresses and female musicians, and sat drinking whole days with a company of buffoons. A loathsome disease soon after put a period to his existence.

³ Amicitia facilis. Equivalent to facile sibi amicos parans.

⁴ Ad simulanda negotia, &c. “ the depth of his mind was incredible for concealing from others his secret plans.”

⁵ Ante civilem victoriam, “ previous to his success in the civil wars.” The remarkable success which accompanied so many of the operations of Sylla, and on account of which he assumed the title of Felix, is alluded to in a very interesting manner by Plutarch, in his life of that commander. “ It not only gave him pleasure,” observes toriam numquam super industriam fortuna fuit ; multi-que dubitavere, fortior, an felicior esset : nam, postea quae fecerit, incertum habeo, pudeat magis, an pigeat disserere.

XCVI. Igitur Sulla, ut supra dictum, postquam in Africam atque in castra Marii cum equitatu venit, rudis antea et ignarus belli,¹ sollertissimus omnium in paucis tempestatibus factus est. Ad hoc, milites be-nigne adpellare ; multis rogantibus, aliis per se ipse dare beneficia, invitus accipere : sed ea propterantius, quam aes mutuum reddere ; ipse ab nullo repetere ; magis id laborare, ut illi quam plurimi deberent : joca atque seria cum humillimis agere : in operibus, in ag-mine atque ad vigilias multus adesse : neque interim, quod prava ambitio solet, consulis, aut cujusquam boni famam laedere : tantummodo neque consilio, ne-que ²manu priorem alium pati ; plerosque antevenire. Quis rebus, brevi, Mario militibusque carissimus fac-tus.

XCVII. At Jugurtha, postquam oppidum Capsam aliasque locos munitos et sibi utilis simul, et magnam pecuniam amiserat, ad Bocchum nuncios mittit, “ quam primum in Numidiam copias adduceret : praelii faciundi tempus adesse.” Quem ubi cunctari accepit, his biographer, “ to hear his success imputed to Fortune, but he encouraged the opinion, thinking it added an air of grandeur, and even of divinity, to his actions. Whether he did this out of vanity, or from a real persuasion of its truth, we cannot affirm. He writes, however, in his Commentaries, ‘ that his enterprises executed on a sudden, and in a manner different from what he had intended, always succeeded the best.’ It is plain, likewise, from his saying that he was born rather for fortune than for war, that he attributed more to luck than to valour.”

¹ Sollertissimus omnium, “ the most accomplished soldier of all.”

² Manu, “ in action.”

¹dubium belli atque pacis rationes trahere ; rursus, uti ante, proxumos donis corruptit, ipsique Mauro pollicetur Numidiae partem tertiam, si aut Romani Africa expuli, aut, integris suis finibus, bellum compostum foret. Eo praemio illectus Bocchus, cum magna multitudine Jugurtham accedit. Ita amborum exercitu conjuncto, Marium jam in hiberna proficiscentem, ²vix decima parte die reliqua, invadunt : rati noctem, quae jam aderat, victis sibi munimento fore, et, si vivissent, ³nullo impedimento, quia locorum scientes erant ; contra Romanis utrumque casum in tenebris difficiliorem. Igitur simul consul ex multis de hostium adventu cognovit, et ipsi hostes aderant ; et, priusquam exercitus aut instrui, aut ⁴sarcinas colligere, denique antequam signum, aut imperium ullum accipere ⁵quivit, equites Mauri atque Gaetuli, non acie, neque ullo more praelii, sed catervatim, uti quosque fors congregaverat,

¹ Dubium belli atque pacis, &c. “ that he, undecided what course to pursue, was weighing the arguments for war and for peace.”

² Vix decima, &c. Die is here the old genitive. Aulus Gellius (9. 14.) makes mention of this very passage of Sallust, and considers die a genitive, not an ablative. It would appear from his remarks that some of his contemporaries made die equivalent to ex die.

³ Nullo. The old dative. The old writers, whom Sallust here imitates, sometimes declined such adjectives as nullus, solus, alter, &c. regularly. Compare Ruddiman, Instil. L. G. vol. i. p. 53. ed. Stalbaum.

⁴ Sarcinas colligere. All the baggage was collected into one place before an engagement.

⁵ Quivit. “ There is a delicate difference,” observes Dumesnil, “ between posse and quire; which is this: Possum expresses the power resulting from strength and consequence, offices, authority, &c.: Quo expresses mere possibility, under existing circumstances. Thus, we cannot say quire plurimum, nor quoad quo, but possum plurimum and quoad possum. So again, ‘ Non queo reliqua scribere, tanta vis lacrymarum est.’ — Cic. Here possum would have been too strong.”

in nostros concurrunt; qui omnes trepidi improviso metu, ac tamen virtutis memores, aut arma capiebant, aut capientis alios ab hostibus defensabant: pars equos escendere, obviam ire hostibus: pugna latrocinio magis, quam praelio similis fieri: sine signis, sine ordinibus ¹equites pedites permixti, caedere alios, alios obtruncare, multos contra aduersos acerrume pugnantis, ab tergo circumvenire: neque virtus, neque arma satis tegere, quod hostes numero plures et undique circumfusi: denique Romani veteres, novique, ²et ob ea scientes belli, si quos locus, aut casus conjunxerat, orbes facere; atque ita ab omnibus partibus simul tecti et instructi hostium vim sustentabant.

XCVIII. NEQUE in eo tam aspero negotio territus Marius, aut magis, quam antea demisso animo fuit: sed cum turma sua, quam ex fortissimis magis, quam familiarissimis, paraverat, vagari passim: ac modo laborantibus suis succurrere, modo hostis, ubi confertissimi obstiterant, invadere: ³manu consulere militibus, quoniam imperare, conturbatis omnibus, non poterat. Jamque dies consumptus erat, cum tamen barbari nihil remittere, atque, uti reges praeceperant, ⁴noctem pro se rati, acrius instare. Tum Marius ⁵ex copia rerum consilium trahit, atque, uti suis receptui locus esset, ¹ Equites pedites. Alluding both to the Romans and the Numidians.

² Et ob ea, &c. "and on this account (i. e. because the veterans were joined with the new soldiers) more familiar with warfare." We have retained the reading and given the explanation of Cortius. Although the best that can be offered, it is far from satisfactory.

³ Manu consulere militibus, "aided his soldiers by taking a personal share in the fight."

⁴ Noctem pro se rati, "having imagined that the night would be in their favour."

⁵ Ex copia rerum, &c. "he forms a plan adapted to the nature of the case."

collis duos propinquos inter se occupat: quorum in uno, castris parum ampio, fons aquae magnus erat; alter usui opportunus, quia, magna parte editus et praeceps, ¹pauco munimento egebat. Ceterum apud aquam Sullam cum equitibus noctem agitare jubet. Ipse paullatim dispersos milites, neque minus hostibus conturbatis, in unum contrahit: dein cunctos pleno gradu in collem subducit. Ita reges, loci difficultate coacti, praelio deterrentur; neque tamen suos longius abire sinunt, sed, utroque colle multitudine circumdato, effusi consedere. Dein crebris ignibus factis, plerumque noctis barbari suo more laetari, exsultare, strepere vocibus: ²ipsi duces feroce, quia non fugerant, pro victoribus agere. Sed ea cuncta Romanis ex tenebris et editioribus locis facilia visu, ³magnoque hor-tamento erant.

XCIX. PLURIMUM vero Marius imperitia hostium confirmatus, quam maximum silentium haberi jubet: ne signa quidem, uti per vigilias solebant, canere: deinde, ubi lux adventabat, defessis jam hostibus, et paullo ante somno captis, de improviso ⁴vigiles, item cohortium, turmarum, legionum tubicines simul omnis signa canere, milites clamorem tollere, atque portis erumpere. Mauri atque Gaetuli ignoto et horribili sonitu repente exciti, neque fugere, neque arma capere,

¹ Pauco munimento, &c. The singular of paucus is of rare occurrence. We meet with it in Horace (A. P. 203.): “foramine pauco,” and in Aul. Gellius (20. I.), “injurias pauco aere diluere.” Cortius reads “pauca munimento quaerabat.”

² Ipsi duces. Jugurtha and Bocchus.—Quia non fugerant. In some editions quod non fugere . . . ac pro, &c. Cortius reads fugeren.

³ Magnoque hor-tamento erant. The Bipont text omits the connective.

⁴ Vigiles. The common text has vectigales, for which Cortius very judiciously conjectures vigiles. The common reading is found in all the MSS.

neque omnino facere aut providere quidquam poterant: ita cunctos strepitum, clamorem, nullo subveniente, nostris instantibus, tumultu, terrore, ¹formido, quasi vecordia, ceperat. Denique omnes fusi fugatiique: arma et signa militaria pleraque capta: pluresque eo praelio, quam omnibus superioribus interemti: nam somno et metu insolito impedita fuga.

C. DEIN Marius, uti coeparat, ²in hiberna; quae, propter commeatum, in oppidis maritumis agere decreverat: neque tamen secors victoria, aut insolens factus; sed pariter ac in conspectu hostium, ³quadrato agmine incedere. Sulla cum equitatu apud dextumos, in sinistra A. Manlius, cum funditoribus et sagittariis, ⁴praeterea cohortes Ligurum curabat: primos et extremos cum expeditis manipulis tribunos locaverat. Perfugae, ⁵minume cari et regionum scientissimi, hos-

¹ Formido. Some editions have formidine.

² In hiberna. Understand proficiscitur. A similar ellipsis occurs in Livy (41. 3.), “ Tum demum nuncius ad tertiam legionem revocandam et Gallorum praesidium.” Understand missus est: and so also Florus (3. 10.), “ Reversus igitur in Galliam classe maiore auctisque admodum copiis in eundem rursus oceanum.” Understand it.

³ Quadrato agmine. The agnen quadratum of the Romans was a right-angled parallelogram, not a square. Compare the words of Salmasius (de Re Mil. Rom. c. 10. p. 103. edit. Lugd. 1657.), “ Quadratum agmen non dicitur, cuius latitudo aequalis sit in omnes adspexit longitudine; sed quod frontem habet recta linea exaequatam et ad extremitates angulos rectos.” So also Guischard (Memoires Crit. et Histor. sur les Antiquités Militaires, vol. i. p. 195.), “ La figure ressemblait à une parallélogramme quelconque à angles droits.”

⁴ Praeterea cohortes, &c. This and the preceding clause are to be understood as follows: “ Sulla cum equitatu apud dextumos curabat; curabat vero in sinistra A. Manlius cum funditoribus et sagittariis; praeterea curabat idem Manlius cohortes Ligurum.” The verb will thus be understood twice without an accusative, and once expressed with that case.

⁵ Minume cari, “ whose lives were least valued.” In some editions these words do not appear.

tium iter explorabant: simul consul, ¹quasi nullo imposito, omnia providere; apud omnes adesse; laudare, increpare ²merentis. Ipse armatus intentusque, item milites cogebat: ³neque secus, atque iter facere, castra munire; excubitum in portas cohortis ex legionibus, pro⁴ castris equites auxiliarios mittere: praeterea alios super vallum in munimentis locare, vigilias ipse circumire, ⁴non diffidens ea futura, quae imperavisset, quam ⁵uti militibus exaequatus cum imperatore labos volentibus esset. Et sane Marius, illo et aliis temporibus belli, pudore magis, quam ⁶malo, exercitum coērcebant; quod multi per ambitionem fieri aiebant; pars quod a pueritia consuetam duritiam, et alia, quae ceteri miserias vocant, voluptati habuisset. ⁷Nisi tamen res

¹ Quasi nullo imposito, “as if no one were placed over them by him.”

² Merentis, “as each deserved commendation or blame.”

³ Neque secus, &c. “nor was he less careful in fortifying his camp, than he had been in prosecuting his march.”

⁴ Non diffidens, &c. “not so much from any distrust on his part that the orders he had given would not be obeyed, as,” &c. Cortius reads “non diffidentia futuri quae,” &c. and completes the sentence thus: “non diffidentia futuri ejus omnis quae,” &c. making quae plural, on account of the plural import of omnis. Few, we conceive, will approve of such an explanation. Futuri must either be changed to futurorum, or quae to quod, or else the reading we have adopted must be regarded as the simplest and the best.

⁵ Uti militibus, &c. “that their toils, being equally participated in by their commander, might be cheerfully endured by the soldiers at large.” We have here another instance of the Greek construction mentioned in note 3. page 274.

⁶ Malo, “by punishment.”

⁷ Nisi tamen, &c. Equivalent to Sed tamen. The reference is to Marius. Compare Burnouf (ad loc.), “Sive per ambitionem, sive consuetudinis causa hoc faceret, id utique certum est, publicae utilitati et gloriae non minus ab illo consultum fuisse quam si saevissimum imperium in milites exercuisset.”

publica, pariter ac saevissimo imperio, bene atque de-core gesta.

CI. Igitur quarto denique die, haud longe ab opido Cirta undique simul speculatores ¹citi sese ostendunt: qua re hostis adesse intellegitur. Sed quia divorsi redeuntes, alius ab alia parte, atque omnes idem significabant; consul incertus, quonam modo aciem instrueret, nullo ordine commutato, advorsum omnia paratus, ibidem operitur. Ita Jugurtham spes frustrata, qui copias in quatuor partis distribuerat, ratus ex omnibus ²aequo aliquos ab tergo hostibus venturos. Interim Sulla, quem primum adtigerant, cohortatus suos, turmatim et quam maxime confertis equis, ipse aliique Mauros invadunt: ceteri in loco manentes ab jaculis eminus emissis corpora tegere, et, si qui in manus venerant, obtruncare. Dum eo modo equites praeliantur, Bocchus cum peditibus, quos Volux, filius ejus, adduxerat, neque in priore pugna, in itinere morati, adfuerant, postremam Romanorum aciem invadunt. Tum Marius apud primos agebat; quod ibi Jugurtha cum plurimis. Dein Numida, cognito Bocchi adventu, clam cum paucis ³ad pedites convertit: ibi Latine (nam apud Numantiam loqui didicerat) exclamat: "nostros frustra pugnare; paullo ante Marium sua manu interfectum;" simul gladium sanguine oblitem ostendere, quem in pugna, ¹satis impigre occiso pedite nostro, cruentaverat. Quod ubi milites accepere, magis ²atrocitate rei, quam fide nuncii terrentur: simulque barbari animos tollere, et in ³percuslos acrius incedere. Jamque paullum ab fuga aberant, cum Sulla, profligatis, quos advorsum ierat, Mauris ab latere incurrit. Bocchus statim avortitur. At Jugurtha, dum sustentare suos, et prope jam adeptam victoriam retinere cupit, circumventus ab equitibus, dextra, sinistra, omnibus occisis, solus inter tela hostium ⁴vitabundus erumpit. Atque interim Marius, fugatis equitibus, occurrit auxilio suis, quos pelli jam acceperat. Denique hostes undique fusi. Tum spectaculum horribile campis patentibus: ⁵sequi, fugere; occidi, capi; equi, viri adflicti: ac multi, volneribus acceptis, neque fugere posse, neque quietem pati; ⁶niti modo, ac statim concidere: postremo omnia, qua ⁷visus erat, constrata telis, armis, cadaveribus; et inter ea humus infecta sanguine.

¹ Citi, "at full speed." Equivalent to citato cursu.

² Aequo. Cortius joins this adverb to ab tergo, and makes the whole phrase equivalent to "directly in the rear." The explanation of the Bipont editor appears much happier: "ex quadruplici agmine certe unum, quodcunque esset." In accordance with this, the expression aequo aliquos may be rendered, "that some of them certainly, no matter which."

³ Ad pedites. Cortius maintains that the reference is here not to the Roman infantry, but to those which Volux had brought, and with which Bocchus had attacked the Roman rear. The opposite opinion appears to be the true one; especially as the words ibi Latine follow.

¹ Satis impigre. Equivalent to satis celeriter, “with great quickness.”

² Atrocitate rei, “with the dreadful nature of the thing.” The meaning is this: The Romans were thrown into alarm, not so much from any confidence which they placed in the words of Jugurtha, as from the reflection that there was indeed a possibility of their favourite commander losing his life in the action.

³ Percuslos. Some editions add Romanos.

⁴ Vitabundus, “by making great exertions to escape.”

⁵ Sequi, &c. A beautiful specimen of the figure Asyndeton, in imitation, very probably, of the celebrated passage in Xenophon (Ages. 2. 12.) praised by Longinus, § 19. Συμβαλλόντας τὰς ἀσπίδας, ἴωθεντο, ἵμάχοντο, ἀπίκτεινον, ἀπέβυνον: “Closing their shields together, they were pushed, they fought, they slew, they were slain.”

—Smith.

⁶ Niti modo, “they merely made an effort to rise.”

⁷ Visus. A noun of the fourth declension. Render qua visus erat, “as far as the eye could reach.”

CII. ¹POSTEA loci consul, haud dubie jam victor, pervenit in oppidum Cirtam, quo initio profectus intenderat. Eo ²post diem quintum, quam iterum barbari male pugnaverant, legati a Boccho veniunt, qui regis verbis ab Mario petivere, “duo quam fidissimos ad eum mitteret: velle de se, et de populi Romani commodo cum is disserere.” Ille statim L. Sullam et A. Manlium ire jubet. Qui quamquam acciti ibant, tamen placuit verba apud regem facere; ingenium aut avorsum uti flecterent, aut cupidum pacis vehementius accenderent. Itaque Sulla, cuius facundiae, non aetati a Manlio concessum, pauca verba hujuscemodi locutus. “Rex Bocche, magna nobis laetitia, cum te talem virum di monuere, uti aliquando pacem, quam bellum, malles; neu te optimum cum pessumo omnium Jugurtha miscendo commaculares; simul nobis demeres acerbam necessitudinem, pariter te errantem et illum sceleratissimum ³persequi. Ad hoc, populo Romano jam a ⁴principio reipublicae visum, amicos, ¹ Postea loci. For postea. This phraseology has already been alluded to.

² Post diem quintum quam, &c. “on the fifth day after the barbarians had met with their second defeat.” The Latin language admits several variations of this construction. Thus we may either adopt the form used in the text, or quinto die postquam pugnaverant, or quinque diebus postquam pugnaverant, or post dies quintos quam pugnaverant; or with ablative alone, omitting post, die quinto quam pugnaverant. The anomalous appearance of post diem quintum quam, &c. and some other of the phrases just quoted, arose, according to Zumpt, from a transposing of the preposition. Having once written post die quinto quam, they would be easily led to change die quinto into diem quintum, as if it had been governed by post. Compare note 1, page 65. Conspiracy of Catiline.

³ Persequi. A Hellenism for persequundi. Compare Scheller, L. G. vol. ii. p. 202. Walker's Transl.

⁴ Principio. Cortius reads jam inopi visum, omitting a principio reipublicae. The remark of the Bipont editor on this emen-

quam servos quaerere: tutius rati, volentibus, quam coactis imperitare. Tibi vero nulla opportunior nostra amicitia; primum, quod procul absumus, in quo offensae minimum, ¹gratia par, ac si prope adessemus; dein, quod ²parentes abunde habemus, amicorum neque nobis, neque cuiquam omnium satis. Atque hoc utinam a principio tibi placuissest! profecto ex populo Romano ad hoc tempus multo plura bona accepisses, quam mala ³percessus es. Sed, quoniam humanarum rerum fortuna pleraque regit, ⁴cui scilicet placuit te et vim et gratiam nostram experiri; nunc, quando per illam licet, festina, atque, ut coepisti, perge. Multa atque opportuna habes, quo facilius errata officiis superes. Postremo hoc in pectus tuum demitte, nunquam populum Romanum beneficii victimum: nam bello quid valeat, tute scis." Ad ea Bocchus placide et benigne; simul pauca pro delicto verba facit: " se non hostili animo, sed regnum tutatum arma cepisse: nam Numidiae partem, ⁵unde vi Jugurtham expulerat, jure belli suam dation is perfectly conclusive: " Sed inopum non foret, quaerere servos populos; neque iis facile, amicos invenire, ne dum quod ea Sulla parum ex dignitate Romana dixisset."

¹ Gratia par, &c. " while you will enjoy the same high estimation with us, as if we were your immediate neighbours." Equivalent to " in eodem honoris et gratiae loco apud nos eris."

² Parentes, " subjects."

³ Percessus es. In some editions percessus esses, an inferior reading.

⁴ Cui scilicet placuit, &c. We have here given the reading of the Aldine edition. Cortius has placuisse, and makes the infinitive depend on scilicet, i. e. scire licet.

⁵ Unde vi Jugurtham expulerat, &c. Understand Marius as the nominative to expulerat, and refer jure belli suam factam to Bocchus. The expression jure belli, as used by the latter, has relation to the agreement which Jugurtha made with Bocchus, that, if he would take up arms, and aid him in expelling the Romans from Numidia, he would give him the third part of that country. Bocchus now factam, eam vastari ab Mario pati nequivisse; praeterea missis antea Romam legatis, repulsum ab amicitia. Ceterum vetera omittere, ac tum, si per Marium licet, legatos ad senatum missurum." Dein ¹copia facta, animus barbari ab amicis flexus, quos Jugurtha, cognita legatione Sullae et Manlii, metuens id quod parabatur, donis corruperat.

CIII. MARIUS interea, exercitu in hibernis composito, cum expeditis cohortibus et parte equitatus proficiuntur in loca sola, obsessum turrim regiam, quo Jugurtha perfugas omnis praesidium imposuerat. Tum rursus Bocchus, seu reputando, quae sibi duobus prae-liis ²venerant, seu admonitus ab amicis, quos incorruptos Jugurtha reliquerat, ex omni copia necessariorum quinque delegit, quorum et fides cognita, et ingenia validissima erant. Eos ad Marium, ac dein, si placeat, Romam legatos ire jubet: agendarum rerum, et quocumque modo belli componendi licentiam permittit. Illi mature ad hiberna Romanorum proficiuntur:
deinde itinere a Gaetulis latronibus circumventi spolia-tique, pavidi, ³sine decore ad Sullam perfugiunt, quem consul, in expeditionem proficiens, pro praetore reli-pretends that the moment he took up arms his right to this part became absolute. Hence the peculiar meaning of jus belli in this passage, differing somewhat from its more usual acceptation. Burnouf and others, however, read expulerit, referring, of course, to Bocchus; and suppose that the monarch here utters an intentional falsehood, in asserting that he had driven Jugurtha from this third part of Numidia, but a falsehood which the Romans had not the means of detecting.

¹ Copia facta. Understand mittendi legatos: "when an opportunity of sending ambassadors offered."

² Venerant. For evenerant, the simple for the compound. Some editions exhibit the latter.

³ Sine decore, "without any ensigns of dignity;" without any badges of their commission as plenipotentiaries.

querat. Eos ille non pro ¹vanis hostibus, ut meriti erant, sed ²adcurate ac liberaliter habuit; qua re barbari et famam Romanorum avaritiae falsam, et Sullam, ob munificentiam in sese, amicum rati. Nam etiam tum ³largitio multis ignara: munificus nemo putabatur, nisi pariter volens: dona omnia ⁴in benignitate habebantur. Igitur quaestori mandata Bocchi patefaciunt: simul ab eo petunt, uti fautor consultorque sibi adsit: copias, fidem, magnitudinem regis sui, et alia, quae aut utilia, aut ⁵benevolentiae credebant, oratione extollunt: dein Sulla omnia pollicito, docti, quo modo apud Marium, item apud senatum verba facerent, circiter dies XL. ibidem opperiuuntur.

CIV. MARIUS postquam, ⁶ibi infecto, quo intenderat, negotio, Cirtam redit; de adventu legatorum certior factus, illosque et Sullam venire jubet, item L. Bellienum praetorem Utica, praeterea omnis undique senatorii ordinis, quibuscum mandata Bocchi cognoscit. ⁷Legatis potestas eundi Romam fit ab consule: interea

¹ Vanis hostibus, “faithless enemies.”

² Adcurate ac liberaliter, “in a respectful and generous manner.”

³ Largitio, “liberality, with a view to corruption.”

⁴ In benignitate habebantur, “were ascribed to a generous impulse.”

⁵ Benevolentiae, “calculated to conciliate his good-will.” Compare, in reference to this construction, note 6. page 17. Conspiracy of Catiline.

⁶ Ibi infecto. Cortius and others read infecto, quo intenderat, negotio, and make it equivalent to infecto negotio, quo confecto redire intenderat. This is altogether inferior to the lection of our text. “Quis talia ferat?” observes the Bipont editor, in commenting on the interpretation of Cortius, “et quid opus dicere, Marium, post rem confectam, in hiberna redire voluisse?” In our reading, ibi refers to the turris regia mentioned in the previous chapter.

⁷ Legatis potestas, &c. “Permission to go to Rome is granted the ambassadors by the consul.”

induciae postulabantur. ¹Ea Sullae et plerisque placuere: pauci ferocius decernunt, scilicet ignari humarum rerum, quae fluxae et mobiles semper in advorsa ²mutant. Ceterum Mauri, impetratis omnibus rebus, tres Romam profecti cum Cn. Octavio Rufo, qui quaestor stipendium in Africam portaverat; duo ad regem redeunt. Ex his Bocchus cum cetera, tum maxime benignitatem et ³studium Sullae lubens accepit. Romae legis ejus, postquam errasse regem et Jugurthae scelere lapsum ⁴deprecati sunt, amicitiam et foedus potentibus hoc modo respondetur. "Senatus et populus Romanus beneficii et injuriae memor esse solet; ceterum Boccho, quoniam poenitet, delicti gratiam facit: foedus et amicitia dabuntur, cum meruerit."

CV. QVIS rebus cognitis, Bocchus per litteras a Mario petivit, uti Sullam ad se mitteret; ⁵cujus arbitratu de communibus negotiis consuleretur. Is missus cum praesidio equitum atque peditum, funditorum ⁶Balearium: praeterea ⁷sagittarii et cohors Peligna cum

¹ Ea. Referring both to potestas eundi and to induciae.

² Mutant, "are changing." Understand sese.

³ Studium, "courtesy."

⁴ Deprecati sunt. Understand confitentes or didentes, and render the whole clause, "after they had deprecated the resentment of the Romans, by confessing that their monarch," &c.

⁵ Cujus arbitratu. Cortius makes this equivalent to quo praesente et voluntatem Populi Romani observante. It may be simply rendered, "by whose intervention." The more common meaning of the phrase is, "under whose direction, or guidance."

⁶ Balearium. The Romans obtained their slingers from Achaea, and from the Balearic isles, Majorca and Minorca, the inhabitants of which were remarkable for their dexterity in the use of the sling, having been trained to this exercise from their infancy.

⁷ Sagittarii et cohors Peligna. Understand erant, or prefecti sunt cum eo. The Romans obtained their best archers from Crete and Arabia.—Peligna. The Peligni were a people of Italy, of Sabine descent, according to Ovid, though Festus derives their origin from velitaribus armis, itineris properandi caussa : neque his secus, atque aliis armis, aduersum tela hostium, quod ea levia sunt, muniti. Sed itinere, quinto denique die, Volux, filius Bocchi, repente in campus patentibus cum mille non amplius equitibus sese ostendit : qui ¹temere et effuse euntes, Sullae aliquique omnibus et numerum ampliorem vero, et ²hostilem metum efficiebant. Igitur sese quisque ³expedire, arma atque tela ⁴tentare, intendere : timor aliquantus, sed spes amplior, quippe Illyria. Their territory lay to the east of that of the Marsi. The Peligni were not distinguished from the other tribes by which they were surrounded, by their political importance, or the extent of their country ; but they derive some consideration in history, from the circumstance of their chief city having been selected by the allies in the Social War as the seat of the new empire. Had their plans succeeded, and had Rome fallen beneath the efforts of the coalition, Corfinium would have become the capital of Italy, and perhaps of the world. Cramer's Description of Ancient Italy, vol. i. p. 331.—Cum velitaribus armis, “armed like Velites.” The Velites or light troops were equipped with bows, slings, seven javelins or spears, with slender points like arrows, so that, when thrown, they bent, and could not easily be returned by the enemy ; a Spanish sword, having both edge and point ; a round buckler, (parma), about three feet in diameter, made of wood and covered with leather ; and a helmet or casque for the head, generally made of the skin of some wild beast, to appear the more terrible.

¹ Temere et effuse, “in a disorderly and scattered manner.”

² Hostilem metum, “apprehension as of an enemy.”

³ Expedire. Understand ad pugnam; “got ready for battle.” The full expression occurs in Livy (38. 21.), “Quos ubi Romani viderunt, expeditum sese ad pugnam.” The phrase properly alludes to the disencumbering themselves of baggage, the amount of which carried by them on the present occasion was trifling, and therefore allowed a speedier preparation for the fight.

⁴ Tentare, “tried.”—Intendere. This is commonly rendered “they bent their bows,” with an ellipsis of arcus. Such an explanation, however, is decidedly pleonastic, since arma atque tela tentare precedes. The true meaning is, “directed his whole attention to the approaching engagement.”

victoribus, et ad vorsum eos, quos saepe vicerant. Interim equites, exploratum praemissi, rem, uti erat,¹ quietam nunciant.

CVI. VOLUX adveniens quaestorem appellat: "se a patre Boccho obviam illis simul, et praesidio missum." Deinde eum et proximum diem sine metu conjuncti eunt. Post, ubi castra locata, et die vesper erat, repente Maurus ²incerto voltu ad Sullam adcurrit: "sibi ex speculatoribus cognitum, Jugurham haud procul abesse :" simul, uti noctu clam secum profugeret, rogat atque hortatur. Ille ³animo feroci negat, " se toties fusum Numidam pertimescere: virtuti suorum satis credere: etiam si certa pestis adesset, mansurum potius; quam proditis, quos ducebat, turpi fuga incertae ac forsitan post paullo morbo interiturae vitae parceret." Ceterum ab ⁴eodem monitus, uti noctu proficiscerentur, consilium adprobat: ac statim milites ⁵coenatos esse, in castris ignis quam creberrimos fieri, dein ⁶prima vigilia silentio egredi jubet. Jamque nocturno

¹ Quietam. The phrase rem quietam (esse) may be rendered, "that there was nothing to fear," or "that all was well."

² Incervo voltu, "with a troubled look." Some editions insert after these words pavens; but this is a mere pleonasm, since the same idea is expressed by incerto voltu. Compare Cicero (pro Cn. Pl. 19.), "Timor ejus, perturbatio, suspensus incertusque vultus, crebra coloris mutatio," &c.

³ Animo feroci, "with stern resolution."

⁴ Eodem. Referring to Volux.

⁵ Coenatos esse, "to have their evening repast over. Some neuter verbs have participles which are passive in form, but active in signification; as coenatus, "one who has supped;" pransus, "one who has dined;" juratus, "one who has sworn," &c. The Roman soldiers took food twice a-day, at dinner and supper. The former was a slight meal, which they commonly took standing. They indulged themselves a little more at supper.

⁶ Prima vigilia. The Romans, as has been observed in a pre-itinere fessis omnibus, Sulla pariter cum ortu solis castra metabatur, cum equites Mauri nunciant, “ Jugurtham circiter duum millium intervallo ante consedisse.” Quod postquam auditum, tum vero ingens metus nostros invadit: credere, proditos a Voluce, et insidiis circumventos. Ac fuere, qui dicerent, ¹manu vindicandum, neque apud illum tantum scelus inultum relinquendum.

CVII. AT Sulla, quanquam eadem aestumabat, tamen ab injuria Maurum prohibet: suos hortatur, “ uti fortem animum gererent: saepe antea paucis strenuis advorsum multitudinem bene pugnatum: quanto sibi in praelio minus pepercissent, tanto tutiores fore: nec quemquam decere, qui manus armaverit, ab inermis pedibus auxilium petere, in maxumo metu ²nudum et caecum corpus ad hostis vortere.” Deinde Volucem, ³quoniam hostilia faceret, maxumum Jovem obtestatus, ut sceleris atque perfidiae Bocchi testis adisset, castris abire jubet. Ille lacrumans orare, “ne ea crederet: nihil dolo factum, magis calliditate Jugurthae, cui speculanti iter suum cognitum esset. ⁴Ceterum, quoniam vious note, divided the night into four watches of three hours each. The first watch commenced at sunset.

¹ Manu vindicandum, “that immediate vengeance should be taken.”

² Nudum et caecum corpus, “that part of the body which has no shield to protect it, and no eyes by which danger may be avoided;” i. e. a defenceless and blind back. Compare Xenophon, Cyrop. 3. 3. Μάθεν γὰρ, τὸ κερτεῖν βουλομένους, τὰ συφλὰ τοῦ σώματος, καὶ ἀστλα, καὶ ἄχεια, ταῦτα ἴκανοια τάπτειν τοῖς πολεμίοις φύγοντες. “For it is folly for those that desire conquest, to turn the blind, unarmed, and handless parts of their bodies to the enemy by flight.”—Ashley.

³ Quoniam hostilia faceret, “since he was acting the part of an enemy.”

⁴ Ceterum, &c. “Besides, since he (Jugurtha) had not a large force with him, and his hopes and resources depended upon his (Volux’s) father, that he (Jugurtha) would not dare to do any thing neque ingentem multitudinem haberet, et spes opesque ejus ex patre suo penderent, illum nihil palam ausurum, cum ipse filius testis adesset: quare optimum factum videri, ¹per media ejus castra palam transire: sese, vel praemissis, vel ibidem relictis Mauris, solum cum Sulla iturum." Ea res, ut in tali negotio, probata, ac statim profecti: quia de improviso ²acciderant, dubio atque haesitante Jugurtha, incolumes transeunt. Deinde paucis diebus, quo ire intenderant, perventum.

CVIII. IBI cum Boccho Numida quidam, Aspar nomine, multum et familiariter agebat: praemissus ab Jugurtha, postquam Sullam accitum audierat, ³orator, et subdole speculatum Bocchi consilia: praeterea Dabar, Massugradae filius, ex gente Masinissae, ceterum materno genere impar; pater ejus ex concubina ortus erat; Mauro ob ingenii multa bona carus acceptusque, openly, while he himself (Volux), the son, was present as a witness of his conduct."

¹ Per media ejus castra. Cortius thinks the meaning would be improved if media were omitted, and prae rendered by praeter. We cannot agree with him. Volux had stated, that Jugurtha would not dare to do any thing openly if he were present: in confirmation of this, he proposes that they march boldly through his very encampment. Jugurtha probably had encamped his forces in two divisions, or else in scattered order.

² Acciderant. Some editions have accesserant. Cortius, however, successfully defends the lection we have given in the text, and makes it signify "they had come;" for accido frequently has this meaning when any person or thing chances to arrive unexpectedly. Compare Livy (32. 30.), "Civitati fama incerta accidit;" and Quintus Curtius (4. 4. 6.), "Alexander classem litori, equo fremitus acciderat, admovit." So also Tacitus (Hist. 4. 29. 4.), "Unde clamor acciderat;" and our own author, chapter 88. of this narrative, "quo improvisus gravior accideret."

³ Orator, "as his ambassador," or "agent." Compare Livy (30. 16.), "Jam nullo auctore belli ultra auditio, oratores ad pacem petendam mittunt." Observe also the change of construction in our author: "Praemissus orator, et (praemissus) speculatum."

¹quem Bocchus, fidum multis antea tempestatibus expertus, illico ad Sullam nunciatum mittit, “paratum sese facere, quae populus Romanus vellet: colloquio diem, locum, tempus ipse dilegeret: ²consulta sese omnia cum illo integra habere: neu Jugurthae legatum pertimesceret: ³cautum esse quo res communis licentius gereretur; nam ab insidiis ejus aliter caveri nequivisse.” Sed ego comperior, Bocchum magis ⁴Punica

¹ Quem Bocchus, &c. Cortius inserts Romanis after fidum. The reading we have adopted is preferable, according to which fidum signifies “worthy of reliance,” simply, without any particular reference. Bocchus had not been long acquainted with the Romans, and therefore fidum Romanis seems too harsh.

² Consulta sese omnia, &c. “that he was keeping every subject of consultation undetermined, until he could consider them in conjunction with him.”

³ Cautum esse, &c. Cortius reads quo res, &c. omitting cautum esse, which, according to him, may be understood. Others understand illum accitum, or advocatum. According to our reading, cautum esse will refer to Dabar, and it will be the same as Dabarem ipsum providum tutumque esse quo, &c.

⁴ Punica fide, “with a treacherous intent.” The Roman writers used the expression Punica fides to denote bad faith, in allusion to the frequent violation of compacts which were charged against the Carthaginians by their haughty rivals. The Carthaginians might have returned the compliment without any great violation of the truth. Attica fides was a proverbial expression, on the other hand, to indicate good faith. Compare Velleius Paterculus (2. 23. 4.), “Adeo enim certa Atheniensium in Romanos fides fuit, ut semper, et in omni re, quidquid sincera fide gereretur, id Romani Attica fieri praedicarent.” Some writers extend this character for good faith to the whole nation, and make Graeca fides and Attica fides synonymous. This is altogether incorrect. The true explanation is given by Junius (Adagia Veterum, p. 577.), “Graeca fides pro dubia et vana accipitur, haud pro certa: quippe quae nulla prorsus esset, nisi praesente pecunia oculitus creditor i satisdaretur. Quod ex Plauto, in Asinaria, manifestum fit, ubi ait: Cetera quaeque volumus uti, Graeca mercamur fide: et ostendit hoc clarissime Polybius, historiae lib. 6. his verbis: παρὰ μὲν τοῖς Ἐλλησιν ἵπποι σάλα-fide, quam ob quae praedicabat, simul Romanos et Numidam spe pacis adtinuisse, multumque cum animo suo volvere solitum, Jugurtham Romanis, an illi Sullam traderet: lubidinem advorsum nos, metum pro nobis suasisse.

CIX. Igitur Sulla respondit: “pauca se coram Aspare locuturum; cetera occulte, aut nullo, aut quam paucissimum praesentibus:” simul edocet, quae responderentur. Postquam, sicuti voluerat, congressi, dicit, “se missum a consule venisse quaesitum ab eo, pacem, an bellum agitaturus fore.” Tum rex, uti praeceptum, post diem decimum redire jubet; ac, nihil etiam nunc decrevisse, sed illo die responsurum: deinde ambo ²in sua castra digressi. Sed, ubi plerumque noctis processit, Sulla a Boccho occulte arcessitur: ab utroque tantummodo fidi interpres adhibentur: praeterea Dabar ³internuncius, ⁴sanctus vir et ex sententia ambobus. Ac statim sic rex incipit.

CX. “NUMQUAM ego ratus sum fore, uti rex maxu-τον μόνον πίστευθων, ἀντηγραφεῖς ἔχοντις δίκαια, καὶ σφραγίδας τοσαντας, καὶ μάρτυρας διπλασίους, οὐ δύνανται τηρεῖν τὴν πίστιν.”

¹ Adtinuisse, “kept amused.”

² In sua castra. The reference here is to Sylla and Bocchus, not to Sylla and Aspar as Cortius maintains. “Sulla,” observes Bur-nouf, “quamvis paucos milites haberet, eos videlicet alicubi habere necesse fuit. Ubi autem si non in castris? Et Bocchus, quum bellum gereret, cur non et ipse castra in proprio regno habuisset?” In addition to this it may be observed, that Aspar on the very next day was still at the court of Bocchus, which could not possibly have been the case if he had set out the day previous for the camp of Jugurtha, since it took many days subsequently for him to go and come: “Properato itinere, post diem octavum reddit ad Bocchum,” ch. 112.

³ Internuncius, “as a mutual adviser.”

⁴ Sanctus vir, &c. “a man of strict integrity, and acceptable to both.”

mus in hac terra, ¹et omnium, quos novi, opulentissimus, privato homini gratiam deberem. Et hercle, Sulla, ante te cognitum, multis orantibus, aliis ulro egomet opem tuli, nullius indigui. Id ²iminutum, quod ceteri dolere solent, ego laetor; ³fuerit mihi pretium, eguisse aliquando amicitiae tuae, qua apud animum meum nihil carius habeo. Id ⁴adeo experiri licet: arma, viros, pecuniam, postremo quidquid animo lubet, sume, utere: et, quoad vives, numquam redditam gratiam putaveris; semper apud me ⁵integra erit: denique nihil, me sciente, frustra voles. Nam, ut ego aestumo, regem armis, quam munificentia vinci, minus flagitiosum. Ceterum de re publica vestra, ⁶cujus curator huc missus es, paucis accipe. Bellum ego populo Romano neque feci, neque ⁷factum umquam volui: finis meos ad vorsum armatos armis tutus sum. Id omitto, quando vobis ita placet: gerite, uti voltis, cum Jugurtha bellum. Ego flumen Mulucham, quod inter me et Micip-sam fuit, non ⁸egrediar, neque Jugurham id intrare

¹ Et omnium, &c. Cortius reads et omnium quos novi, omitting opulentissimus. Ours is the Aldine lection.

² Inminutum. The Bipont edition has immutatum. Our reading is a much stronger one.

³ Fuerit mihi pretium, &c. "let it have been my good lot to have stood in need, at length, of your friendship."

⁴ Adeo, "accordingly."

⁵ Integra, "in full force." The idea intended to be conveyed is, that the favour alluded to by the monarch shall always remain undiminished in value in his eyes.

⁶ Cujus curator, "as whose agent," or, "for the purpose of attending to whose interests."

⁷ Factum . . . volui. Denoting more completeness of action than facere volui.

⁸ Egrediar. Equivalent to transgrediar. Some verbs, compounded of prepositions that govern an ablative case, take an accusative. Thus, beside the example in the text, we have in Livy egredi urbem, sinam. ¹Praeterea, si quid meque vobisque dignum petiveris, haud repulsus abibis."

CXI. Ad ea Sulla pro se breviter et modice; de pace et de communibus rebus multis disseruit. Denique regi patefacit, ²quod polliceatur, senatum et populum Romanum, quoniam amplius armis valuissent, non in gratiam habituros: faciundum aliquid, quod illorum magis, quam sua, retulisse videretur: ³id adeo in promptu esse, quoniam Jugurthae copiam haberet: quem si Romanis tradidisset, fore, uti illi plurimum deberetur; amicitiam, foedus, Numidiae partem, quam nunc petet, ultro adventuram." Rex primo ⁴negitare: "ad finitatem, cognationem, praeterea foedus intervenisse: ad hoc metuere, ne ⁵fluxa fide usus, popularium animos avorteret, quis et Jugurtha carus, et Romani invisi erant." Denique saepius fatigatus, ⁶leniter et ex voluntate Sullae omnia se facturum promittit. Ceterum ad simulandam pacem, cuius Numida, defessus bello, avidissimus, quae utilia visa, constituunt. Ita, composito dolo, digrediuntur.

CXII. At rex postero die Asparem, Jugurthae and in other writers excedere urbem, coire societatem, &c. Compare Zumpt, L. G. p. 256. 2d ed. Kenrick's transl.

¹ Praeterea, &c. Is not this a hint on the part of Bocchus, that he may, perhaps, be found willing to deliver up Jugurtha?

² Quod polliceatur, "as regards any promises which he may make."

³ Id adeo in promptu esse, &c. "that this, indeed, was an easy matter, since he had Jugurtha in his power."

⁴ Negitare, "resolutely denied," or, perhaps, "made a great show of denial."

⁵ Fluxa fide usus, "if he acted with bad faith towards Jugurtha." — Avorteret, "he might alienate."

⁶ Leniter. Some editions read lenitur, "his resolution is overcome." The lection we have adopted, and which may be rendered "with a softened air," appears to us preferable.

legatum adpellat : “¹sibi per Dabarem ex Sulla cognitum, posse conditionibus bellum poni : quamobrem regis sui sententiam exquireret.” Ille laetus in castra Jugurthae venit. Deinde ab illo cuncta edoctus, properato itinere, post diem octavum redit ad Bocchum, et ei nunciat, “ Jugurtham cupere omnia, quae imparentur, facere ; sed Mario parum confidere : saepe antea cum imperatoribus Romanis pacem conventam ²frustra fuisse. ³Ceterum si ambobus consultum, et ratam pacem vellet, daret operam, ut una ab omnibus, quasi de pace in colloquium veniretur, ibique sibi Sullam traderet : cum talem virum in potestate haberet, fore, uti jussu senatus atque populi Romani foedus fieret : neque hominem nobilem, ⁴non sua ignavia, sed ob rempublicam in hostium potestate, relicturnum iri.”

CXIII. HAEC Maurus secum ipse diu volvens tandem promisit ; ceterum ⁵dolo, an vere, parum competimus. Sed plerumque regiae voluntates, ut vehementes, sic mobiles, saepe ⁶ipsae sibi advorsae. Postea, tempore et loco constituto, [in colloquium uti de pace veniretur], Bocchus Sullam modo, modo Jugurthae legatum adpellare, ⁷benigne habere, idem ambobus polliceri. Illi pariter laeti, ac spei bonae pleni. Sed nocte ea, quae proxuma fuit ante diem colloquio decretum, Maurus, adhibitis amicis, ac statim immutata

¹ Sibi. Understand, before this, dicit, or some equivalent term.

² Frustra fuisse, “ had been without any effect.”

³ Ceterum, &c. “ That, however, if he wished to consult for both their interests, and to have a firm peace,” &c.

⁴ Non sua ignavia, “ by reason of no cowardice on his part.” After relictum iri understand ibi.

⁵ Dolo, an vere, “ treacherously, or sincerely.”

⁶ Ipsae sibi advorsae, “ clash with one another.”

⁷ Benigne habere, “ treated them kindly.”

voluntate ¹remotis, dicitur secum ipse multa agitavisse, ²voltu corporis pariter, atque animo varius: qua re, silicet tacente ipso, occulta pectoris patefecisse.
 Tamen postremo Sullam arcessiri jubet, et ex ejus sententia Numidae insidias tendit. Deinde, ubi dies advenit, et ei nunciatum est, Jugurtham haud procul abesse, cum paucis amicis et quaestore nostro, quasi obvius honoris caussa, procedit in tumulum, facillu-mum visu insidianibus. Eodem Numida cum plerisque necessariis suis, inermus, ³ut dictum, accedit; ac statim, signo dato, undique simul ex insidiis invaditur.
 Ceteri obtruncati: Jugurtha Sullaे vinctus traditur, et ab eo ad Marium deductus.

CXIV. PER idem tempus advorsum ⁴Gallos ab du-

¹ Remotis. Referring to amicis. Some editions have remotis ceteris.

² Voltu corporis, &c. “the movements of his body varying with the purposes of his soul.” Voltus is here used as a general term for the gestures of the body, including also the expression of the countenance. Compare chapter 34. of this narrative, terrebat cum clamore, voltu, &c. where the same usage occurs.

³ Ut dictum, “as had been agreed upon.”

⁴ Gallos. More correctly Germanos, for they were the Cimbri, Teutones, and Tigurini. Compare Florus (3. 3.), “Cimbri, Theutoni atque Tigurini, ab extremis Galliae profugi, quum terras eorum inundasset Oceanus, novas sedes toto orbe quaerebant; exclusique Gallia et Hispania, quum in Italiam remigarent misere legatos in castra Silani, inde ad Senatum,” &c.; and again, “Sed nec primum quidem impetum barbarorum Silanus, nec secundum Manlius, nec tertium Caepio sustinere potuerunt. Omnes fugati, exuti castris. Actum erat, nisi Marius illi seculo contigisset.”—“The Cimbri, Theutoni, and Tigurini, being forced to flee from the remotest parts of Gaul, because the sea had laid their country under water, roamed about in all directions in quest of a new settlement; and being excluded from Gaul and Spain, were resorting to Italy, and sent ambassadors to Silanus in his camp, and from thence to the senate,” &c.—“Silanus was worsted by the barbarians in one engagement, Manlius in another, and Caepio in a third: they were all put to the cibus nostris, Q. Caepione et M. Manlio, male pugnatum; quo metu Italia omnis contremuerat. ¹ Illique et, inde ad nostram memoriam, Romani sic habuere; alia omnia virtuti suae prona esse; ² cum Gallis pro salute, non pro gloria certare. Sed, postquam bellum in Numidia confectum, et Jugurtham vinctum adduci Romam nunciatum est, Marius consul ³ absens factus, et ei decreta provincia Gallia: isque ⁴ Kalendis Januariis magna gloria consul triumphavit. ⁵ Ea tempestate spes atque opes civitatis in illo sitae.

rout, and lost their camps. Happily for Rome, Marius lived in that age, otherwise all had gone to ruin."

¹ Illique, &c. " Both the Romans of that day, and thence downward even to our own time."

² Cum Gallis, &c. Compare Cicero (Off. I. 12.) " Cum Cimbris, ut cum inimicis gerebatur: uter esset? non, uter imperaret?"

³ Absens, " though absent." This was a violation of the law, since no person, strictly speaking, was allowed to stand candidate for the consulship, unless present at the time in Rome. The condition, however, was often violated.

⁴ Kalendis Januariis. The first of January, the day when the new consuls were inducted into office. After the solemnity of the triumph was finished, Marius, as Plutarch informs us, assembled the senate in the capitol, where, either through inadvertence or gross insolence, he entered in his triumphal robes; but soon perceiving that the senate was offended, he went and put on his ordinary habit, and then returned to his place.

⁵ Ea tempestate. Emphatical. His subsequent career was ruinous to the state.

IN conclusion, it may not be improper to add a few words relative to the fate of Jugurtha. " It is said," observes Plutarch, " that when he was led before the car of the conqueror, he lost his senses. After the triumph, he was thrown into prison, where, while they were in haste to strip him, some tore his robe off his back, and others, catching eagerly at his pendants, pulled off the tips of his ears along with them. When he was thrust down naked into the dungeon, all confused, he said with a frantic smile, "Heavens! how cold is this bath of yours!" There, having struggled for six days with extreme hunger, and to the last hour labouring for the preservation of life, he came to such an end as his crimes deserved. There were carried (we are told) in his triumph, three thousand and seven pounds of gold, five thousand seven hundred and seventy-five of silver bullion, and of silver coin seventeen thousand and twenty-eight drachmas."

APPENDIX.

NOTE A. Page 37.

Senatorii ordinis.—“The senate was instituted by Romulus, to be the perpetual council of the republic. Its meetings, which could not be held but in a temple, that is, in a place consecrated by the augurs, that thus their deliberations might be rendered more solemn, took place on the kalends, nones, and ides of every month, unless when the comitiae were held. It was assembled at first by the kings; after the expulsion of Tarquin, usually by the consuls, and in their absence by the praetors; also by the dictator, master of horse, decemviri, military tribunes, interrex, prefect of the city, and by the tribunes of the commons. The power of the senate was different at different times. In all weighty affairs, the method usually observed was, that the senate should first deliberate and decree, and then the people order. But there were many things of great importance, which the senate always determined itself:—1. The senate assumed to themselves the guardianship of the public religion; so that no god could be introduced, nor altar erected, nor the sibylline books consulted, without their order. 2. The senate had the direction of the treasury, and distributed the public money at pleasure. They appointed stipends to their generals and officers, and provisions and clothing to their armies. 3. They settled the provinces, which were annually assigned to the consuls and praetors, and when it seemed fit, they prolonged their command. 4. They nominated out of their body all ambassadors sent from Rome, and gave to foreign ambassadors what answers they thought proper. 5. They decreed all public thanksgivings for victories obtained; and conferred the honour of an ovation or triumph, with the title of imperator, on their victorious generals. 6. They could decree the title of king to any prince whom they pleased, and declare any one an enemy by a vote. 7. They inquired into public crimes or treasons, either in Rome or the other parts of Italy, and heard and determined all disputes among the allied and dependent cities. 8. They exercised a power, not only of interpreting the laws, but of absolving men from the obligation of them, and even of abrogating them. 9. They could postpone the assemblies of the people, and prescribe a change of habit to the city in cases of any imminent danger or calamity.

But the power of the senate was chiefly conspicuous in civil dissensions or dangerous tumults within the city, in which that solemn decree used to be passed, “ ~~Tot~~ the consuls should take measures that the republic should not sustain any injury.” By which decree an absolute power was granted to the consuls, to punish and put to death whom they pleased without a trial; to raise forces, and carry on war, without the order of the people. This decree was called ULTIMUM OR EXTREMUM, and “ forma SCTI ultimae necessitatis.”

The magistrate who was to hold the senate, offered a sacrifice, and took the auspices, before he entered the senate-house. If the auspices were not favourable, or not rightly taken, the business was deferred to another day.

Augustus ordered that each senator, before he took his seat, should pay his devotions, with an offering of frankincense and wine, at the altar of that god in whose temple the senate were assembled, that thus they might discharge their duty the more religiously.

When a full house was assembled, the magistrate presiding, whether consul or praetor, &c. laid the business before them in a set form; QUOD BONUM, FAUSTUM, FELIX, FORTUNATUM SIT, REFERIMUS AD VOS, PATRES CONSCRIPTI. Then the senators were asked their opinion in this form: DIC, SP. POSTHUMI, QUID CENSES? or QUID FIERI PLACET? QUID TIBI VIDETUR?

In asking the opinions of the senators, the same order was not always observed; but usually the princeps senatus was first desired to deliver his opinion, unless where there were consuls elect, who were always asked first, and then the rest of the senators according to their dignity, consulares, praetorii, aedilicii, tribunitii, et quaestorii.

A decree of the senate was made by a separation of the senators to different parts of the house. He who presided said, “ Let those who are of such an opinion pass over to that side; those who think differently, to this. Hence ire pedibus in sententiam alicujus, to agree to any one’s opinion; and discedere v. transire in alia omnia, for contrarium sentire.

When a decree of the senate was made, without any opinions being asked or given, the fathers were said pedibus ferre sententiam; and the decree was called SENATUS CONSULTUM PER DISCUSSIONEM. But when the opinions of the senators were asked, it was simply called SENATUS CONSULTUM, although it was then also made per discessione; and if the senate was unanimous, the discessio was said to be made sine ulla varietate. If the contrary, in magna varietate sententiarium.

If any person interceded, the sentence of the senate was called SENATUS AUCTORITAS, their judgment or opinion, and not senatus consultum or decretum, their command. So likewise it was named, if the senate was held at an improper time or place, or if all the formalities were not observed.

After every thing was finished, the magistrates presiding dismissed the senate by a set form: NON AMPLIUS VOS MORAMUR P. C.; or, NEMO VOS TENET; NIHIL VOS MORAMUR; CONSUL, CITATIS NOMINIBUS, ET PERACTA DISCESSIONE, MITTIT SENATUM.

The badges of senators were, 1. The Latus clavus or Tunica laticlavia, i. e. a tunic or waistcoat with an oblong broad stripe of purple, like a ribbon, sewed to it on the fore part. It was broad, to distinguish it from that of the equites, who wore a narrow one. 2. Black buskins reaching to the middle of the leg, with the letter C. in silver on the top of the foot. Hence calceos mutare, to become a senator. 3. A particular place at the public spectacles, called ORCHESTRA, next the stage in the theatre, and next the arena in the amphitheatre. This was first granted them by P. Cornelius Scipio the elder, in his consulship, A. U. 558. Hence Orchestra is put for the senate itself.

The age at which one might be chosen a senator is not sufficiently ascertained; it seems probable, however, that it was not below thirty. In the flourishing state of the republic it behoved every senator to have at least eight hundred sestertia, or 800,000 sestertii, (between six and seven thousand pounds sterling), not annually, but for their whole fortune. Augustus raised it to 1200 sestertia, and supplied the deficiency to those who had not that sum.

The number of the senate varied with the times. Under Romulus it consisted of 100. After the Sabines were assumed into the city, another 100 was chosen from them. Tarquinus Priscus added 100 more. This number of 300 continued till the time of Sylla, who increased it, but how many he added is uncertain. In the time of Julius Caesar the number was increased to 900, and after his death to 1000. But Augustus reduced it to 600.

Such as were chosen into the senate by Brutus, after the expulsion of Tarquin the Proud, were called CONSCRIPTI; i. e. persons written or enrolled together with the old senators, who alone were properly styled Patres. Hence the custom of summoning to the senate those who were Patres, and who were Conscripti. Hence, also, the name Patres Conscripti (sc. et) was afterwards usually applied to all the senators. Vide Adam's Roman Antiquities, p. 2. et seqq.

NOTE B. Page 39.

THE Equites constituted the second order of citizens among the Romans. At what particular time they first began to be reckoned a distinct order, is uncertain. They were chosen promiscuously from the patricians and plebeians. Those descended from ancient families were called ILLUSTRES, SPECIOSI, and SPLENDIDI. They were not limited to any fixed number. The age requisite was about eighteen years, and the fortune, at least towards the end of the republic, and under the emperors, was 400 sestertia, that is, about L.3229 of our money.

The badges of equites were, 1. A horse given them by the public; hence called LEGITIMUS; 2. A golden ring, whence ANNULO AUREO DONARI, to become a knight; 3. Angustus clavus, or tunica angusticlavia; 4. A separate place at the public spectacles, in 14 rows, next to the orchestra, where the senators sat; whence SEDERE IN QUATUORDECIM or IN EQUESTRIBUS, or SPECTARE IN EQUITE, to be a knight.

The office of the equites at first was only to serve in the army; but afterwards also to act as judges or jurymen, and to farm the public revenues.

Every fifth year the equites rode up to the censor seated in his curule chair, before the Capitol, and, dismounting, led along their horses in their hands before him; and in this manner they were reviewed.

If any eques was corrupt in his morals, or had diminished his fortune, or even had not taken proper care of his horse, the censor ordered him to sell his horse; and thus he was reckoned to be removed from the equestrian order: hence ADMERE EQUUM, to degrade an eques: but those whom the censor approved, were ordered to lead along their horses.

The eques whose name was first marked in the censor's books, was called EQUESTRIS ORDINIS PRINCEPS, or PRINCEPS JUVENTUTIS. Vide Adam's Roman Antiquities, p. 20—23.

NOTE 1. Page 60.

An assembly of the whole Roman people to give their vote about any thing, was called Comitia. There were three kinds of comitia: —the Curiata, instituted by Romulus; the Centuriata, by Servius Tullius; and the Tributa, introduced by the tribunes of the people, A. U. 263. In the Comitia Curiata, the people gave their votes, divided into thirty curiae, and what a majority of them determined was said to be the order of the people. They were held in a part of the Forum called the Comitium. Those citizens only had a right to vote at them who lived in the city, and were included in some curia or parish. After the institution of the Comitia Centuriata and Tributa they were more rarely assembled, and that only for passing certain laws relative to religion or testaments, and the conferring of military command on magistrates.

The principal Comitia were the Centuriata, in which the people gave their votes divided into the centuries of their classes. These Comitia were held according to the census instituted by Servius Tullius. According to the valuation of their estates, he divided all the citizens into six classes, and each class into a certain number of centuries. The first class consisted of those whose estates in lands and effects were worth at least 100,000 asses, or pounds of brass, and was subdivided into 80 centuries—40 of young men, and 40 of old; to these were added 18 of equites: in all, 98 centuries. The second class consisted of 20 centuries—10 of young men and 10 of old, whose estates were worth at least 75,000 asses: to these were added two centuries of artificers. The third class was also divided into 20 centuries; their estate was 50,000 asses. The fourth class likewise contained 20 centuries; their estate was 25,000 asses. The fifth class was divided into 30 centuries; their estate was 11,000 asses. The sixth comprehended all those who either had no estates, or were not worth so much as those of the fifth class: though more numerous than any of the other classes, they were reckoned but as one century.

By this arrangement the chief power was vested in the richest citizens, who composed the first class, which, although least in number, consisted of more centuries than all the rest put together: but they likewise bore the charges of peace and war in proportion; for as the votes at the Comitia, so likewise the quota of soldiers and taxes, depended on the number of centuries.

In the Comitia Centuriata magistrates were elected, laws enacted, and state criminals tried. They were always held without the city, usually in the Campus Martius. It behoved them to be summoned at least seventeen days (trinundinum or trinum nundinum) before they were held, that the people might have time to weigh with themselves what they should determine at the Comitia.

Those who sought preferments were called CANDIDATI, from a white robe worn by them in testimony of the purity of their motives. In the latter ages of the republic no one could stand candidate who was not present, and did not declare himself before the Comitia were summoned.

Before the time of election, the candidates endeavoured to gain the favour of the people by every popular art; on which account they commonly had along with them a monitor or nomenclator, to whisper in their ear the names of those of whose votes they were desirous. They had likewise persons to divide money among the people.

It was determined by lot in what order the centuries should vote: that which voted first was called the centuria praerogativa; those which followed next were called primo vocatae; the rest, jure vocatae.

The centuries being called by a herald in their order, moved from the place where they stood into an inclosure surrounded with boards, and near the tribunal of the consul. There was a narrow passage to it raised from the ground, called RONS or PONTICULUS, by which each century went up one after another. Hence old men at sixty were said DE PONTE DEJICI; and were called DEPONTANI, because after that age they were exempted from public business.

At the entrance of the pons each citizen received from certain officers, called DIREBITORES, or distributores, ballots, on which, if magistrates were to be created, were inscribed the names of the candidates; and they seem to have received as many tablets as there were candidates.

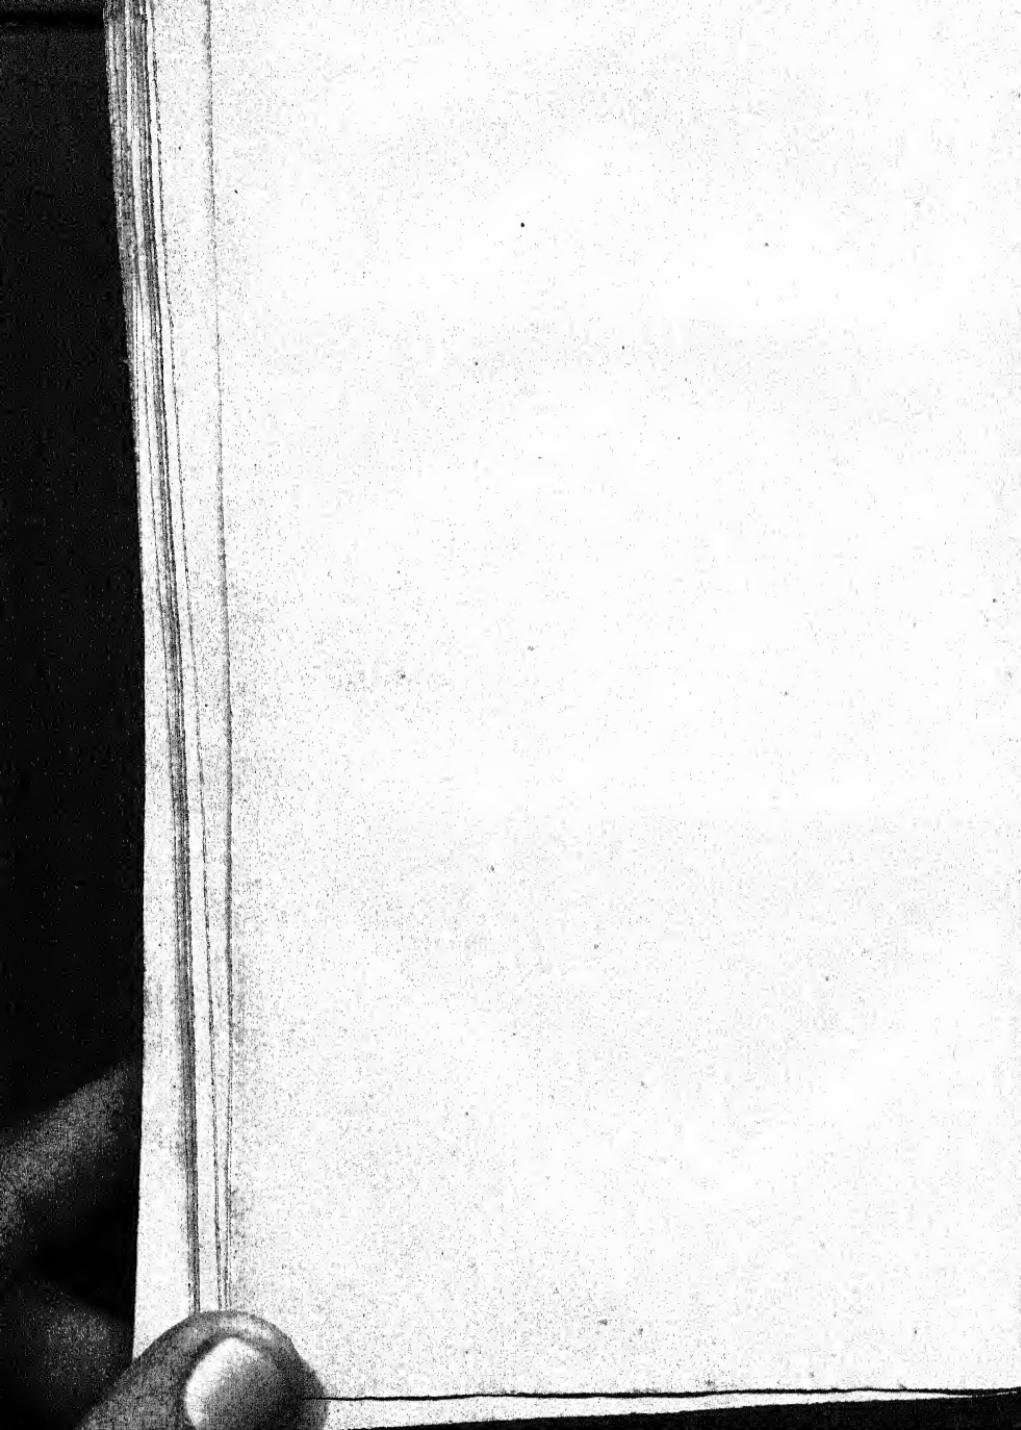

If a law was to be passed, or any thing to be ordered, as in a trial, or in declaring war, &c. they received two tablets; on the one were the letters U. R. i. e. UTI ROGAS, I am for the law; and on the other, A. for ANTIQUO, I like the old way, I am against the law.

Of these tablets every one threw which he pleased into a chest, which was pointed out to them by the ROGATORES, who asked for the ballots. Then certain persons called CUSTODES, who observed that no fraud should be committed in casting lots and voting, took out the ballots, and counted the votes by points marked on a tablet;

whence omne punctum ferre, to gain every vote; and what pleased the majority was declared by a herald to be the vote of that century. Thus all the centuries were called one after another, till a majority of centuries agreed in the same opinion; and what they judged was held to be ratified.

If the points of any century were equal, its vote was reckoned as nothing, except in trials, where the century which had not condemned was supposed to have acquitted. The candidate who had most votes was immediately called by the magistrate who presided; and after a solemn prayer, and taking an oath, was declared to be elected.

In the Comitia Tributa the people voted divided into tribes according to their regions or wards. At first the number of tribes was three; it was afterwards increased, on account of the addition of new citizens, at different times to thirty-five; which number continued to the end of the Republic. In these assemblies were created all the inferior city magistrates, all the provincial magistrates, also commissioners for settling colonies, &c. the pontifex maximus, and, after the year 650, the other pontifices, augures, feciales, &c.; laws, called plebiscita, were made about various things, as about making peace, about granting the freedom of the city, about ordering a triumph, about absolving from the laws; and trials about the imposing of fines. All those might vote at the Comitia Tributa who had the full right of Roman citizens, whether they dwelt at Rome or not; and the votes of all were of equal force. Vide Adam's Roman Antiquities, p. 65—84.

EXAMINATION QUESTIONS.

CONSPIRACY OF CATILINE.

1. What nouns have es, is, or ets, in the accusative plural? Which of these terminations seems to have been most commonly employed?
2. What is the difference between homo and vir? How are they respectively used? How is homo used when it signifies a "female"?
3. What peculiarity is observable in the writings of Sallust with regard to the substantive verb?
4. What is the difference between alter and alius? When is the plural alteri used? What numerical meaning does it sometimes bear?
5. State the difference of meaning between memoriam nostri and memoriam nostram.
6. Who was Cyrus (the elder)? To what is the Persian form of the name thought to have a close resemblance? Why does Sallust begin with his reign?
7. To what idiom is the usage of the verb habeo with the reciprocal pronoun analogous? Give an example.
8. How is alius with one of its own cases, or an adverb derived from it, frequently used?
9. What virtue is opposed to lubido? What to superbia?
10. To what was the term absurdum originally applied? to what subsequently?
11. To what is pudor opposed by Sallust? to what, avaritia? to what, largitio?
12. From what passage do we learn that the history of Catiline's Conspiracy was the first literary production of Sallust?
13. Who was Catiline? what do we know of his father and grandfather? what, of his great-grandfather? To whom does Virgil trace the Sergian house? What do we know of the history of Catiline's life previous to the period of his conspiracy?

14. To what is the epithet pravus originally applied? to what, figuratively?
15. What does the term ingenium denote? what authorities are adduced to prove that it denotes the moral qualities of the soul? State Crombie's observation with regard to its meaning.
16. Into how many stages was human life divided by the Romans? What period did each comprise?
17. How is the verbal adjective distinguished from the participle? Give examples.
18. Distinguish simulare and dissimulare.
19. What distinction does Pliny point out between loquentia and eloquentia?
20. Who was Sylla? under whom did he first serve? whence originated his quarrel with Marius? How did he act on gaining the ascendancy? Of what did he die? when? By what was his death hastened?
21. What inference may we fairly draw from the passage "sicuti ego accepi," &c. chap. 6.?
22. What is Niebuhr's opinion respecting the settlement of the Trojans in Italy?
23. What name was given by the Romans to the primitive inhabitants of Italy? what was the old and genuine name? from what root does the term seem to have sprung? What were the Casci?
24. Explain the figure zeugma.
25. For what is the infinitive frequently substituted? what do grammarians term it when thus used? how is this construction usually explained?
26. What is the distinction, according to Bentley, between percurre and percutere?
27. How does Cato distinguish between festinare and properare?
28. What explanation of the term Patres is given by Sallust? what, by Festus?
29. What explanation does Scheller give of the construction conservandae libertatis fuerat?
30. In what sense did the Romans always use the term dominus? Who refused the title on this account?
31. Was the term imperium, in its stricter acceptation, equally applicable to the consulship at all times?
32. Repeat the law given by Cicero in which he has embodied his definition of the consular power.
33. In what do tempes and tempus frequently differ?

34. At what age did military service commence among the Romans? when did it terminate?

35. How may we account for the Latin forms labor and labos, honor and honos, &c.?

36. What does the term fucinus denote? When is it to be understood in a vituperative sense?

37. What are the different meanings of supplicium? What is Scheller's explanation of the term?

38. Why does Sallust use the expression "ubi pax evenerat," and not "in pace"?

39. To what kings does he allude in the expression "reges magni"?

40. What was Carthago? by whom was it built? for what was it famous? whence, the origin of the name? what, its meaning?

41. What kind of noun is venenum? what does it properly signify? what may it hence indicate? how are the purest Latin writers accustomed to use it, when standing alone?

42. Of what character were the first acts of Sylla, upon his attaining to the unlimited controul of the state?

43. Distinguish amoenus and voluptarius; potare and libere.

44. What is delubrum, properly speaking? how many delubra were there in the Capitol? what was it called?

45. What does temperare with the dative signify? what, with the accusative?

46. What were the Piscinae? if instead of constructa we read constrata, to what is reference then made? to what, if we read contracta?

47. Distinguish facinus, flagitium, and scelus.

48. To what do par and similis respectively refer? What illustration does Hill give of the difference between the two terms?

49. What does obnoxius properly denote?

50. Is it ascertained to whom allusion is made in the expression "cum virginē nobili"? Why did the historians of those times suppress the name?

51. Who was the vestal virgin of whom mention is made in the 15th chapter? What was the result of her trial? Whose kinswoman was she? By whom were the vestal virgins introduced at Rome? How many were there of them originally? By whom was the number increased? What continued to be the number ever after? Of what had they charge? Under what obligation were they laid? What was the punishment of their dishonour?

52. Give the remark of Isidorus on fas and jus.

53. Who was Aurelia Orestilla?

54. State the distinction between nubere and ducere: How is the ellipsis to be supplied in the case of the former verb? in the latter? Between what Greek verbs does the same distinction hold?

55. Where does Cicero allude to the fact that Catiline murdered his own son? What more explicit account is given by Valerius Maximus?

56. What is the difference between facies and vultus?

57. How did Sylla reward his followers, after the final success of his arms? What became of this ill-gotten wealth?

58. Where was Cn. Pompey waging the war that is alluded to at the close of the 16th chapter?

59. By virtue of what law did he hold that important command?

60. In what respects did the Roman calendar agree with our own? Did they reckon as we do? What were the three points from which their days were counted? Whence, and why, were the calends so called? Why was the number of days between the calends and the nones mentioned? On what day of the month did the nones fall? Why were they so called? On what day were the ides? Whence were they so named? How did the Romans reckon from these three points? What circumstance is to be observed with regard to their computation of time? Give an example.

61. What is the primitive meaning of necessitudo? What, its more common signification?

62. Of what house was P. Lentulus Sura? how did he die? whence did he receive the surname of Sura?

63. Who was P. Autronius?—L. Cassius Longinus?—C. Cethagus?—P. Sulla?—Servius Sulla?—L. Vargunteius?—Q. Annius?—M. Porcius Laeca?—L. Bestia?—Q. Curius?—M. Fulvius Nobilior?—L. Statilius?—P. Gabinius Capito?—C. Cornelius?

64. What punishment was inflicted on Autronius, Cassius, Laeca, Vargunteius, Servius Sulla, and Caius Cornelius? What was the fate of Cethagus, Statilius, and Gabinius?

65. What was a colony? What were the municipia? what, the different kinds of municipia? Whence is the appellation derived?

66. Who was Crassus? for what was he remarkable? how and when did he perish?

67. Who were L. Tullus and M. Lepidus?

68. What were the laws against bribery?

69. In dare poenas, sumere poenas, and similar phrases, what is the proper meaning of the noun poena? Mention the corresponding Greek forms.

70. What is repetundarum? what is joined to it in the genitive? —in the ablative? Why was the action so termed? Why is the English word extortion not sufficiently comprehensive as a translation of the term?

71. What were the legitimi dies, according to Cortius? according to Ernesti? When were candidates for the consulship compelled by law to give in their names? From what were they required at the same time to be free? Why?

72. On what day did the senate always meet of course in the Capitol? for what purpose?

73. Describe the fasces. What alteration was made on them by Valerius Poplicola? Did the consuls continue to retain the right of scourging? Within what limits was the operation of these laws confined?

74. How was Spain divided by the Romans? what was Hispania Citerior afterwards called? how far did it extend? Into what provinces was Hispania Ulterior subdivided? what parts did Boetica comprise? to what did Lusitania correspond?

75. Whence does the use of quod before many conjunctions, merely as a copulative, seem to have originated?

76. Of what did the Quaestors take charge? whence was their name derived? what was the principal charge of the city quaestors? what, the office of the provincial quaestors? What were the Praetors?

77. Why is the subjunctive preferable to the indicative in such expressions as sunt qui ita dicant? Give an illustration of your meaning.

78. What change, according to Scheller, did the ancients make on the form of the preposition when in composition? what does he consider the more accurate practice?

79. How do some critics distinguish universi and cuncti?

80. What explanation does Heusinger give of aedes? what did it, from this, come naturally to denote? What erroneous remark does Noltenius make respecting it? what does it signify in the plural?

81. How does Noltenius define arbiter? what is the most probable opinion as to its derivation? What does testis mean?

82. When are pronominal nominatives expressed in Latin?

83. What did Tetrarcha originally signify? what did it afterwards come to denote?

84. What was the distinction, strictly speaking, between the stipendiarii or tributarii and the vectigales?
85. Distinguish gens and populus.
86. To what kind of work is the term torecumata confined?
87. What were the ordinary writing materials of the Romans? Of what form was their stylus? How did they correct or erase what had been written? What then is meant by novae tabulae?
88. Who first introduced the method of proscription? And how?
89. To what countries of Africa did Mauretania correspond? How was it bounded?
90. What circumstances are mentioned respecting P. Sittius Numerinus? What account does Cicero give of him?
91. Who was C. Antonius?
92. Of what horrid banquet did Catiline and the conspirators partake?
93. What magistrates were charged with the inspection of public morals? How often did a general review of the whole Roman people take place? In what manner was a delinquent expelled from the senate?
94. In what sense are the verbs polliceri and promittere employed?
95. At what age did Cicero obtain the Quaestorship?—the Aedileship?—the Praetorship?—the Consulship? Of what does he inform us with regard to these appointments?
96. Who were called homines novi among the Romans?
97. What does the adjective mutuus imply in the phrase "sumere pecuniam mutuam"? What, the verb commodare, when it signifies "to lend"?
98. Where was Faesulae? What is its modern name?
99. What does servitium mean, in the singular? What, in the plural?
100. Who was Sempronia? Whom did she marry?
101. In what esteem were dancing and music held in the earlier period of the Roman republic? After the adoption of Grecian customs and habits? In the corrupt ages of the empire? What species of dancing did the Romans censure?
102. Distinguish facetiae and lepos.
103. Why did Cicero yield the province of Macedonia to Antonius? How long did he hold the government of it? What befel him on his return to Rome?
104. To whom, according to the common account, did the institution of patronage and clientship owe its origin? How did that monarch connect the patricians and plebeians? What duties were incumbent on the patron? Under what obligation was the client laid? What seems to be a more correct account of the origin of this relation between the two orders?

105. Where was Camerinium? by whom was it founded?
106. Where lay "the district of Picenum"? what is its modern name?

107. Where was Apulia? what part of it was called Daunia? what is its modern name?

108. Whence is the expression cum telo esse adopted? What weapon did the Romans use on any sudden provocation? what Italian word derives its origin hence?

109. What does intempesta noctis properly denote?
110. What were the terms of the decree by which the republic was said to be intrusted to the consuls? what was it called?

111. What does imperium denote, as opposed to magistratus or potestas? What is the distinction between potestas and potentia?

112. What is the difference of meaning between legere and recitare?

113. To what is the phrase "Ante diem sextum kalendas Novembris" equivalent? By what is diem governed according to Ernesti? How does Zumpt account for the origin of these apparently anomalous phrases?

114. Where was Capua? why was it severely punished by the Romans? by whom was it afterwards colonized? what was its state under the emperors? what, its ultimate fate?

115. Who was Q. Metellus Creticus? whence his cognomen of Creticus? Is Florus correct in stating that Metellus obtained no other recompense for his successes than the mere honour of a cognomen?

116. Were generals who claimed a triumph, allowed to enter the city? what penalty did they incur by the violation of this rule? why? how was the law on this point evaded?

117. From what does Priscian derive the term calumnia? what then is its original meaning?

118. How many, and what families, were there at Rome descended from the Pompeian house?

119. Of what house was Q. Metellus Celer a member? on what account was the cognomen of Celer given him?

120. How many sesterii made a sestertium? what was the sestertius? by what letters was it marked? how were these sometimes abbreviated ? Of what metal was the oldest Roman money ? What was an as, as a coin, originally ? how was its weight diminished, after silver began to be coined ? to how many asses was the denarius originally equal ? to how many the sestertius ? what change took place in the value of the denarius and sestertius, when the as was reduced to one-twelfth of a pound ? what was the weight of the denarius ?

121. How, and by whom, were gladiators kept and maintained ? what was the whole number under one Lanista called ? of whom were they at first composed ? of whom, in the days of the emperors ?

122. Who were magistratus majores ? who magistratus minores ?

123. What was the Plautian law ? by whom, and in what year, was it proposed ? what did it ordain ?

124. Distinguish adsidere and adsidere.

125. Whom did inquilinus civis properly denote ? on what ground did Catiline apply the term to Cicero ? Whence does it appear that the narrative of Sallust is here erroneous ? by whom has his error been copied ?

126. What is the more usual orthography of prope diem ? On what does the accusative depend ? to what case is prope not unfrequently joined ? Give examples.

127. Why was the Papirian law so called ? when was it passed ? what did it ordain ? what does Livy remark of this law ?

128. What occasioned most of the disturbances that interfered with the earlier growth of the Roman state ?

129. What duty was entrusted to the praetors ? what was the province of the praetor urbanus ? what of the praetor peregrinus ?

130. When are the genitives nostri and vestri used ? when must nostrum and vestrum be employed ?

131. When, and by whom, was the Valerian law de quadrante proposed ? what was enacted by the provisions of this law ? what ancient author reprobates it ? what modern author praises it ?

132. How many secessions of the people are recorded in Roman history ? when did they severally occur ? from what causes ? to what places were they made ?

133. What is the difference between mittere and perdere ?

134. Whom does the term optimates denote, in the writings of Cicero ?

135. What was Massilia ? when, and by whom, was it founded ? for what was it famous ?

136. In an epistolary correspondence, if either of the parties was invested with an office, how was it usual to express it? what epithets did they add in addressing an intimate friend? in what terms was the praeloquium sometimes conceived; and frequently written? with what word did the letter end? what was subjoined? what did the date express? did they use any signature or subscription? why was there rarely an inscription on the outside? how was the letter secured? what are the phrases for "to open a letter"? what was it usual for the bearer of the letter to request, before it was opened?

137. How are defensio and satisfactio distinguished?

138. For what purpose does the preposition de appear to be used in the phrase "ex nulla conscientia DE CULPA"? what is Burnouf's opinion respecting it?

139. What account does Festus give of the expression dius fidius? what other explanations does he state? What does the language of Plautus (Asin. l. 1. 8.) warrant us to infer? what follows from this? to what then is me dius fidius equivalent?

140. From what custom among the Romans does nomen come to signify a debt, the cause of a debt, an article of account, &c.?

141. Mention Whiter's etymology of the word haveto.

142. What is the distinction between hostis and inimicus? what Greek terms correspond respectively to each? how do Cicero and Varro explain the original meaning of hostis?

143. How does Ulpian distinguish fraus and poena?

144. What was the manner of holding a dilectus or "levy"?

145. What does sentina properly signify?

146. By whom, and when, was the Lex Cornelia enacted? what was the purport of it? by whom was an application for the repeal of this law defeated? on what ground did he argue against it? by whom was it subsequently abrogated?

147. When have atque and ac the force of quam? when do they serve for ut? how does Hunter explain this idiom?

148. When, and for what purpose, were the tribunes of the commons originally created? under what sanction did they increase their power? by what enactment did Sylla abridge their influence? what right did they regain in the consulship of Cotta? and in that of Pompey and Crassus?

149. In what does clades differ from calamitas?

150. What power had fathers, among the Romans, over their children? what is a father on this account called by Seneca? and by Suetonius? What does Val. Maximus add, with regard to the punishment of Fulvius?

151. Who were the Allobroges? what, and where, was their chief town? its modern name?

152. How does Cortius distinguish between the negociatores and mercatores among the Romans?

153. What difference is there between noscere and scire? Illustrate the difference by examples.

154. What is the meaning of percunctari? what its probable derivation? what kind of reply does it require?

155. What division of Italy was called Gallia Citerior? how was the term citerior applied to it?

156. Of what did Bruttium form a division? what is it now called? whence the ancient name?

157. For what purpose did a proconsul or praetor chuse a legatus? what controul did he exercise, in the absence of the governor of the province? on what occasions was he entrusted with the entire government of the province?

158. In what circumstances do we sometimes find a plural verb after a single subject or person? why?

159. When did the celebration of the Saturnalia commence?

160. Illustrate the construction of convenio by examples.

161. What, and where, was Crotona? by whom, and when, was it founded? for what school was it famous?

162. What account is given of L. Valerius Flaccus? and of C. Pontinius?

163. What is the modern name of the Pons Mulvius? by whom was it built? what Roman road commenced at it?

164. Distinguish gaudere and laetari. Do laetitia and laetari always denote "intemperate joy"? what is the chief distinction between the two verbs?

165. What, and where, was Terracina? what was it also named?

166. Where stood the Temple of Concord? by whom, and on what account, was it erected? what meetings were frequently held in it?

167. Relate the story of the Sibylline books. To whose custody were they entrusted? what were they supposed to contain? how were they destroyed? how did the Quindecimviri repair the loss? where were the new books deposited?

168. What familiae were included under the gens Cornelia?

169. How often was the Capitol destroyed by fire? when, and on what occasions?

170. What were the Haruspices? Whence does Donatus derive the name?

171. What is mentioned respecting P. Lentulus Spinther? on what account does he deserve to be remembered?

172. What were the two kinds of Aediles? when, where, and for what purpose, were the Plebeian Aediles first created? when, and for what purpose the Curule Aediles? from whom were they chosen? what were their insignia and privileges? What had the Plebeian Aediles as a counterbalance for all this? What was the general office of the Aediles?

173. When is the pronoun qui uniformly joined to the subjunctive?

174. In what do possum and queo differ?

175. How did the Romans use the terms libertus and libertinus?

176. To what does vicus, properly speaking, refer? from what is it derived?

177. What is the original signification of familia? whence does it come?

178. Against whom was the form contra rempublicam fecisse always used?

179. When were the consuls chosen after A.U.C. 598? when did they enter on office? what were they styled in the interval? why was the interval made so long?

180. What is the meaning of the phrase "ire pedibus in sententiam alienus"? from what practice did it originate?

181. Where is Rhodes? to whom was it consecrated? for what was it famous?

182. By whom, and when, was the Porcian law proposed? what did it ordain?

183. Who were the Samnites? by what were they distinguished?

184. What insignia of magistracy did the Romans borrow from the Tusci?

185. What modern country corresponds to the country of the Tusci? what is the probable origin of that remarkable people?

186. What was the formal term usually applied to the expression of his opinion on the part of a senator? how was a merely verbal assent to the opinion of any speaker expressed?

187. To what does ara refer, and what does focus denote, in the expression "aris atque focus suis"?

188. Distinguish the phrases faccere verba, habere verba, dare verba.

189. In what do deprehendere and apprehendere differ?

190. What duties were assigned to the Triumviri Capitales?
191. Whence did part of the prison at Rome receive the name of Tullianum? to what purpose is the dungeon now applied?
192. What number of men did the legion contain?—in the time of Polybius? how many cohorts each legion? how many maniples each cohort? how many centuries each maniple? how many maniples and centuries each legion?
193. Repeat Dr Butler's remarks on the preposition versus.
194. What was Pistoria? where was it situate? what is its modern name?
195. What does demens, strictly speaking, denote?
196. Who were the electi, according to Vegetius?—the evocati?
197. What was the chief standard of each Roman legion?
198. To what officer of modern times did the military tribunes nearly correspond? how many were there in each legion?
199. What does the term praefectus denote, when it stands alone? of what rank were the praefecti among the allies?
200. What kind of musical instruments were used in the Roman army? Describe the tuba and the lituus.
201. Why were the light-armed troops styled Ferentarii?
202. What was the Cohors praetoria?
203. Whom did the term ingenuus denote?
204. Distinguish laetitia and gaudium: State the distinctions with which Cicero furnishes us between the opposite class of words—angor, moeror, aerumna, dolor, afflictio, and luctus.

JUGURTHINE WAR.

1. What account is given of pessum by Cortius? by Scheller?
2. Give a slight sketch of the Platonic doctrine respecting the soul.
3. How did candidates for office endeavour to gain the favour of the people? by whom were they accompanied on these occasions?
4. What was the jus imaginum? to whom did it belong? what were these images? where were they kept? Correct Dr Adams' erroneous statement respecting them.
5. Who were called homines novi among the Romans?
6. What were the boundaries of Numidia? what is its modern name?
7. Give an account of Syphax.
8. What, and where, was Numantia? for what was it celebrated? how did it withstand the Romans for so long a time?
9. To what magistrates was the name of Praetor anciently common? what does the term praetorium include in its widest acceptation?
10. What appears to be the essential difference between decipere and fallere?
11. In what order did the Lictors walk before those whom they attended? what was the foremost called? what, the hindmost?
12. State the distinction, laid down by Hill, between agnati and affines.
13. How do spernere and despicere differ?
14. When is ne used after vereor, metuo, and timeo? when, ut? Give examples, and explain the idiom.
15. Whence does the use of quod before many conjunctions, &c. merely as a copulative, appear to have arisen?
16. What distinction does Dumesnil make between subvenire and occurrere?

17. Give an account of Aemilius Scaurus.
18. What was the Agrarian law proposed by Tib. Gracchus? what erroneous opinion has, till of late, prevailed respecting these laws? State Niebuhr's more correct view of the subject.
19. What were the boundaries of Mauretania? by what was it bounded, and to what did it correspond, in the time of Bocchus? what was afterwards added to it? to what does it now correspond?
20. In what light did the ancients regard Calpe and Abila? what Cape was known to Herodotus as the western limit of Libya?
21. What does the word catabathmos signify? to what does Salust apply it? what is it now called by the Arabians? why is it generally denominated magnus?
22. What was Gaetulia? to what is it thought to correspond? whence the origin of the Gaetuli?
23. Whom do the Greek writers commonly mean by the Libyans? In what was Libya, strictly speaking, comprised? to what does it correspond?
24. How was Media bounded? what is it now called? and why?
25. What were the boundaries of Persia? what is it called in Scripture?
26. What were the divisions of Armenia? what, the boundaries of Armenia Major?
27. What was Hippo? why was it called Hippo regius? for whose birth was it famous?
28. What was Hadrumetum? what is its modern name?
29. Where was Leptis Major situate? where, Leptis Minor? what are they now called?
30. What were the boundaries of Cyrenaica? what was its capital? What was the port of Cyrene? by whom was it founded? How did Cyrenaica come into the possession of the Romans? why was it called Pentapolis?
31. Where is the island of Thera? what is it now called? to what cluster of islands does it belong? when did it emerge from the sea, according to Pliny? what name was first given to it?
32. What were the Syrtes? give an account of the Syrtis Minor: why is it still dreaded by mariners? Where is the Syrtis Major situate? what is it called by the natives? and by sailors? whence is the name Syrtis derived.
33. What do we know of Cirta? to what was the name afterwards changed? from what circumstance?

34. Why were the Romans called Togati? the Greeks, Palliatii? and the Gauls, Gens Braccata? Repeat Dr Butler's observation regarding the Celtic term Breac.

35. Describe the military machines called Vineae and Turres.

36. What is the rule, in strict Latinity, respecting the use of the reciprocal pronoun, when a second subject is introduced?

37. What is the distinction between decedo and discedo?

38. What mode did the Romans observe in besieging a place?

39. To which of the senators was the title of princeps senatus given? how long was this dignity retained? what was it called? what title was hence given in after times to the emperor?

40. What was Utica? by whom, and when, was it founded? where was it situate? for what was it famous?

41. In what mood are the past tenses frequently put, in the consequent member of a conditional proposition, although the imperfect or pluperfect subjunctive has been used in the conditional clause? For what purpose?

42. By whom was the Sempronian law proposed? when was it passed? what did it ordain? what was the previous practice?

43. Whence does scribere signify to enlist?

44. What verb appears to have been used as the passive of vendo? what parts of vendo were retained by it?

45. Where were ambassadors admitted to an audience, and entertained during their stay, when the senate did not choose to receive them into the city?

46. Where was Rhegium? what is its modern name? by whom was it founded?

47. Where is the island of Sicily? of what form and extent is it? what was its earlier name? why was it also called Trinacria? by whom was it colonized? when did it come into the possession of the Romans?

48. Where was Vaga situate?

49. What meaning does Gronovius attach to the terms concilium and consilium? of whom does he say the consilium of the Roman generals was composed? of whom, the consilium of the praetors? what is the proper meaning of concilium, according to Stephens? and what, according to Turnebus, does consilium frequently mean? What appears, from these authorities, to be the distinct meaning of the terms?

50. What is the literal meaning of lanx satra? what, its figurative signification?

51. What was the usual beginning of all applications to the people? Explain the phrases rogare magistratus, rogare quaesitores; and the difference between rogatio and lex.

52. State the distinction between ignavia and pigritia.

53. Whence is penes derived, and what does it signify? in what does penes te differ from apud te?

54. Give an account of the Aventine Hill.

55. What power did the veto give to each of the tribunes? might they exercise this power with impunity?

56. What was the relative position of Macedonia? for what was it memorable?

57. What effect have paulum, paulo, paululum, and paululo, before the comparative? what effect, aliquanto?

58. In what respect do vas and praes agree? in what do they differ?

59. Describe the agger or mount that was thrown up before a besieged town?

60. How many men did a turma or troop of horse contain? how was it divided?

61. What was the extent of Liguria? to what modern countries did it correspond? Did the Ligurians confine themselves to this territory?

62. What was the relative situation of Thrace and Macedonia? of what does Thrace now form a part? by what name is it commonly known?

63. How many cohorts were there in a legion? how many maniples in a cohort? how many centuries in a maniple? how many maniples and centuries in a legion? how many centurions in each maniple? by what title were they distinguished? What was the centurion of the first century of the first maniple of the Triarii called? over whom did he preside? of what ensign had he the charge? what privileges did this office confer upon him? who was called the primipilus posterior? who were called prior centurio, and posterior centurio, secundi pili? who, centurio decimi pili prior, and posterior? How were the centurions of the principes, and of the hastati, in like manner designated? What room for promotion was there in the Roman army?

64. Describe the jugum ignominiosum.

65. What was meant by a colony? how were they transplanted? who determined in what manner the lands were to be divided, and to whom? How did the new colony proceed to their destined place? With what view were these colonies planted?

66. What definition does Festus give of the littae? how does Nonius explain the name? from what does Vossius derive the term? to what other class of persons, besides soldiers' servants and sutlers, is it occasionally applied? Repeat the passage of Justin on which this last meaning of the term rests.

67. What allowance of corn was given in addition to his pay to each soldier? to the centurions? and to the cavalry?

68. Distinguish exercitus, acies, and agmen.

69. What were the circumtores? by whom was this at first done? by whom on extraordinary occasions? what was done at last?

70. What are usually meant by supplicia, as emblems of submission? What emblem did petitioners among the Greeks carry?

71. Why were the Velites so called? when were they first instituted? in what position did they fight?

72. Explain the phrases, adverso colle, secundo colle, secundus ventus, secundo flumine, adverso flumine.

73. What did the senate decree after an important victory had been obtained? Describe the Lectisternium that then took place.

74. What was Zama? where situate? for what victory was it famous? what became of it ultimately?

75. What punishments were inflicted on deserters among the Romans, according to Val. Maximus? at whose pleasure were they punished?

76. What was Sicca? why is it often styled Sicca Venerea?

77. When is unus used in the plural?

78. What are the opinions of Glareanus and Barbié du Bocage with respect to Tisidium?

79. What was Arpinum? for whose birth is it famous? what is it now called?

80. On what occasions did the general sit in his chair of state? by whom was he surrounded? Describe the sella curulis: why was it called curule ebur?

81. What were the three general divisions of days among the Romans? Name the four solemnities for the celebration of which the dies festi were set apart. Explain the different denominations of feriae. State the five denominations included in dies profesti, and what was the particular nature of each. Give the root of the term fasti, and the meaning of dies nefasti. Explain the technical expressions, do, dico, addico; dare actionem et judices; dicere jus; addicere bona.

82. What does intestabilis properly signify?

83. State the Roman division of the natural day. How was the night divided?

84. What was enacted by the Porcian law? what by the Sempronian? Was the operation of these laws suspended or not in the Roman camp?

85. To whom did the determination of the consular provinces belong? What interference did the people sometimes exercise?

86. Describe the aries or "battering ram" of the Romans? how was it employed?

87. Whence is the term gnavus derived?

88. Give an account of Sidon.

89. When is a thing said to be frustra? a person?

90. Distinguish lux and lumen.

91. Describe the kasta, vexillum, and phaleræ, given by the Roman commanders to such as had distinguished themselves.

92. What is the meaning of the term histrio? whence its origin?

93. What was the age for military service?

94. Into how many classes did Servius Tullius divide the Roman people? on what principle? with what gradation? Of whom was the sixth class composed? what were they denominated? why? were they ever enlisted as soldiers?

95. Relate the history of Metellus subsequent to his return from Numidia.

96. How many individuals bore the name of Hercules? what does Cicero mention of the Libyan Hercules? how is the fabulous history of this hero to be explained?

97. To what are the expressions "a little" and "little" respectively opposed in English, and how are they rendered in Latin? Of paullum and parum, which is often used for the other?

98. How was the testudo formed? what successful expedient did Josephus employ against it during the siege of Jotapata?

99. Who was L. Cornelius Sisenna? how is he characterized by Cicero? to what portion of the Roman history does the greater part of his work seem to have been devoted? in what did the great defect of his history consist? of what imperfections in his writings does Cicero complain?

100. What is the difference, according to Dumesnil, between passer and quire?

101. Of what form was the agmen quadratum of the Romans?
102. How may the construction post diem quintum quam, &c. be varied? Whence arose the anomalous appearance of such phrases?
103. Whence did the Romans obtain their slingers and archers?
104. Who were the Peligni? from what circumstance do they derive some consideration in history?
105. With what offensive and defensive armour were the Velites equipped?
106. How often did the Roman soldiers take food? of what nature were these meals?
107. What meaning was attached by the Roman writers to the expression Punica fides? what, to Attica fides? Were Graeca fides and Attica fides synonymous? State the true explanation given by Junius.
108. Give an account of the last days of Jugurtha.

FINIS.